RICH MAN HELD AS SMUGGLER

FOES' DRUMFIRE ON DAUGHERTY BRINGSBARRAGE

Reviews Morse Case as Critics Carry On.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—The terrific bombardment to which Attorney General Daugherty has been subjected of late was featured by three noteworthy developments today.

The attorney general's department issued a statement reviewing the Charles W. Morse pardon case, tending to justify his association with it as one of counsel for Morse.

Senator Caraway [Ark.], Democrat, accused the chief of the department of justice of spending the taxpayers' money in shadowing congressmen who were questioning his fitness for his post in the cabinet, instead of spending it in the prosecution of war contract crooks.

Speaker Gillette, in the house, successfully balked efforts of Representative Johnson [S. D.] to bring about a vote on his resolution ordering an investigation of the attorney general's conduct in the fraud cases.

Record of Morse Case.

The statement issued by the department of justice is made up from the record of the case which indicates that Morse was pardoned upon recommendations of reputable physicians and army surgeons, and that many members of the house and senate, Democrats and Republicans, were among the thousands of petitioners for Morse's release from the Atlanta penitentiary.

"The record, as disclosed in the official files," the statement says, "indicates beyond any question that Mr. Morse was released from confinement in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., upon reports of reputable physicians and United States army surgeons showing him to be suffering from a serious illness.

"The release came as the culmination of probably the most remarkable public demonstrations on behalf of any federal prisoner ever convicted in the courts of the United States.

Thousands of Petitions.

"Thousands of persons had petitioned the government for the pardon of Mr. Morse before action was finally taken resulting in his release on Jan. 18, 1912, upon the medical reports of his physical condition.

"Among the thousands were men of national reputation, many of them occupying positions of responsibility and trust under the government itself. Despite the high character of those who thus disclosed their sympathy for Mr. Morse, it was not in response to any public demonstration, strong as that was at the time, that Mr. Morse was released, but solely upon the reports of the medical examiners.

"Chief among these were the distinguished officers of the medical corps of the United States army, comprising an army medical board, who found that Mr. Morse was suffering from chronic valvular disease of the heart, chronic nephritis, commonly known as Bright's disease, and slight arteriosclerosis.

These Called It "Incurable" in 1911.

"The officers constituting this board were Col. H. P. Birmingham, president; Maj. P. C. Fauntleroy, and Maj. F. F. Russell, recorder. This board, under date of Dec. 30, 1911, expressed the opinion that while Mr. Morse was not in any immediate danger of death, the complication of diseases from which he was suffering was incurable and that on account of the psychic element in his case an improvement under existing conditions could not be hoped for.

"So much misinformation has recently been made public with respect to the Morse case that it will be perhaps of some public interest to have at this time a brief résume of the various proceedings in this case as disclosed in the official files. A report of James A. Finch, who at that time was, and who still is, pardon attorney of the department of justice, made to the attorney general on Feb. 20, 1911, states:

"'An overwhelming number of petitions and papers have been filed in this case.'

More Talk of Petitions.

"Probably 20 per cent of the petitions, the report shows, asked for an investigation of the case, and, if the man had not had full justice, that a pardon be issued. Mr. Finch's letter states, it is claimed, that the petitions in Mr. Morse's case were signed by 70,000 persons, among them 429 state senators, 823 governors, mayors and public officials; 1,675 judges and lawyers, 1,361 bankers, 865 newspaper men, 876 clergymen and physicians, and a large number of manufacturers, merchants and business men. The petitions on file are voluminous.

"The records in this case show that

AUDREY MUNSON MAKES EFFORT TO END HER LIFE

Syracuse, N. Y., May 27.—[Special.]—Miss Audrey Munson, once famous artist's model and said to be the possessor of the perfect female form, attempted to commit suicide at her home in Mexico, a northern New York village, tonight. Miss Munson swallowed a powerful poison after receiving a telegram which it is believed may have come from the man she had intended to marry this summer. Her condition is critical.

Miss Munson has been despondent for several days. This afternoon she received a telegram, and her despair became aggravated.

Miss Munson first attracted public attention when she posed for the statuary at the Panama exposition. She was the model for the statue of Evangeline, adorning the home of Longfellow at Cambridge and her form also appears on the Maine memorial and the New York Municipal building.

Miss Munson a few months ago announced she would wed the man who possessed a masculine form as near perfection as her own was femininely perfect.

INK SQUIRTER PREYS ON LONDON WOMEN IN WHITE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, May 27.—[By Tribune wireless.]—An inksquirt fiend is busy in the west end, where she is ruining women's dresses by shooting a thick black fluid on them.

"She is a wizend, little old woman, poorly clad, and with an impudent, malevolent stare in her steely gray eyes," said a girl victim in describing her attacker, whom Scotland Yard is seeking.

The authorities believe the criminal is a man masquerading in women's clothes. Only persons wearing white or light colored dresses have been attacked.

At the Emergency hospital tonight Mr. Abbott's physicians reported that his condition was extremely critical. Intimate associates, among them Charles G. Dawes, were notified this afternoon that there is now little hope for Mr. Abbott's recovery.

SOBS AS HE GIVES SON TO SLEUTHS

Tried to Kill Father After Stealing His Pay Roll.

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 27.—[Special.]—"My son, my son," Henry B. Day, millionaire manufacturer, sat with his head in his hands, moaning.

His son, Chester, 23, had just been taken away by three policemen. The boy had been clubbed while the old man had looked on. And there were handcuffs on him as he went out, half shoved, half jerked.

Early today Raymond Shelton, a messenger for the Henry B. Day company, taking money from the bank to meet a pay roll, was stopped by a young man who sprang on the running board of the auto. He shoved a pistol in Shelton's side and the messenger handed over $600—all he had.

Describes Employer's Son.

He described the robber minutely. Day called in the police. He had the boy describe the man again.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I believe this robber is my son, my son that I have disinherited. He lives now at 727 South Bixel street. I sent him to Australia some time ago. I wanted him to get away from evil companions. They've ruined him. He was a good boy. But—it seems he has come back."

The old man straightened up.

"Go find him," he said.

Chester Day heard somehow that his father had put the detectives on his trail. He came hurriedly to his father's office.

Tries to Murder Father.

He had a gun in his hand. He fired. His father rose from his chair and cried, "Chester."

The gun blazed again. "Chester you wouldn't kill your father?"

Another shot. Detective Sergeant Edward Oker, just returning from the boy's room in Bixel street, swung open the door.

He fired five shots, over young Day's head, saving one bullet to use if he had to. But he didn't need the bullet. Chester dropped his weapon and swung around, arms high in the air.

Oker lowered his revolver and the boy sprang at him. Oker clubbed him over the head with the butt of his gun, while the boy continued to fight.

Sees His Boy Beaten.

Two other detectives, Lloyd and Roberts, entered the room. And while the old man looked on, in sorrow and in agony, the young man was handcuffed, jerked off the floor and thrown roughly into a chair.

"You rob your father and you try to kill him," exclaimed Sergt. Oker.

"Yes, I tried to kill him," the youth replied. "But I didn't rob him. I shot at him because he accused me of it and because he squealed."

They led him out, while the father sat head in hand.

28,000 VOLTS OF DEATH FAIL TO INTEREST GEORGE

When Lieut. George De Mar of the Cottage Grove avenue station responded to a call from the neighborhood of 3033 Shields avenue yesterday on information that a man had been killed there, he found George Corcoran, 3019 Shields avenue, sitting within a few inches of a sputtering electric feed wire.

The wire, carrying 28,000 volts, had broken and fallen in the alley, burning a hole about a foot square in the pavement. Mr. Corcoran was not interested. The warning cries of neighbors fell on unheeding ears. He was not aware of his danger.

The police took him home and had the current shut off.

SEIZE SUSPECT IN LOS ANGELES AS MURPHY AID

Police Accuse Him of Conspiracy.

BULLETIN.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 27.—Robert W. Griffin, 42, asserted by police to have been the last man seen with "Big Tim" Murphy before his arrest, was arrested here late today. Griffin was booked on a charge of criminal syndicalism and bail was set at $5,000. Telegrams were dispatched to Chicago police department to ascertain if Griffin is wanted there. Griffin, who gave his occupation as an engineer, immediately sent a wire to Tom Doyle, a Fifth ward politician in Chicago, requesting instructions. In booking the man the police included this notation: "This man is a gunman from Chicago."

Whether "Tim" Murphy and "Frenchy" Mader are to continue in control of the organization of the Chicago Building Trades council became immediately important yesterday after they had been released from the county jail on writs of habeas corpus.

"I am not going to resign," said Mader when he was reached by telephone at his home.

"I'm not talking to the newspapers; they give me a dirty deal," said Murphy.

These expressions came in the face of a statement from Judge Miller's court, where Miller gave freedom to the two men accused, with Cornelius "Con" Shea, of conspiracy in the terrorist murders, a statement in effect that the two obtained bonds only on condition that they withdraw from the Building Trades council. The bonds were signed by Tom Carey, reputed millionaire brickmaker.

Demanded by Carey, Report.

Carey flatly refused, it is said, to go surety on the $75,000 bonds demanded of each of the labor chiefs by Judge Miller unless Murphy and Mader would promise to give up all official connection with the council and refrain from exercise of any influence over that body.

Speculation as to the probable successor of Mader as president of the trades council immediately arose.

At first blush it appeared that Arthur W. Wallace, business agent of the painters' district council, was most likely to get the office. Wallace, who is 30 years old and single, consistently has been identified with the conservative faction of hs organization.

Murphy, as unofficial strong man of the council is a "menace," Mr. Carey declared, and Mader, as president, is of insufficient caliber to cope with the present precarious situation.

Murphy's surrender came readily. "I'm done with the building trades," he said. "The gas workers are good enough for me. Whatever you say, Mr. Carey, goes with me."

Mader, however, proved a more difficult proposition. He, with his wife by his side in the courtroom, balked at first. Mr. Carey cornered him in a private room for a conference.

Must Quit or Return to Jail.

"Mader has given me his promise to resign and to assist in picking his successor," Carey anounced when the pair emerged. "Now, if he refuses to live up to his promise, or if he lets the council reëlect him president next Friday, I'll surrender him to the sheriff and withdraw as his surety."

A conference between Carey, Murphy and Mader is planned for tomorrow in the offices of the Chicago National Life Insurance company, 202 South State street. The future policies of the labor leaders will be discussed, it is understood.

Mader later intimated that the question of his quitting was one for the council to act on at its meeting next Friday night.

Crowe Aid Objects in Vain.

Mr. Carey asserted he was not befriending the accused leaders for any "mysterious" reason, but solely through personal friendship.

"I've known Murphy since he was a kid and I've known Mader a long time," he said. "It will be better for both of them to get out of the building trades game. A week ago I decided to go their bonds, if they were released and if they would meet my conditions."

Each bond required a property schedule of $150,000. Mr. Carey scheduled a brickyard at $200,000 and his residence at 4427 Grand boulevard at $100,000. Don Volini, bond expert at the state's attorney's office, asserted the property

Girl, 18, His Companion in Long Flight

Trailing a suspected diamond smuggling organization, United States treasury agents yesterday arrested Max Grinter, wealthy liquor dealer, on charges of bringing into this country $50,000 worth of diamonds without paying duty.

Incidentally, Grinter was subjected to a second accusation, of having brought into the United States Miss Margaret Herzog, 18 years old. Grinter and Miss Herzog were arrested in a suite of rooms at 4866 Kenmore avenue.

Physician Arrested.

Grinter stoutly denied both charges. He said he brought Miss Herzog with him because she is his niece. At least, this was his stipulation upon his application for a passport. But it was discovered by Federal Agents H. H. Wood and J. F. O'Neil that the girl recently has been under care of a physician. The physician has been arrested, it was reported from the detective bureau.

According to information at the local branch of the treasury department Grinter fled from Chicago more than a year ago. At that time he was under charges of unlawfully possessing bonded whisky. More than 200 cases of whisky were confiscated from the Chateau Maxim, a roadhouse said to have been owned by him.

Rather than face federal prosecution, Grinter is said to have made his way out of American through Canada. He went to Germany, and later made his residence in Vienna. It was in Vienna that he is said to have found Miss Herzog.

Travel by Auto.

In New York the investigators have discovered Grinter came through the customs office without making a declaration. He is said to have bought an expensive automobile. In this car he and Miss Herzog traveled to Chicago, stopping at various cities on the way. Federal agents are said to have records of their stopping places on the way west.

Grinter is said to have made some admissions. One relates to the diamonds alleged to have been smuggled. Grinter's defense is said to be that he previously owned the stones and presented them to Miss Herzog merely as a gift.

Federal agents are inclined to regard this as evidence that the $50,000 worth of gems concerned in this incident is only a small portion of a great consignment of gems smuggled into New York over a long period. It is on this theory that the agents are proceeding.

Grinter was locked up last night in an outlying police station.

WORLD'S OLDEST MAN IN POLAND, FARMING AT 132

[Copyright: 1922: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, May 27.—Although Poland, in its present form, is among the youngest countries of Europe, the Poles claim among their citizens the oldest man in the world.

John Krasinski, the last survivor of the Napoleonic armies, fought 110 years ago in the battle of Borodino. Aged 22 then, he therefore counts the venerable number of 132 years.

Taken prisoner by the Russians—not in the world war, but during Napoleon's Moscow retreat—Krasinski settled down in Russia and fought in Crimea. Last year his "young wife," as he calls her, died at the age of 98. Having then learned that the Polish government was making grants of land to veterans, Krasinski bethought himself of his original nationality, and as his excellent claim to being a veteran could not well be denied, the old man is today busy tilling land in the province of Posen.

EUROPE TURNS WEDNESDAY TO NORMALCY ROAD

German Debt Reply Will Open Way.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 27.—On next Wednesday Europe will draw a free breath and make a real start toward normalcy in finances and economics for the first time since the war.

On Wednesday morning the reparations commission will have the formal German acceptance in its hands and any French or Belgian military action will thereby be halted. This year's open season for crises will then be closed.

Wednesday afternoon the Morgan committee of bankers, following a four days' adjournment while awaiting German action, will seriously begin to study the prospects for a huge international loan, ostensibly for Germany, but actually for the allies as well. As the German reparations payments are the key to European economics, and as they affect both Germany and the allies, the developments of Wednesday will mark a new era.

Will Balance Budget.

The German government already has accepted the demands of the reparations commission for the balancing of the German budget, the stabilizing of the German floating dept, and the stopping of the issuance of paper money, Dr. Bergmann, Berlin's special representative at Paris, informed the commission today. However, Berlin is haggling over minor points, which, however, were mostly settled today.

The reparations commission's demand, which was later precised by Sir John Bradbury, the British member, was that the German floating debt, meaning existent marks, should be stabilized as of March 31 and issues since then wiped off.

The German government is asking that this date be prolonged one or two months, which is rather a minor point, and also that in the event of unforeseen circumstances, such as a great depreciation of the mark, Germany be allowed to turn the money presses a few times. Germany will be given some satisfaction on this point.

Means Stabilization of Mark.

It is clear that the effect of these arrangements between the commission and Germany will be to stabilize the mark at about its present value until the bankers make known the prospects of the loan, when a slight improvement is possible.

Actually no crisis was possible over the May 31 demands after the bankers had accepted the invitation to meet in Paris. The need both of Germany and of Germany's creditors was too great to permit them to do anything adversely affecting the prospects of the projected loan. In Paris this loan is called an American loan because the United States is expected to buy most of it.

The Morgan committee adjourned its plenary sessions until Germany had accepted the elementary demands of the reparations commission and also to influence Germany to accept them. Until Germany formally agreed to the financial reforms the bankers could do nothing. The reparations commission and the bankers will hold informal conversations until Wednesday, which will be just as important as the formal meetings later.

Only Economic Pressure, If—

If a miracle prevents an agreement with Germany on May 31, Great Britain will probably join France in sanctions against Germany, but these sanctions will be economical rather than occupation of the Ruhr.

England has fully supported France in its demands for German financial reform, but for wholly different reasons. England wants the mark stabilized to lay a firm basis for trade between England and France, while France wants Germany fattened up to pay reparations in the future.

England, therefore, would support France in economic pressure to avoid an invasion of the Ruhr, which would strike at the heart of English prosperity. London is not opposed to the occupation of the Ruhr on general principles, but only because of the coal situation. France has a coal reserve of 34,000,000,000 tons in the Saar, Great Britain has a reserve of 190,000,000,000, and the German reserve is 430,000,000,000 in the Ruhr. By holding the Ruhr France would possess the economic key to Europe.

Why France Will Not Invade.

Premier Poincare, though reputed to be frozen hearted towards Germany, knows better than any one the futility of occupying the Ruhr, and that once the threat is executed most of the French power of coercion will be destroyed.

The most characteristic thing about M. Poincare is that he is one of the greatest lawyers in France—the others are MM. Viviani and Millerand—and that he has never been known to act without a strong, clear cut case. He cannot have a strong case in the end of May situation because the commission will spend more than a week examining the German finances before it reports. When the commission is ready to report the British and Italian delegates could easily oppose the French and Beligan members in deciding that the German decision was a failure.

An official American delegate, being the fifth, would hold the balance of power, but, as now is the case, he is unofficial and merely observes, so does not vote. At the very worst no sanctions could be taken until the middle of June.

Germany Completes Reply.

BERLIN, May 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—The German cabinet has concluded its three days' discussions on the reply to be made to the demands of the reparations commission respecting the May 31 payments. Chancellor Wirth on Monday will inform the reichstag that the German answer is virtually based on the memorandum agreed to at Paris between Finance Minister Hermes and Sir John Bradbury, British member of the commission.

The reply will not contain specific reference to a force majeure reservation, but will permit the allies to assume that Germany will consider herself incapable of carrying out financial and other economic reforms unless she receives an international loan of adequate proportions and on reasonable terms.

German Opposition to Loan.

Opposition is developing in industrial circles here to an international loan for Germany based on the opinion that, while it would for a short time stabilize exchange on marks, the ultimate effect would be to undermine German industry, forcing Germans out of the world markets. Pessimism has apparently gained the upper hand in quarters capable of judging the situation where the attitude toward a loan has lately changed.

Industrialists express the belief that the entente in proposing a loan are concerned not with Germany's well being but merely with their own desire to be freed from German competition in international marts of trade. They say that German industry and trade would lose enormously on pending orders and that new orders could not be thought of.

It is pointed out in these circles that the United States, as the power which would put the loan into effect, forgets that she would be sympathetically affected through a complete collapse of Germany inasmuch as the United States could not for a long time sell products and foodstuffs which otherwise could be exported. These industrialists suggest that slow improvement in depreciated values from the inside by sacrifices in prevailing profits would be the better course, and that this would be in the interests of the whole people economically.

POLICE ON GUARD AT SCHOOL AFTER PARENTS BATTLE

Atlanta, Ga., May 27.—A policeman was acting as watchman of the Inman Park public school today after police had been called out last night to quell a disturbance that took place at a meeting of the school's Parent-Teachers' association.

The disturbance developed after introduction of a resolution expressing sympathy for Miss Nell Gatins, principal, who is ill, and recommending the election of her and of Miss Henrietta Masserling, assistant principal. A sub-resolution was offered charging she had refused to permit the Bible to be read in the school.

BAKER WEDDING DELAYED AGAIN AS BAXTER DIES

Actor Friend of Both Is Dead in New York.

London in June and a reunion of the three: Mary Landon Baker, daughter of the Alfred Landon Bakers, 1130 Lake Shore drive; Allister McCormick, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, 631 Rush street, her fiancé, and Barry Baxter, English actor, who played here this winter at the Garrick theater with Ina Claire in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife."

The tryst will never take place.

Barry Baxter died yesterday morning in New York of pneumonia at the home of a friend, Dr. E. L. Round, 130 West Seventieth street, just a few hours after the arrival of a dispatch from Paris announcing the fifth postponement, this time until September, of the Baker-McCormick nuptials, which were to have taken place at the Fourth Presbyterian church Jan. 2.

England's in Bloom, But——

"I'll meet you in England in June," was the first thing Barry Baxter said to Miss Baker several months ago when he welcomed her back to Chicago after a trip to California, where she had gone to recover from the nervous breakdown which had forced the postponement of the wedding.

"And I'll be expecting you," the girl had replied as she smiled across the luncheon table in the Blackstone hotel dining room and fingered a large corsage of gardenias, the gift of Baxter.

As the young English actor explained the English law regarding the period of time that must elapse between the publishing of the marriage banns and the ceremony, the bride to be, with eyes sparkling, had challenged, half in fun, "There'll be plenty of time for you to get over before the wedding."

Eternity the Time Limit.

The "friend of the family," who had accompanied young Allister McCormick to the pier when he had sailed for England alone, replied that there would be plenty of time. And they made the June tryst.

Then, across the table, the actor told of a "funny fall" he had recently received while playing in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." With the mischief of a boy the 25 year old "juvenile" actor jumped up from the table and limped around Miss Baker's chair, just as he had limped after his fall off an obstruction concealed under the rug in the second act of the play.

The two were together constantly up to two days before Miss Baker left. Baxter had been hoping to get a three day's furlough so that he might accompany the girl and her mother to New York, but he suddenly became ill as the result of the "funny fall," which irritated old war wounds, was rushed to Columbus Memorial hospital, and underwent a serious operation. While he was convalescing he had a nervous relapse from which pneumonia developed.

And So He Went On.

Though still quite ill, he feared the tradition of "letting the show go on without you" and insisted upon returning to New York when his company went. He had been improving and hoped to leave soon for Europe.

Barry Baxter was well known on the musical comedy stage in his native land, and appeared in London two years ago with Laurette Taylor in "One Night in Rome." The English actor first came to America under A. H. Woods' direction and later appeared in New York and Chicago in "Happy-Go-Lucky." It was while playing this engagement that he met Miss Baker who was then engaged to McCormick. The three were seen together frequently that winter. Miss Baker and Mr. Baxter were also noted nearly every morning on the Lincoln park bridle path, for both were fond of riding.

Baxter joined a British transport corps at the beginning of the war, and served some time as an aviator. In 1915 he was invalided out of the service.

Body Goes Home.

Baxter's funeral will be held tomorrow at Campbell funeral church in New York and it is thought the body will be buried in England. It is said that Baxter's father is now very ill in London and that his mother has been an invalid for some time.

Allister McCormick, commenting upon the postponed wedding said yesterday: "We will be married some time in fall."

He insisted that "everything is all right" and that the new arrangement is for the best. Mary is going to England Tuesday, he said, and he will follow her the second week in June.

Miss Baker's father, Alfred Landon Baker, and her sister, Mrs. Robert Curtis, 220 East Walton place, could not be reached last night.

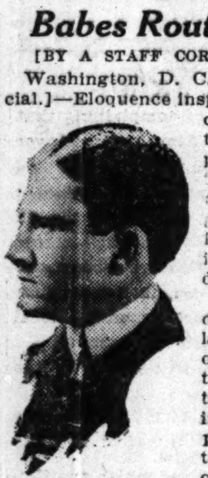
HIGH TARIFF PUT ON SAFETY PINS AROUSES TEXAN

Senator Sees Cry of Babes Rout G. O. P.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]



MORRIS SHEPPARD

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—Eloquence inspired by a 100 per cent increase in the tax on safety pins flowed from the outraged soul of Senator Sheppard [Texas], Democrat, today in the tariff bill debate.

"We now reach one of the superlative iniquities of the Republican tariff bill," said the senator, "an increase of 100 per cent in the tariff tax on the ordinary, common safety pin, the first implement used by human beings as they alight upon this mortal shore, at once the symbol and the guard of infancy, necessary to rich and poor, to humble and to proud, whether in palace or hovel house, the new born glory of a babe.

Arouses Ire of Babes.

"Why, Mr. President, as notice of this characteristic infamy reaches the multitude of fresh arrivals on the Stork Express, the cry with which they greet the light of earth will be deepened in time into a chorus of denunciation before which the Republican party will retire in hopeless and disordered flight.

"More than this, it is proposed in the same paragraph to double the tariff charges on ordinary, common hairpins so essential to every American woman, and on ordinary, common pins which the mothers of the land use with their bonnets and their shawls.

Warns of Aldrich and Paynes' Fate.

"What fatuity possesses these 7,000,000 majority bloated men? Do they not know that once there was an Aldrich and a Payne, who brooked the justice of the almighty to keep their tariff state in Washington, and will they fail to profit by their fate? Mother's bonnet, auntie's shawl, babies' safety pin, laid under tribute to the money barons and the profiteers!

"Angels and ministers of grace, defend us!"

MONGOLIA RED OUTWITTED BY YANK CONSUL

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PEKING, May 27.—An attempt of the Mongolian soviet government to seize American property in Urga was frustrated by American Consul Samuel Sokobin, who brought the title deeds to the American legation in Peking for safe keeping. Mr. Sokobin arrived in Peking today after a trip of 600 miles by motor car across the Gobi desert.

The Mongolian government is nominally independent, but is supported by the soviet army from Moscow and soviet advisers. A mandate was issued a week ago to confiscate foreign property and issued instead thirty year leases. The American consul protested and came to Peking for a conference with Ambassador Jacob Gould Schurman.

This is the first application of soviet methods to foreign owned property in the Orient.

Joy Jabs Erwin When He Gets Flirtatious

"I don't need protection from these mashers," Mrs. Joy Delafield, 817 Cornelia avenue, declared in the Chicago avenue police court yesterday. She had led the chase and had captured singlehanded Erwin Schoepfer, 4014 Shubert avenue, who had annoyed her.

"There are many weak women who do, though," she gave as her reason for appearing against him. Schoepfer was also identified by Mrs. Preston Reed, 3446 Seminary avenue, whom he had annoyed a few minutes before. Judge William L. Morgan gave the youth a $100 fine and costs.

'MEXICO'S LAND LAWS TO MEET 300 YEAR PLEA'

Agrarian Act Is Going Through—Obregon.

BY J. H. CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Mexico City, May 27.—In an interview with a TRIBUNE correspondent today, President Obregon said local agrarian committees which are rapidly reorganized in all states, are including revolutionary laws in their constitutions and are continuing the work of carrying out the agrarian program. The national agrarian commission has also resumed work and has set itself to study all pending agrarian questions in direct development with the agrarian program.

The revolution had not created the agrarian program, he said, which is as old as the Spanish conquest of Mexico and finds origin in an incessant popular desire to possess land.

Answers 300 Year Clamor.

The revolution was simply the interpreter for this desire, expressed frequently throughout the 300 years of Spanish rule in Mexico. Hence, the Mexican government wil carry out, in spite of pressure from home or abroad, an agrarian reform.

Speaking of the charge in American papers that Spanish land owners suffered more than others, President Obregon said the Spanish holdings were many times larger than other nationals, hence the total loss was larger, but relatively it was not so.

Will Aid Factions.

He said that the government is making a careful detailed study of industrial conditions. Personally, he does not believe in excessive protection, but feels factories should be helped to do a successful business under al conditions.

Too great protection is liable to render industries purely local and weaken them until they are unable to protect themselves without tariff aid. The Mexican government is anxious to develop industries to become strong at home in face of competition from abroad, eventually securing a foreign market.

BAR HEAD WARNS AGAINST APATHY IN JUDICIAL VOTE

Peril of City Hall Activity Is Pointed Out.

With the judicial election of June 5 only eight days away and no campaign battle to arouse interest in it, the Chicago Bar association, which led the coalition fight a year ago, sounded a warning yesterday to the voters.

By a coalition agreement between the regular Democratic organization and the Brundage-Crowe-Deneen groups of Republicans, the five sitting Democratic judges whose terms expire have been reslated by their party and Ald. Walter P. Steffen has been put on the Republican ballot for the sixth place that is open, now held by grace of Gov. Len Small's appointment by Judge Harry B. Miller.

They are the only candidates of the two major parties whose names will be printed on the ballot, but the bar association pointed out that in itself this apparent certainty of the outcome may be dangerous because of the apathy which may result.

Five with Excellent Records.

Except on rare occasions, such as last year, when the successful fight was made to reëlect the sitting judges of the Circuit court, the voters pay little attention to judicial elections, and a statement issued by the association through its president, William Tracy Alden, brought out the fact that the voters have the opportunity to stand by five candidates for reëlection with excellent records in the Superior court.

"The sitting judges," said President Alden, "have demonstrated by years of service their qualifications and fitness for the position, and it would be extremely unfortunate if they were not reëlected.

"It seems certain they will be, but for the apathy of the public toward this election."

The Alden appeal further called attention to the importance of the judiciary at all times and its particular importance "with the wave of crime that seems to be sweeping over Chicago."

Eye City Hall Machine.

The political organizations backing the coalition six also have realized the danger discussed by President Alden. For several days a report has been gaining strength that the Lundin-Thompson organization will not be idle on June 5. More definitely, this report is that the city hall forces will attempt to elect Judge Miller to succeed himself by writing his name in, and that they may throw support secretly to some Socialist candidates, the only opposition to the coalitionists on the ballot.

By failing to file the call for their county convention within the time allowed by law, the city hall people missed fire on their plan to renominate Judge Miller. To reseat him would be the primary purpose of writing in his name, but it is said that Fred Lundin sees further possibilities in the situation. The report is that he is particularly anxious to defeat Ald. Steffen, who has been a consistent Brundage supporter and an opponent of Thompsonism in the city council.

Lundin Would Test His Machine.

But still further, the political seers say, Lundin sees a chance to demonstrate what his machine can do in the way of casting votes "on orders" without a campaign in advance, and recognizes an opportunity to put at least a small sized knife between the ribs of the coalition forces which thrashed him so thoroughly a year ago.

Three of the five candidates for reëlection—Judges William E. Dever, Martin M. Gridley, and Charles A. McDonald—have served two terms—that is, they have twelve years of experience on the bench behind them.

Judge Dever had practiced law in Chicago for twenty years before he was elected to the Superior bench in 1910. Prior to that time he had served eight years in the city council as a representative of the Seventeenth ward and had risen to the topmost post of chairman of the finance committee. Judge Gridley was graduated from law school in 1885, and began practice in the office of his father that year. Judge McDonald, who recently completed his term as chief justice of the Criminal court, was admitted to practice in Illinois in 1897.

Sullivan and Sabath Records.

Judge Sabath, who was elected to the Superior bench in 1916, had at that time served several months by appointment to a vacancy by Gov. E. F. Dunne, being elevated from the Municipal court, to which he was elected in 1910. Judge Sullivan, who began to practice law in 1906, was appointed a Superior court master in chancery in 1911, and in the following year he was elected to the Municipal court, where he served until elected to the Superior court in 1916.

So that Judge Sullivan is considered the "junior" of the group, and he has on his record six years as a Superior judge, four years as a Municipal judge, and one year as a master in chancery—a total of eleven years in judicial matters.

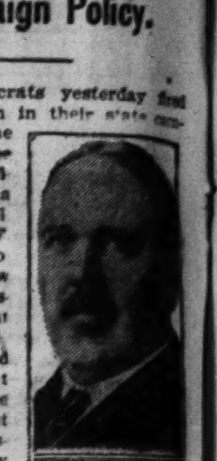
DEMOCRATS OPEN STATE BATTLE; RAP G. O. P. RULE

New Chairman Announces Campaign Policy.



THOMAS F. DONOVAN.

Illinois Democrats yesterday fired the opening gun in their state campaign when the state committee met, elected officers, and issued a declaration of policy. Thomas F. Donovan of Joliet, the new chairman, assailed the present Republican administration and announced that the time is ripe to capture at least seven congressional seats now held by Republicans.

In addition to Mr. Donovan, the committee elected these officers: Vice chairmen, Reed Green of Cairo, James McNabb of Carrollton and Stephen D. Griffin of Chicago; secretary, Isaac B. Craig, Mattoon; assistant secretary, John F. Quinlan, Chicago, and sergeant-at-arms, Jerry J. Kane, East St. Louis.

Donovan Outlines Policy.

Chairman Donovan in announcing the new committee's policy said that not for a generation had the party had such a chance as it has this year.

"We are face to face with political conditions in this state plainly the result of maladministration which affects every citizen," he said. "The administration of public affairs in Illinois during the last two years is a record of deceit, hypocrisy, effrontery, faithlessness to public duty, graft, and dishonesty. Along a tortuous, winding road this trail leads to almost utter debasement.

"The situation which exists in this state is a challenge, a bold, defiant, reckless challenge, to our manhood and womanhood.

"The Democratic party in Illinois either will be required to meet this challenge or confess to its own inefficiency.

Looking to 1924.

"It may be urged that we should wait until the elections of 1924 and then organize our forces with a view to complete victory. We cannot afford to wait. We must start now, and the efforts which we put forth now will serve to demonstrate to the people that we as a party are capable of meeting this issue.

"Last year the judicial department of the government in this city, and in many instances of the state, was wrung from the grasp of those who would lower and debase that great arm of state government. This year, if we are faithful to our obligations, the legislative department of the state will be wrung from the same forces, and two years hence, by the grace of God and the assistance of a patriotic constituency, the executive department of this state can likewise be rescued, and once more Illinois can take her proper place among the states of the union."

DENTAL SERVICE FOR CHILDREN URGED ON CITY

JULIUS ROSENWALD.

Recommendation for Chicago of a community dental service by which the dental needs of the city's 600,000 school children may be met is made in a book issued today by Julius Rosenwald. It contains 121 pages and is from the press of R. H. Donnelley & Sons Co. The book, which advocates what is known as the Rochester plan, adapted to the needs of this city, is the result of a survey of dental needs and facilities in several cities, including Chicago.

Dr. Michael M. Davis Jr. of New York conducted the survey and the resulting tentative plan is intended as a basis for study. The beginning advocated would cost, exclusive of land, about $1,000,000. Tonsil and adenoid work is included in the dental program.

Shocking Conditions Disclosed.

For ten years Mr. Rosenwald has been interested in dental service to school children whose parents are unable to pay for proper care of their teeth. Prior to 1912 shocking mouth conditions disclosed by a local survey and crippling effects upon the children from neglect to remedy them had led to establishment of four dental infirmaries in public schools by benevolent dentists who gave their services as operators.

Mr. Rosenwald in 1912 came to their aid and equipped six additional infirmaries. He assumed the cost of paid operators for all ten and added a supervising dentist. He provided also a fund for supplies and repairs. The service was conducted by the city health department and the public service committee of the Chicago Dental society until the city took all of it over. According to Dr. C. N. Johnson, Nestor of the dental profession in Chicago, Mr. Rosenwald came into the work at the psychological moment to save it, as the individual dentists were no longer able to carry it on.

Among the dentists who influenced Mr. Rosenwald to undertake the school work were Dr. A. D. Black, Dr. C. N. Johnson, Dr. T. W. Brophy, Dr. F. W. Gethro, Dr. Henry H. Schuhmann, Dr. H. C. Newton, and the late Dr. J. P. Smith.

Goal Sought Pretentious.

The plan advocated would include: A central institution of approximately sixty dental chairs; four branches, approximately of thirty chairs each; school clinics for curative work, located in outlying districts and supplementing the branches; dental prophylaxis and instruction in oral hygiene for all school children, to be done in the schools, according to the Rochester plan, by traveling squads of hygienists under centralized dental supervision; the central institution to be under an independent board, but affiliated with medical and dental education and with a general hospital; scientific research into the causes and methods of preventing tooth decay.

Dr. Davis recommends that the central dental institution be affiliated with the dental school of Northwestern university to secure economies, promotion of high professional standards, and encouragement of research.

Modest Beginning Urged.

Since the heavy initial and maintenance expense of a complete program would prevent its establishment as a whole at one time, it is recommended that in the beginning at least the following be sent under way:

A central institution with one branch; arrangements with dental clinics in schools for suitable relationship to the central institution and to the branch, so that in at least a certain part of the city the school clinic element, as well as the institutional element will be represented; provision of prophylactic work for all schools in the area most accessible to the central institution or to the branch, or to both such areas.

A beginning on this scale, Dr. Davis writes, would serve approximately one-fifth of the 600,000 children of school and pre-school age, or 120,000 such children. The central institution and its equipment probably would cost, exclusive of land, $700,000 and the branch probably not more than $300,000.

Dr. Davis' survey has brought out the wide contrasts of different cities in this country in their dental facilities, and has made clear that Chicago is far behind a number of other communities. It would be difficult, according to Dr. Davis, to overemphasize the importance and urgency of Chicago's need.

INDIANA SOCIETY ROMPS ON MAXINKUCKEE'S BANKS

Viewing George Ade's "exhibit." Senator New and ex-Senator Beveridge, be it remembered, recently were primary rivals down Indiana way. This looks real, but Mr. Volstead needn't worry.

Nothing was too good for the returned exiles, and husky cadets from Culver Military academy manned the naval cutters that bore the guests across Lake Maxinkuckee to the frolic grounds.

INDIANA SOCIETY FROLICS AGAIN ON HOOSIER SOIL

'Exiles' Go Back Home for Day of Fun.

Culver, Ind., May 27.—[Special.]—Six hundred pilgrims of the Indiana Society of Chicago held their annual summer outing here today as guests of the Culver Military academy. The banks and waters of old Lake Maxinkuckee never held a gathering of more sprightly notables. Hoosier wit sparkled at its brightest.

The fun began on the special train on the way here. A fashion show was held and the Beau Brummels of the party paraded before Col. George T. Buckingham. An episode in Uncle Bim's life was presented. Hoyt King, as Heaven Eyes, sprung an I. O. U. on Uncle Bim, acted by George M. Seward.

At the lake the visitors were escorted in boats to the fête grounds. A cutter race provided entertainment on the way. Salutes were fired and the cadets turned out in full dress regalia. The Glee club welcomed the visitors and greetings were given by Brig. Gen. L. R. Gignilliat, superintendent of the academy. The officers of the Indiana society were given military and naval grades for the day. John T. McCutcheon was made a corporal. George Ade was a dollar a year man.

Rising Suns Get Recruits.

One of the most amusing ceremonies was the initiation of qualified members of the society into the Rising Suns of the Order of Elisha.

All with bald domes stepped to the front. Those who took the oath and were presented with hair tonic were W. G. Edens, John C. Shaffer, E. M. Holloway, George Hannauer, A. Murray Turner, B. J. Steelman, and John A. Williams.

There were all kinds of contests and side shows. The searching for Cinderella contest resulted in the prize for the smallest foot going to Mrs. H. P. Roberts of Highland Park. There was a ladies' sailing and wading race, swimming races and boxing contests. A circus in the riding hall by the Culver Black Horse troop, baseball game, horseshoe throwing, Toonerville commuters' race, stilt race for ladies, and bill posting contest enlivened the day. There were so many stunts it was hard to get through with the program.

Traverse Avenue of Fame.

An avenue of Indiana fame greeted the visitors as they marched to the mess tent for luncheon. Abe Martin, the Slim Princess, Ben Hur, the Restless Age, and the Old Swimming Hole were there. Walt was on the grounds wheeling Skeezix around to see the sights. There was dancing in the gymnasium with prizes for the most graceful couple. Mr. Ade announced the winners of contests and Wilbur D. Nesbit, as moving picture director for the day, filmed the events.

Gov. McCray had sent his governor's flag for the event and the Hoosiers paraded with these colors and the academy flag. There was a dinner in the main dining hall in the evening at which Col. Buckingham delivered the address for the society and Gen. Gignilliat responded. A salute was fired for Maj. Gen. Bell.

PARIS, May 27.—Mrs. Sidi Wirt Spreckles, widow of John D. Spreckles Jr. of Los Angeles, who gained notoriety last year when sued by Tiffany & Co. for $80,000 due on a $100,000 pearl necklace which she said had been taken by William Barrett, the former husband of Alice Drexel, is seen daily at Longchamps or at various places in Paris with a Japanese admirer.

"I came to Paris," she said today, "to end discussion of my affairs. The jewels never were returned, due to the bungling of detectives. I never expect to see them again and I am sure that Mr. Barrett is in America, where he is helped by powerful interests desiring his seclusion.

"It is not true that Mr. Spreckles Sr. demands that I stay in Europe. He did pay a large lump for my husband's interests to me and he administers the estate for my 5 year old daughter.

NEWEST FLAPPER WEARS THIMBLE TO PROVE WORTH

Flappers in Russian boots; flappers in rolled sox; flappers with bobbed hair; flappers with jade earrings; flappers with bloomers—

Now the newest. She appeared last night, quantities of her, at a dance given by St. Luke's Triangle club of St. Luke's Catholic church in River Forest.

And she wore a thimble on a finger. It's a symbol to the young men that the flapper wearer is a modest lass who can sew, cook, and even enjoy washing dishes.

Leaving his clothing store at Grand and Milwaukee avenues last night in his automobile, Louis Hirsch was stopped at Erie street, near the viaduct, by two men, both armed. Hirsch and another merchant, Harry Scheectal, also in the car, were forced into the back seat. After a ride through the neighborhood the bandits took $120 from Hirsch and $585 from Scheectal. The robbers then drove away with the car.

KING SENDS WASH TO CHINAMAN; SHUTS UP ROYAL LAUNDRY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, May 27.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—King George's dress shirts and collars will go to a Chinese laundry and Queen Mary's lingerie will be sent to a French blanchisserie hereafter following the closing down of the royal laundry at Richmond.

QUEEN MARY.

Royal household economies resulted in the decision of the queen that Buckingham palace's weekly wash will go to public laundries. The closing of the royal wash house put twenty-four employés out of work, but the royal chamberlain promised to find new jobs for them.

Queen Victoria established the royal laundry a half century ago after dissatisfaction over sending out things because numerous articles were stolen.

3,000 DRY LAW CASES AWAITING U. S. COURT TRIAL

Municipal Court Aid Urged Again.

With federal judges complaining that 75 per cent of their time is given over to the trial of liquor violations and twenty-three new booze raids made in the last two days, Prohibition Field Agent Guy W. Ginders yesterday stated that approximately 3,000 alleged violators of the prohibition law are awaiting trial on the dockets of the local federal District court.

These cases in many instances are more than one year old, Ginders added. He made his assertions by way of illustrating the need for the proposed new branch of the Municipal court to handle liquor cases, against which the Chicago council has declared itself.

Eighteen of those arrested in the twenty-three raids of the last two days have pleaded guilty and fines aggregating $8,000 were imposed. This means that the fines averaged about $450.

R. O. Mathews, personal representatime of Prohibition Commissioner Roy O. Haynes, arrived in Chicago from Washington yesterday. He is to spend several days in "conference" with Director Charles A. Gregory and his assistant, Col. L. G. Nutt, "reviewing the work of the Chicago office."

Mother Who Leaves Baby Says She'll Return Soon

A month old baby was abandoned in the vestibule of Mrs. C. E. Sawyer's home at 121 West Chestnut street last night. Mrs. Sawyer heard the baby crying and took care of her until the police arrived. On the clean blue and white blanket in which the infant was wrapped was pinned this note:

"If you find this baby please take her to St. Vincent's home, 721 North La Salle street. I will call in six months and pay for upkeep.

"MRS. STRAE, Milwaukee."

The infant was taken to the orphanage.

Five Killed, 20 Injured, by Explosion of Boiler

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, May 27.—Five were killed and more than twenty injured when a sawmill boiler exploded here. The property loss was 1,000,000 pesos (roughly $966,000). A part of the boiler, weighing a ton, was hurled into the air, and fell on a dwelling a block away, killing a woman.

TOMAN AROUSED BY ETTELSON'S RULING ON ORDER

War was declared by Ald. John Toman on the city law department yesterday after Corporation Counsel Ettelson had ruled that Chief of Police Fitzmorris is not "bound to obey" a recent order of the city council. This order, passed unanimously, would require proprietors of street carnivals, Ferris wheels, merry go rounds, and similar amusements to obtain the written consents of the aldermen of the ward in which the amusements are to be located before permits are issued by the police department.

Ald. Toman began his fight on the carnivals after a noisy amusement of that character had begun operation within a block of his house. Neighbors complined about the noise, declaring the carnival to be a nuisance, and the alderman endeavored to have the permits revoked, but failed.

"This opinion simply means that the corporation counsel's office thinks it is bigger than the city council," Ald. Toman said. "If the executive officers insist on following this opinion I will lay the matter before the council again and ask for an ordinance embodying the regulations laid down in the order."

'PRINCESS' TRIES TO KILL JUDGE TO ATTRACT WORLD

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—Drawing a revolver from a handbag and taking careful aim at Judge Veillon, who was reading a verdict in a lawsuit of the city of Geneva against her, a woman known as Mme. Allain was about to pull the trigger when her lawyer and court guards overpowered her.

Mme. Allain, 60, is the proprietor of a block of buildings here. Speaking in French but with an English accent, she told the court she really was Princess Maud Victoria of Saxe-Coburg; that she was related to the late Queen Victoria and possessed a fortune of £30,000,000. She declared that she wanted to kill the judge in order to "attract attention to her situation."

The judge ordered an expert to examine into the mental condition of the woman.

ACQUIT MINER OF TREASON CHARGE IN WEST VIRGINIA

Five Weeks' Trial Echo of Logan County War.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 27.—[By the Association Press.]—William Blizzard, charged with treason in connection with the armed march of miners on Logan county last fall, was found not guilty by a jury here tonight.

William Blizzard, 28, former miner, is president of sub-district 2 of District 17, United Mine Workers. He was indicted with fifty-two other men, mainly union officials and members or sympathizers of the miners' union, on the charge of treason against the state of West Virginia as a result of last summer's disturbances in southern West Virginia variously referred to as the "armed march," or as the invasion of Logan county.

This indictment was one of sixteen, including charges of murder, insurrection and conspiracy and involving several hundred men, 120 of whom obtained a change of venue from Logan county, where the indictments were brought, to Jefferson county, for trial.

When hearing of these cases began nearly five weeks ago, the treason charge was picked as the first for trial and Blizzard as the first defendant.

C. W. Osenton of Fayetteville, closing for the state, said that the jury would have the right to conclude that Blizzard was in Logan county, scene of the fighting, on Aug. 30. Defense witnesses had declared he was in Charleston on that day.

Speaking of the allegation that Blizzard displayed a bomb at Blair Sept. 2, when, the defendant said, he tried to make the armed men return home, the attorney declared "wasn't he saying in effect 'see this bomb they have dropped on women and children. Don't surrender to West Virginia but wait until the federal troops come.'"

AMERICANS RUSH TO BUY GEMS OF RUSSIAN NOBLES

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 27.—An unusual number of European jewels, mostly Russian, were put up for sale last week in Paris, and American visitors are cabling home for large franc credits to snap up bargains.

An American jeweler told a TRIBUNE correspondent that daily sales of family jewels amount to millions of francs. Pearls are in demand, and sell high, but bargains are found in diamonds, emeralds, and sapphires.

American women are being shown gems in their hotels by titled Russian women, impoverished by the revolution. Secrecy is maintained concerning the history of the more valuable pieces.

ARREST OF 'ROSS' MAY SOLVE WARD BLACKMAIL PLOT

Baker's Son Freed on Bail in Peters Slaying.

BY JAMES WHITTAKER.

New York, May 27.—[Special.]—Goaded to action by the news from White Plains that Walter S. Ward, self-confessed slayer of Clarence Peters, is out of jail again on bail increased to $50,000, lawyers for the parents of Peters today hurried preparations for the arrest of "Charlie Ross."

"Ross" is the man identified by Ward in his first confession as the leader of the blackmail gang whose demands drove him to the use of a pistol to defend his reputation.

"Ross" is also the man traced today through a maze of underworld activities and criminal court records to his present haunts in New York's upper east side. And, strangely enough, "Ross" is the man whom Attorney William J. Fallon, retained by Peters' parents, extricated from an extortion charge about six months ago. Fate has related these unrelated facts.

Peters' Attorneys Confer.

Fallon announced today, after he had conferred with Michael J. Sullivan of Salem, Mass., who is directing the legal interests in the Ward case for Peters' parents, that he was confident "Ross" would be apprehended before nightfall.

It was learned the apprehension of "Ross" will not prevent the difficulties which were first feared by Sheriff Werner of White Plains, when he was told Friday night that "Ross" had been traced.

"Ross" is free, but under the shadow of a suspended sentence imposed on him six months ago, when he, with a confederate named Sam Dreyvus, was charged with the blackmailing of a prominent banker and head of an industrial organization. "Ross" is at the disposition of the court which imposed that sentence and can be called back into the presence of this judge without legal procedure or technicality. Dreyvus is now serving an indeterminate sentence, the maximum of which is three years, in Sing Sing.

Same as Banker's Case.

It is believed the history of this blackmailing case parallels the circumstances which led Ward to the shooting of Peters. It was established during the trial of Dreyvus that he and "Ross," with other confederates, made a practice of involving rich men in their toils and that they usually escaped criminal prosecution only because their victims refused to prosecute.

The banker—whose name is still kept out of this public record—prosecuted "Ross" and Dreyvus only when he was certain the whole matter and nature of the complaint could be kept out of the records.

Dreyvus was brought to trial after he had refused the offer of lawyers to settle his case out of court. He boasted to "Ross":

"The banker will never dare go through with this."

But the banker did dare.

Dared to Go on Stand.

He dared to go on the witness stand and admit the nature of the relations between himself and "Ross," which had put him in the blackmailers' power. He dared to admit he had paid the extortioners thousands of dollars. He dared to demand a prison sentence for Dreyvus, who was the head of the gang. And he arranged by the influence he was able to exert that the whole matter be kept secret.

Then his courage failed him. When it came to the prosecution of "Ross," whose trial was set to succeed that of Dreyvus, the banker appealed to the court to spare him a repetition of all the humiliation which his testimony incurred.

Thus a compromise was reached, which resulted in the suspended sentence on "Ross." The liberty which "Ross" thus gained was used by him to set up a blackmailing ring which took the place of the one broken up by the jailing of Dreyvus.

Peters was drawn into that ring. "Ross" changed his rôle from that of subaltern, which he had played under Dreyvus, to that of leader. Peters never did more than follow implicitly "Ross'" orders.

When Dreyvus was sentenced the following denunciation of "Ross" and his breed was part of the court's pronouncement:

"You were a cruel, deliberate, and caluculating criminal. You made the complaining witness [the banker] live in fear of you for years."

Application made today by Ward's lawyers to Justice Seeger in Newburgh, N. Y., for Ward's readmission to increased bail was successful, as was predicted.

Ward is now again in his own home after depositing $50,000 with the sheriff and treasurer of Westchester county as security for his availability when wanted.

GOING TO PLEAD IN COURT

JUDGE WEARY AS NEW BURCH TRIAL IS SET FOR OCT. 9

Los Angeles, Cal., May 27.—The case of Arthur C. Burch, who has been twice tried for the murder of J. Belton Kennedy, was today set for a third trial on Oct. 9. The juries in the two preceding trials disagreed.

The same facts were presented in a third trial, that of Mrs. Madelynn Obenchain co-defendant. That jury disagreed also, and Mrs. Obenchain's case is set for a second trial June 5. Judge Sidney N. Reeve has heard the three trials, and the second trial of Mrs. Obenchain is also scheduled for his department.

When he reset the Burch case today he remarked that when it came up for trial he would transfer it to some other department of the court as he was getting rather tired of it.

MILLER EXPOSE BRINGS BAN FOR DOCTORS OF 1921

Aid Who Gave State Facts "Fired" by Director.

Coincident with the announcement yesterday of the dismissal of Isaac Platt as a member of the board of examiners of the state board of pharmacy, it became known that the medical department of the state of Pennsylvania has voted not to accept by reciprocity any physicians' licenses issued in Illinois in 1921.

Back of both the dismissal of Platt, who is president of the Platt Drug company, 18th street and Ashland avenue, and the action of the Pennsylvania body is the recent license scandal in the state department of education and registration headed by W. H. H. Miller. Following an exposé in THE TRIBUNE, Miller and three others were indicted in connection with the sale of physicians' licenses and pharmacists' certificates.

Medical Journal Reveals Ban.

The May 20 issue of the Journal of the American Medical association carries the announcement of the withdrawal of the reciprocity privilege by Pennsylvania.

"At its meeting held on May 4," the article states, "the Pennsylvania bureau of medical education and licenses voted not to accept by reciprocity any physicians licensed in Illinois during 1921, because of irregularities reported in the granting of licenses during that year."

News of the dismissal of Platt came in a letter addressed to him and signed by Miller. It simply stated the letter was to inform him that his succesor, Daniel P. Seibert of Chicago, has been appointed.

Platt gave the state's attorney's office considerable information in the investigation of Miller's office which resulted in the indictments and yesterday he turned Miller's letter over to Assistant State's Attorney Samuel M. Hamilton, who conducted the inquiry.

Penalty for Aiding State?

"This may be the penalty Mr. Platt is paying for the assistance rendered the state's attorney's office in the investigation of the illegal sale of licenses to applicants desiring to practice pharmacy," said Prosecutor Hamilton.

Mr. Hamilton also stated he understood that three other members of the pharmacy board of examiners were expecting dismissal. They are W. F. Denton of Beardstown, Dwight Moore of Bloomington and Roy R. Barnes of Bushnell.

IMITATION GEMS OF GRACE GEORGE FOOL THIEVES

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, May 27. — William A. Brady, the theatrical man; his wife, Grace George, the actress; Nicholas H. Herbert, a New York importer, and Mrs. S. L. Bachrach of New York were the victims of hotel thieves here today.

MISS GRACE GEORGE.
[White Photo.]

While Mr. Brady and his wife were at the theater thieves ransacked their room in the hotel, taking clothes and furs worth 1,000,000 marks [$3,030] and a pearl necklace. Miss George, while mourning her clothes, has the laugh on the crooks, because before leaving New York she placed her $10,000 necklace in a safe and took along an imitation. Mr. Herbert and Mrs. Bachrach lost articles and letters of credit valued at $6,000.

The Dresden municipality is raising theater prices six times for Americans. Munich now requires that any one buying theater tickets must present a passport.

REALTORS GIVEN WARM GREETING AT LOS ANGELES

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 27.—[Special.]—Los Angeles is finding the Chicago real estate men nothing if not reciprocal.

While the natives are expatiating on the values and the beauties of Los Angeles real estate the Chicago men, headed by Blake C. Smith, are telling the natives the value and the beauty of the Torrens system.

The Chicago realtors, with their wives and daughters, were taken through the orange grove district this morning, were guests at a "review" of some "super film productions" in the Ambassador hotel theater, and were given a dinner by the local realty men.

Mr. and Mrs. Fancis D. Connery, exhibited two pairs of ear muffs.

"We got them in Phoenix the other day," Connery explained. "The Arizona fellows said we'd need them when we got to Los Angeles to keep out the climate chatter."

The delegates registered for the "end of the trail" caravan to San Francisco, Monday morning. They will arrive in San Francisco Tuesday evening, ready for the national convention of real estate boards. There will be approximately 1,000 automobiles in the caravan.

COURT MAY GRANT SIX CENT FARES; TALK OF STRIKE

Must Reduce Wages, Is Traction Plea.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The decision of Federal Judges Geiger, Page, and Evans upon the request of the surface companies to enjoin, as confiscatory, the 6 cent fare order of the Illinois commerce commission is expected Wednesday or Thursday of this week. If they decline to intervene a reduction in fares from 8 to 6 cents on the surface lines will become effective.

President Leonard A. Busby of the Chicago City Railway company has said it is impossible to reduce fares without reducing wages.

A union official has said: "If they kick us we'll fight." Such a condition might result in a strike within thirty days unless the unions should accept a cut.

Possibilities of Strike.

If the judges enjoin the 6 cent fare as confiscatory, then the present 8 cent fare will remain in force until changed by the Illinois commerce commission. Judging by its past speed that commission would probably not fix a new fare much before Sept. 1.

There will come a point in fixing fares, if it has not already arrived, where the federal court will refuse to issue an injunction on the ground that the rate is confiscatory. Then the fare order of the commission will go into effect, and it is understood the companies would then attempt to force down wages. Then a strike would follow unless the unions change their announced views. Therefore, apparently the decisions of the federal judges will have little influence on the threatened strike except to hasten or delay its arrival.

Wages are the big factor in the fare controversy. The companies claim their actual expenses are more than 6 cents for each passenger. But wages are by far the largest item. The surface lines show that 51.32 per cent of their gross income is spent for wages. That is 4.083 cents out of each 8 cent fare.

All Prices Down.

The car men's wages in Chicago are the highest in the country, and the city's attorneys have made an argument for their reduction, although omitting a specific request that that be done.

"We will cite with considerable detail the evidence," reads the city's brief, "which shows without contradiction that since the 8 cent fare was established by the public utilities commission, the price of materials, the cost of money, and the cost of labor in almost every line of industry, including street railways in other cities, have come down approximately, if not more than, 25 per cent from what they were at the time such 8 cent fare was established."

To this the companies have replied that the price of materials has been lowered, but the saving thereby has been eaten up in increased taxes. They admit that money is cheaper, but assert that it is higher than reckoned by the commerce commission. On wages the companies assert that neither the commission nor the courts have the power to interfere and that a wage cut of 25 per cent would bring on a strike which would involve the elevated as well as the surface lines.

On these issues the federal judges will make their decision.

FRANCE TO PROBE FALSE REPORT OF CRANE JAIL TERM

Washington, D. C. May 27.—[Special.]—Official denial was made at the state department today of reports that Charles R. Crane, Chicago manufacturer and former American minister to China, had been tried by a French court martial in Syria for inciting to riot, and had been sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment.

The department made public a cable dispatch from American Consul Knabenshue, stationed at Beirut, in which the consul stated the French high commissioner issued a formal denial. An investigation has been ordered by the French authorities into the case, it is understood, to place responsibility for publication of the story of Damascus.

In connection with the statements attributed to Mr. Crane in an interview in Paris that the American consul at Damascus had compelled the French authorities to make an apology to him following a misunderstanding, it was said at the state department today that Consul Alvin had had a slight misunderstanding with French authorities, but that the matter had been satisfactorily adjusted without becoming an "incident."

'POISON PENMAN' INSANE, HIS AGED FATHER PLEADS

'Casualty of War,' He Tells Judge.

"I believe the boy should ge given a psychopathic examination to test his sanity."

Thus 71 year old Judge Wilbur F. Bryant of Hartington, Neb., defended his son, Eugene, "poison penman," before Judge Morgan in the East Chicago avenue police court yesterday.

The father's defense followed testimony of Detective Sergts. Prendergast, Brandt, and Klatzco, who told how they disguised themselves as waiters in a loop restaurant and captured the letter writer when he called to collect an envelope supposedly stuffed with bills by Mrs. A. H. Shotwell, victim of his blackmail attempts.

A. H. Shotwell, millionaire candy man, gave the history of the ten months' persecution of threats from the younger Bryant. The first letter, he said, came in July, 1921. Those subequent threatened bombing, death, and kidnaping of their small child, he declared. He described it as a "reign of terror."

Wincing under the testimony, the aged judge arose with quavering voice.

"My boy was a war casualty," he said. "His last letters home were very strange. Just at the time he was arrested we were preparing to place him in a sanitarium. I am not at all bitter against Mr. Shotwell. I'd act the same if I had received such treatment."

Judge Morgan continued Bryant's case until Monday, placing him in bonds of $35,000. He still remains at his cell in the East Chicago avenue station.

According to Capt. Morgan Collins of that station Mrs. Shotwell has received still another letter, a typewritten one this time, containing the threat, "You'll be dead by June 6." It is the act of a practical joker, with a distorted sense of humor, he believes, and told the recipient to pay no attention to it.

NEGLECTS TO HITCH HORSE; FINED.

John McLoughlin, 832 South Wabash avenue, who left his horse standing Friday afternoon in the loop, while he purchased cigarets, was fined $5 by Judge John J. Rooney in the South Clark street court yesterday for violation of traffic ordinances. McLoughlin's horse, trotting away, knocked down a woman.

MARY'S PAL AND SCULPTOR PLAN QUIET WEDDING

Genius Wears Tam to Meet Her Dad.

"It will be the quietest kind of a wedding," said Miss Helen Walker, who was to have been Mary Landon Baker's only attendant at the most elaborate kind of a wedding, as she commented yesterday upon her own approaching marriage to Stanislaus Szukalski, Polish sculptor, who arrived in Chicago yesterday from New York.

"I detest civilization and its ways." This has been the motto of the radical sculptor ever since his early days in Chicago, and throughout his studies at the Fine Arts academy in Krakow and at the Chicago Art institute, where he was alternately fêted for his evident genius and disciplined for his evident "independence."

"Individual" Is the Word.

It was still his motto yesterday as, looking "individual" with his long hair streaming out from under a gray tam-o-shanter trimmed with a band of black ribbon and two long streamers, he silhouetted himself against the conventional background of the luxuriously appointed apartment building at 229 Lake Shore drive, to meet his fiancée and her father, Dr. Samuel J. Walker, prominent Chicago physician.

"I'm in a hurry," was the only retort of the artist, who was never in a hurry before, as he rushed into the apartment a few minutes before. Szukalski and Miss Walker soon left and were gone all day.

Last night Miss Walker denied that the wedding was to take place within a week, "unless I change my present plans," she admitted; but she intimated that it wouldn't be difficult for the sculptor to make her arrange for an earlier wedding date.

"I don't know anything about the details of the wedding, except that there won't be many details—just as quiet as possible and only a few people. We shall go to Canada for a honeymoon, and then we will return to New York.

Tells of First Meeting.

"Of course I intend to go on with my work in art," she declared, and went on to recall her first meeting with her fiancé at his studio at 854½ North State street.

"No, I'm not a bit excited. I spent the day just as I always do. I even did a bit of shopping. But I am not making any elaborate preparations for the wedding," concluded the bride-to-be in a romance that has startled but not surprised social and artistic people.

Szukalski, located last night at the home of artist friends, was equally noncomittal regarding the details of his coming marriage. He displayed the same serenity which first attracted to him the attention of Sir Rabindranath Tagore, the famous East Indian poet. When the mystic poet met the artist mystic several years ago at the home of Mrs. William Vaughn Moody, 2970 Ellis avenue, Tagore immediately asked him to come to India because, the poet said, "he is not yet civilized."

Taft Disqualifies.

Mrs. Moody last night said she remembered the Polish sculptor as a frequent guest at her home, with other artist friends, but that she did not know him personally.

Lorado Taft, Chicago sculptor, said he had never known Szukalski and would not feel qualified to comment on his work.

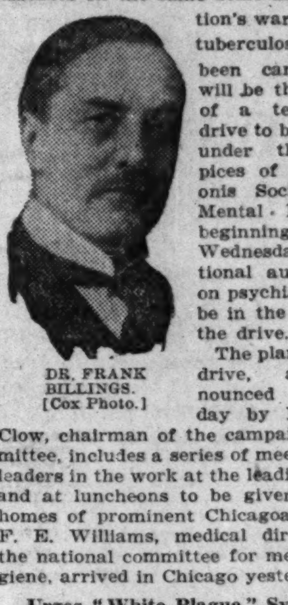
CITY WILL RAISE FUND TO BATTLE MENTAL DISEASE

National Experts Coming for the Drive.



DR. FRANK BILLINGS.

Funds with which to fight mental diseases on the same scale as the nation's war against tuberculosis has been carried on will be the object of a ten days' drive to be opened under the auspices of the Illinois Society for Mental Hygiene, beginning next Wednesday. National authorities on psychiatry will be in the city for the drive.

The plan for the drive, as announced yesterday by Kent S. Clow, chairman of the campaign committee, includes a series of meetings by leaders in the work at the leading clubs and at luncheons to be given at the homes of prominent Chicagoans. Dr. F. E. Williams, medical director of the national committee for mental hygiene, arrived in Chicago yesterday.

Urges "White Plague" System.

"The Illinois organization is working under the direction of the national committee," said Mr. Clow. "We are endeavoring to handle the problem of mental hygiene as the white plague was handled. We must have support."

Dr. Frank Billings, president of the Illinois society, and Dr. Williams will be the speakers at the opening meeting to be given at the Chicago club Wednesday. Following this a number of drawing room meetings at luncheons will be held.

Hostesses for Campaign.

Among the hostesses for the campaign are: Mrs. Julius Rosenwald, at Highland Park, next Friday; Mrs. Andrew Porter, 318 Forest avenue, Oak Park, next Sunday; Mrs. Theodore W. Robinson, 1620 Ridge avenue, Evanston, June 6; Mrs. William B. Hale, Winnetka, June 7; Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Lake Forest, June 8.

EUROPE DELAYS ARMS HOLIDAY; HOLDS UP PACT

Treaties O. K.'d Only by U. S. and China.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., May 24.—[Special.]—The United States government is waiting hopefully and patiently for ratification of the important treaties of the Washington conference on limitation of armament by the principal foreign powers which participated in their negotiation.

This government is anxious that the full benefits of the treaties, promptly ratified by the United States, may be realized. It is particularly anxious to have the naval treaty in effect so that the American ship program can be settled and the scrapping of discarded vessels executed.

More than three months have passed since the Washington conference adjourned and more than two months since the senate ratified the treaties. Only one other nation, China, has ratified the treaties.

Japan May Act This Week.

Reports of an official character have come to Washington that Japan expects to ratify the pacts soon, probably next week, but there is nothing definite about this and there may be considerable delay, although nothing has been heard here to indicate any serious hitch over the treaties in Japan.

While it is understood that ratification by the British parliament is not absolutely necessary, it has been suggested that the naval treaty at least would be submitted to parliament on account of its importance.

The chief concern here is over the naval treaty prescribing the size of the fleets to be maintained by the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy. Virtually all American arrangements have been made for scrapping surplus tonnage, but as a matter of general policy these are being held in abeyance until the rest of the naval powers definitely join the curtailment program.

Europe Waits Hague Conference.

There is no real doubt that the European countries intend eventually to ratify, but the question is just when they intend to do so. So much has happened in Europe since the delegates signed the treaties in Washington that the outlook is confused.

Washington officials, including President Harding and Secretary Hughes, generally understand that a great deal depends on the outcome of the coming Hague conference. If this conference succeeds in the adjustment of European affairs, it is anticipated that ratification will not be long delayed but if The Hague conference fails there is no telling what will happen.

According to state department reports, the Japanese delay has been due to local conditions and not to any real objection to the treaties, including the navy treaty, limiting Japan's sea power to three-fifths that of the United States and Great Britain.

Japanese People Approve Treaty.

It has been recognized in Japan that there was no real hurry about ratification, and Japanese officials have considered it wise to wait until all the people could understand the exact treaty provisions. With the people generally satisfied the Japanese parliament is said to be ready now, and ratification will be almost immediate.

As soon as Japan ratifies the treaties, in the opinion of Washington officials, all eyes will be turned toward Europe, waiting for Great Britain, France, and Italy to act.

One troublesome factor, however, so far as the European nations are concerned, is said to be the relationship between Russia and Germany, which easily might become a menace to Great Britain and France.

France, it is reported unofficially, is less eager to ratify the navy treaty than either Great Britain or Italy. The navy treaty has not been so popular in France as in the other two countries, as was evident even during the Washington negotiations, when the French ratio was objected to by French delegates. Unofficial reports now circulated in Washington go so far as to say that France has no intention of ratifying the navy treaty.

Such a delay might, it is recognized, influence the action of Great Britain, although efforts will be made to have Great Britain and Italy take the lead in ratification if necessary, to induce France to adopt a less militaristic attitude. The Washington government, of course, will not fail to use any proper influence to obtain early ratification.

In view of the delays, attention has been directed to the fact that in none of the treaties is there a time limit for ratification. The nations can delay for an indefinite period. This raises a diplomatic question as to how long anybody would be bound while waiting for the others to join.

PAVE WAY FOR GREATEST AIR REGATTA HERE

Represenatives of more than a score of organizations interested in the future of aviation in Chicago, meeting in Mayor Thompson's office yesterday, appointed a committee to lay plans for a huge flying meet and air congress to be held in Chicago during the pageant of progress exposition.

Though the plans at present are in embyronic state, they call for the greatest regatta in the history of flying coupled with an air congress to be featured by papers and speeches by experts of the aeronautical world, with addresses by Gen. Patrick of the army air service; Rear Admiral Moffet of the navy air service, and Col. Paul Henderson, head of the mail air service.

The committee, which is to be enlarged at the desire of its members, consists of D. F. Kelly, treasurer of the pageant of progress exposition and general manager of Mandel Brothers; George B. Foster, vice president of the Commonwealth Edison company and chairman of the aircraft committee of the Association of Commerce, and C. S. Rieman, president of the Elgin Motor Car corporation and chairman of the aircraft committee of the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

It was decided tentatively at yesterday's conference, of which Mr. Rieman was chairman, that a new organization, to be composed of representatives of all aviation and civic bodies interested in aviation, will be incorporated to undertake the huge enterprise. The organization later may be made permanent.

"The underlying idea is the desire to make Chicago the center of the aircraft industry of the United States," Mr. Rieman said. "To do this we must attract the interest of leaders in aviation to Chicago through the flying meet, the air congress, and establishment of permanent landing fields and air transportation lines.

"It is well known that Detroit increased its population by 750,000 in a few years by landing the automobile industry, an industry which Chicago had in the hollow of its hand and tossed aside. We want to make sure that the same thing does not happen to the flying industry."

The size of the task before the organizers of the meet becomes clear when it is recalled that the expenses of the flying meet held on the lake front in 1911, the first large meet of its kind, were $270,000. In those days aviators were paid $2 a minute for each minute in the air and prizes running as high as $14,000 were paid to a single flier.

Discussion at yesterday's session revolved around the question of whether the project should be undertaken by a new organization or whether the air board of Chicago, an organization officially recognized by the city council and composed of representatives of all bodies interested in aviation, should take it up. The tentative conclusion reached yesterday was that a new organization should be formed.

BRITISH ARMY MAN KILLED IN HEART OF DUBLIN

Terror in Belfast Spread by Arson Squads.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BELFAST, May 27.—A party of girls, said to be Sinn Fein Red Cross members, were arrested in a shooting trap today. The trap contained ammunition and nursing supplies.

DUBLIN, May 27.—[United Press.]—A British soldier was assassinated and another wounded by unidentified gunmen today on College Green. Stray bullets wounded a woman and a child.

A party of armed men, presumably Irish army mutineers, killed former Constable Greer and mortally wounded his son at Cootehall, County Roscommon, today.

Belfast Murders Continue.

BELFAST, May 27.—[United Press.]—Arson squads in the war between Sinn Feiners and Protestants carried on their operations in broad daylight today.

Following a night of terror, during which the sky was crimsoned by a score of incendiary blazes, the firebugs today captured and burned a warehouse and a factory.

A constable and a civilian named Robert Grainey were shot and killed this afternoon, bringing the total dead for the week to 33. Capt. Murphy and four special constables were wounded in repulsing an attack on the Jonesborough barracks at Armagh.

Arson Squads Bold.

Crackling of flames, rattle of rifle fire and clangor of fire brigades made a grim symphony for the bloody tragedy during the night. Frequent bomb explosions added to the terror.

The arson squads worked with precision and discipline. Residents of buildings marked for destruction were given a short time to vacate, while petrol was sprinkled through the rooms. Then the torch was applied and a bomb or two tossed in to insure demolition. While this work was going on armed guards stood ready to repulse any attempt to interfere. Sharp fights occurred at several places.

Fail to Satisfy British.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, May 27.—Unable to reach a satisfactory agreement regarding interpretation of the Irish treaty, the representatives of the British and Irish governments discussing the new Irish situation arising from the Collins-De Valera pact adjourned tonight until next week. The conference was attended by Prime Minister Lloyd George and Winston Churchill for Great Britain, and Michael Collins and Arthur Griffith for Ireland.

Mr. Collins told the British neither he nor Mr. de Valera intended to violate the peace treaty, but the Free States sought a compromise agreement with the radical republicans in order to restore and maintain order and to solve the present difficulties in Ireland. Mr. Churchill pointed out that certain provisions of the new pact seemed beyond the provisions of the original treaty and indicated an intention of creating an independent and sovereign state of Ireland.

Would Delay Treaty Vote.

The calling of a general election in south Ireland next month, as the treaty provides, to decide on the establishment of the Free State forms the principal stumbling block. Mr. Collins insisted there will be insurmountable difficulties if the balloting is held in the near future. The Irish urge delay, as provided in the Collins-De Valera pact, pending the abatement of bloodshed, the restoration of order and the assumption of complete control over the Free State by the newly created coalition government.

Mr. Lloyd George warned the Irish, it is understood, that the British government will not permit a further breakaway by Ireland nor will it abandon Ulster.

WED YESTERDAY

MRS. ROBERT F. HUSSEY.

[Lewis Smith Photo.]

St. Chrysostom Episcopal church was thronged yesterday by persons prominent in society who were there to witness the wedding of Miss Katherine Huling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bentley Huling, to Robert Franklin Hussey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Hussey.

SOCIETY TURNS OUT FOR SERIES OF BIG WEDDINGS

Elaborate Gowns, Many Flowers at Nuptials.

A wedding of wide interest to society took place last evening at St. Asaph's Protestant Episcopal church in Bala, Pa., when Miss Ruth Elizabeth Parsons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Essex Parsons of Cynwynd, became the bride of Edward Porter Street, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Street of 1429 Astor street, Chicago. The Rev. Charles Larrabee Street, brother of the bridegroom, performed the ceremony. He was assisted by the Rev. Benjamin N. Bird, rector of the church. A reception followed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Nedford Jennings in Merion, Pa.

How They Dressed.

The bride's gown was of white brocaded chiffon with a court train and veil of duchesse lace. Miss Louise Mayhew Parsons, her sister's maid of honor, wore a frock of cream chiffon trimmed with lace and a picture hat of periwinkle blue.

The bridesmaids, Miss Anne Essex Parsons and Miss June Rolfe of New Haven, Conn., wore flesh colored crepe frocks and lace hats. D. Brewster Jennings of New York was best man and the ushers included Rollin Larrabee and Douglas Street of Chicago, N. R. Landon of New York, and John W. Parsons of Baltimore.

After an extensive wedding journey Mr. and Mrs. Street will reside with Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Street.

Huling-Hussey Wedding.

St. Chrysostom's church was the setting yesterday afternoon for the marriage of Miss Katharine Huling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bentley Huling of 51 East Division street, and Robert Franklin Hussey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin B. Hussey of 234 East Pearson street. The Rev. Norman Hutton read the service, which was followed by a reception at the residence of the bride's parents.

The bride's gown was of white salome velvet, trimmed with rose point lace, and the same kind of lace ornamented the tulle veil. She carried white butterfly sweet peas and white stock.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Temple Hoyne Buell (Marjorie McIntosh) of Denver, Colo.; Miss Betty Huling,, her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids, Mrs. Le Roy Huszagh and Miss Frances Huling, wore gowns of apple green chiffon trimmed with silver, with hats to correspond, and carried lavender sweet peas.

The flower girl, Gertrude Gaylord, wore a hat and frock of lavender taffeta and carried sweetheart roses. Lawence D. Smith was best man, and the ushers were Dr. Carl R. Wagner, George H. Armstrong, George Gardner and Archibald Fischer. Mr. and Mrs. Hussey will be at home after June 20 at 1340 North Dearborn avenue.

Wilder-Landreth.

When Miss Lois Wilder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wilder of Evanston, became the bride of Robert Nelson Landreth, son of Dr. Olin Henry Landreth of New York, last night, she wore a simple gown of cream satin trimmed with old Carrickmacross lace. Her veil was of the same old lace and was held in place with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried an old white ostrich fan of her mother's and small white orchids. Her only attendant, her sister, Mrs. Charles Ball of Winnetka, wore a cream net dress and carried larkspur and snapdragons. The wedding took place at 8 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, 1622 Forest avenue, the Rev. James G. K. McClure and the Rev. David Hugh Jones officiating.

Little Nancy Wilder and Anne Barratt stretched the ribbons.

Roberts-Schultz.

At the marriage of Miss Louise Ann Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Roberts of 423 Barry avenue, to Dr. Louis Schultz, last night at St. Peter's Episcopal church, Miss Beatrice Roberts, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Alta Hicks, Miss Phyllis Thuston and Miss Margaret Ruth Jones. Dr. Carl E. Schultz was his brother's best man, and Dr. Harold Carlson, Harold Gross and Edward Ferguson ushered.

ALL SHOALS BIDS SPURNED; OTHER PROPOSALS MADE

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—Bidders competing for development by private enterprise of the government's $106000,000 war initiated projects at Muscle Shoals, Ala., were given their answers today by the house military committee in the form of a counter proposal framed by the committeemen.

None of the officers submitted by the bidders and forwarded to congress by Secretary Weeks for final decision was found acceptable. That made by Henry Ford came closest to winning the award in that it was made the basis upon which the committee builds its reply.

The committee alterations were chiefly important with respect to the Ford offer in that they eliminated the Gorgas plant, required a paid up cash capital of $10,000,000 or more for the operating company to be created for developing the shoals, and made compulsory the yearly production of finished commercial fertilizers on the basis of 40,00 tons of fixed nitrogen.

Director for Doug and Mary Seeking Divorce

Los Angeles, Cal., May 27.—Irving Martin, motion picture art director for Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, has filed suit for divorce against Eleanor Dowler Martin.

He charges "cruel and inhuman treatment" in that Mrs. Martin lived with him only one day after their marriage here May 14.

He also alleges she said she "figured because of his position she would be able to obtain standing in the picture profession, get a position, get all out of him she could, and then leave him."

FIANCE TEARS UP BOAT TICKET; HALTS MRS. JOYCE'S TRIP

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 27.—Another episode in the romance of Mrs. Roberta Acuff Joyce, former wife of David Joyce, was staged when her fiancé, Reginald Gouraud, the stepson of Aimee Gouraud, motored down to Cherbourg, tore up her steamboat ticket and whisked her back to Paris. Mrs. Joyce had been given a large farewell party by Mme. Gouraud the night before.

MRS. ROBERTA ACUFF JOYCE.

Mrs. Joyce's trip to America was to have been brief and was to have ended in her marriage in July. Young Gouraud failed to get up in time to say good-bye at the train and he arrived at Cherbourg after Mrs. Joyce's trunks were in her stateroom. The trip to America was to have been in connection with a suit of alienation against her former husband.

Mrs. Towle, who was to have accompanied Mrs. Joyce, sailed alone.

CHILDREN SHOW TALENT IN NORTH SHORE FESTIVAL

How They Delight in Walrus Song!

BY EDWARD MOORE.

There probably was more wholesale, all around enjoyment of the gymnasium at Evanston yesterday than in any other single feature of the North Shore music festival. It was the day of the children, and there were 1,500 of them on the stage.

Children's voices create a sound like nothing else on earth, and when a young army like this one has been trained to respond to one baton—in this case held by Osbourne McConathy—it is something to hear. Discounting the justifiable pride of parents and friends, it commanded the respect and pleasure of an outsider.

Sang of the Walrus.

The youthful choiristers had three innings, one with the Handel melody known as the "Largo" with a different set of words, another with a group of Schubert songs of which one was repeated. Having thus paid deference to the spirit of culture, they turned with perhaps more pleasure to Percy Fletcher's cantata setting of the delectable "Walrus and the Carpenter" and the oysters that came "scra-ambling to the shore." They were a hit.

So was Irene Pavloska, mezzo-soprano of the Chicago opera, who established that she was as good a singer of songs as of operatic rôles, which is uncommonly good. She began with a pair of arias which were loudly cheered and encored, and continued with a group of children's songs that made her an enormous favorite. A fine singer and a highly attractive personality is Miss Pavloska, and she projects the English language in song just about as accurately and clearly as John McCormack.

Symphonists Help.

Finally Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra were there to add to the cheery atmosphere of the afternoon, playing some of the shorter and brighter pieces of the répertoire in a way that created acclaim and repetitions.

A change in the scheduled program will take place tomorrow night. Emma Noe, announced for the soprano part in "Caractacus," will not be here, and Luella Melius has at short notice agreed to sing the part. This will be her second appearance at this festival.

FIVE MINUTES; $250.

"Back in five minutes," said Earl Fischer, waiter at a restaurant at 446 North Clark street, yesterday. A. J. Dietrich, owner, entering the store, discovered that his waiter had departed with $250 from the till.

CHILE, PERU, PLAN ARBITRATION ON OLD DIFFERENCES

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—A definite basis of negotiation, understood to contemplate a resort to arbitration, at last has been formulated by the Chilean-Peruvian conference. As now under discussion, the arbitration proposal is said to center upon a settlement of the long standing controversy over Article 3 of the treaty of Ancon, without prejudice to other differences which have come to the surface during the conference conversations.

Prospects that the two delegations would come together on such a proposition appeared to be brightening tonight after the formal conference sessions had been resumed in a short meeting.

One question understood to be still undecided is whether the arbitration shall be a judicial or a political one. The Peruvians are understood to have taken the position that only a court of jurists should be entrusted with the decision. The Chilean attitude has not been publicly defined.

THE TRIBUNE PROGRAM FOR MIDDLE WEST DEVELOPMENT

1—A Square Deal in Congress for the Middle West.

2—Open the Great Lakes to the Atlantic.

A PLAN FOR SEAWAY ACTION.

With the preliminaries under way for negotiation of a treaty between the United States and Canada under which the great lakes-St. Lawrence seaway may be built, a new obstacle is sighted in the path of the improvement. It is the opposition of Canadian waterpower interests in the province of Quebec.

These interests wield strong influence in the very section which now holds the balance of power in the Canadian government. The present dominion government under Premier Mackenzie King has a majority of only one vote in parliament, and that majority is maintained only through the adherence of Quebec. Canadian governmental insistence upon definite legislation for the seaway, therefore, probably would alienate the Quebec delegation and defeat its own purpose. It is apparent in such circumstances that new pressure must be brought upon Canada to authorize the seaway.

This government has a majority in both senate and house, we believe, in favor of the seaway development. If international authorization is now delayed because of opposition of selfish interests in Canada we will soon find ourselves making an international football of the project. In a year or two, when Canada becomes favorable, congress may have changed, and later when congress again becomes favorable Canada may again be in opposition.

To thwart such delays now we should take definite action. We dislike to suggest a substitute for the St. Lawrence shipway, but the middle west's need of adequate communication with the sea is so pressing as to require action. If Canada insists on holding aloof the suggestion of an alternative route, entirely through American territory, may bring her to terms. Congressional action providing for such a route in case Canada refuses to authorize the joint seaway within, say, six months, ought to be effective. If it fails to awaken the Canadians we will then be able to do without them. If it does awaken them to the advantages of the St. Lawrence route, so much the better.

Certainly the opposition to the canal, centering in Montreal, should appreciate the fact that if we build an all-American shipway from the lakes to the Atlantic the prestige of Montreal as a seaport will be virtually destroyed. The great western Canadian commerce will then go through our shipway to the sea.

The Oswego-Hudson route is a possible alternative. We do not consider it as practicable as the St. Lawrence route, and American government engineers have not considered it equally practicable, but it is possible. It will have one advantage of removing most of the present American opposition to a seaway, which comes from New York. It has been advocated by Buffalo interests and by civic organizations and the press of New York City.

We want first of all some deep water route for ocean steamships from the lakes to the Atlantic. The St. Lawrence route is unquestionably the best. But any route is infinitely better than none. Let congress take immediate action to put itself definitely on record in favor of the St. Lawrence seaway, with a provision that if Canada does not do its part we will build the Oswego-Hudson ship canal. The middle west wants action, and it wants it now.

We can get that action if leading citizens of the eighteen states which have approved the seaway will take a step such as that of eleven Republican editors of the state of Washington who have decided to telegraph President Harding that unless the Smith-McNary reclamation bill is passed "they will no longer consider themselves bound either by past affiliations or the party's future promises to continue support of the national Republican party." They hold that failure to pass the bill will be a breach of faith. The same contention can be advanced concerning the seaway.

SAVE THE FISH.

Welcome the Izaak Walton League of America to the conservation movement of the country. It is too true that unless there is control of fishing we may be fishless in the next generation. We have gone far toward deforesting the land. The wild life of prairie and woodland has been dangerously depleted. The automobilist is devastating the wild flowers. Indiscriminate fishing will make our lakes and streams tenantless.

Common sense, if awakened and organized, will stop all of this heedless destruction. The American public is eminently teachable. All that is needed is education and that should be given on all lines of conservation.

We believe the Izaak Walton league can get results, as the Audubon society has done for the protection of birds. Let every fisherman work for reasonable fishing and for active stocking and breeding, and let the new league take on a job that has long been waiting to be done. We refer to the preservation of the great lakes as an incomparable reservoir of food fish. The lakes have been subjected to unrestricted commercial fishing for years. As a result the supply has been almost destroyed in one lake after another. Lake Michigan used to be full of fish. So were all the lakes. The supply is steadily dwindling. What is needed is a treaty with Canada under which a closed season shall be fixed for each lake in turn, commercial fishing being allowed only in other lakes, which in turn will be closed. During the closed season fishing should be prohibited and the lake should be well stocked. Then it should be opened and another lake closed.

By following this plan fishing will revive and the great lakes again will become what they ought always to be, a great food reservoir for Canada and the United States.

TO AID STATE FORESTRY.

The Illinois State Forestry association, the outgrowth of meetings arranged under the auspices of the Union League club of Chicago to consider forestry problems, is formulating a practical forestry policy for this state. It deserves widespread interest and support. Its efforts would bring Illinois up from the ranks of backward and indifferent states into line with those who are taking constructive measures to protect the trees which they now have, and to develop new forests for future generations.

As a state we have no forestry policy. We have no bureau of forestry in the state government. But we have between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 acres of forest land, mostly in bad condition, bearing only a thin stand of timber which is prevented by neglect and by frequent fires from becoming truly valuable. In addition we have about 2,000,900 more acres of land which is virtually worthless for ordinary agriculture, but which could be made to bear timber. When we stop to think that we are paying about $25,000,000 a year for freight alone on timber brought into the state, the economic waste of allowing potential forest land to lie idle is apparent.

It is the purpose of the association to correct this waste. It would do this by formulating a forestry policy, establishing a bureau in the state government to administer it, and by arousing and educating public opinion on the project. In general that is a sound program.

THE TRIBUNE is inclined to shy at plans for establishment of new divisions of state government, as tending to complicate administration and give new opportunities for political patronage if not for graft, but need of an effective forestry program for Illinois is such as to reduce even our instinctive opposition to such a plan. If a forestry program could be administered by a bureau in the state department of agriculture, such opposition would be reduced to a minimum.

Laws will be needed to make the purposes of the association effective. For instance, to make trees a profitable crop, the expense of planting and maintenance must be virtually eliminated until the period when the cutting of timber may begin. That would require, among other things, special dispensation on taxes. Such laws can be obtained only if the public realizes the potential value of forests, and supports legislation which would bring them into being. Such realization and support can be developed only through education. That should be the initial work of the association. At this moment victims of the recent floods in Illinois should take kindly to such education. Flood control is only one of the advantages to be gained.

A WOMAN'S CITIZENSHIP IS HER HUSBAND'S.

Secretary of Labor Davis says he approves the Shortridge naturalization bill providing for the registration and education and Americanizing of immigrants. The bill may have features worthy of administration support, but it has one which is not. It permits an American woman marrying a foreigner to retain her American citizenship, proposing thus to equalize the position of the American man and the American woman in this respect.

If the present Lady Astor had married an American she probably would have thought and acted as an American woman. She married a British subject and she thinks and acts as an English woman. She admits this to the extent of fifty-fifty, but an American voter cannot be 50 per cent anything else. In fact, Lady Astor, who has been conducting an eloquent pro-British campaign in the land of her birth, is wholly English.

Women sentimentally adopt the land of their husbands when they marry abroad. That is the land of their children. Generally they marry abroad because of social ambition and they take a great deal of American money abroad in doing so. A law which regarded them as American citizens in spite of their transfer of allegiance would be a harmful fiction.

RESTRICT SPEED; SAVE TIME.

Judge Robert E. Gentzel of the Automobile court tells 400 chauffeurs at a Chicago Safety council meeting that "there is one way to stop speeding. That is to send the speeder to the bridewell." Judge Gentzel speaks advisedly. Detroit has proved it. But that method of correction cannot be applied in Chicago. We haven't the necessary law. The judge asks for legislation to that end.

The question thus put before the pedestrians, motorists, nonmotorists, and street car riders is whether they are sufficiently eager to restrict speeding to authorize such drastic action.

The customary argument in favor of it is that present disregard of traffic regulations takes heavy toll of life and limb. Last year 660 persons were killed and 7,000 severely injured here. Those are shocking figures. They furnish the most popular argument for drastic punishment of speeders. But there is another point which should be of equal interest to motorists and pedestrians. It is the possibility of improving traffic conditions by an effective law against speeding.

Automobiles have taken a great burden from street cars, but as they have increased in number they have hampered cars at crossings and along congested streets. A person can walk through the loop now as rapidly as he can ride in an automobile or street car. Still we approve the automobile as our best medium of transportation. We look forward to a day when busses will largely supplant surface cars, because they can move on streets without tracks, pass each other in case of breakdown, change their routes at need, and otherwise prove themselves superior to cars.

But if motor transportation, private and public, is to be thus enlarged and extended, the necessity of making it constantly more fluid is apparent. Uniform traffic signals will help to do this. Speed regulation will do more. Haste, as at present applied, makes waste. A car at fifteen miles an hour slows up a line of cars at thirty miles. One at thirty miles, cutting in and out of traffic, endangers all those traveling at fifteen miles. There are jams at corners and in narrow streets. The net result is a loss rather than a gain to all concerned.

Effective speeding restrictions will stop that. By putting all city motor traffic on a reasonable basis it will shorten the average time between average points, even though it reduces speed between corners. That, in addition to a tremendous reduction of accidents and deaths, is one thing Detroit has proved. It is worth the consideration of Chicagoans who might be inclined to oppose effective regulation in the belief that they will never be parties to a fatal accident.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

May, but for a small rim, has been nicked out of the year and experience puts away another used ticket and reaches for June. Was it hours or days or weeks ago that February seemed to interpose slow days of snow, when icicles hung from the eaves, and when we said it is always winter and there is no spring? Man grasps at time and clutches water.

Where the mattock dug wintered parsnips from the frozen ground new corn awaits the hoe, tulips have gone the way of the jonquil and the wild rose bud is red where the violets have fallen, iris bloom in the clumps of spruce and the peony buds are ready to open.

Was February so slow with its collector's punch traveling the rim of the ticket that it is now May which fades away? The commuter plants where the snow had drifted. The leaves of the white oak are green where they were brown and the scarlet tanager calls unseen from where the crow was black against the sky.

The world within the garden walls sees time flying as the shadows sweep from the roses blooming at dawn to the cedars darkening at dusk. It is a laggard in what it promises, but so swift in what it achieves that the fact is gone before it has been perceived and the human who longed for blossoms has brown leaves in his hands again.

INTERVENTION IN THE NEAR EAST.

Time was when such an appeal as Lord Curzon's to save the Christians in Asia Minor from massacre would have set American humanitarianism powerfully vibrating. Excited meetings would have rained passionate petitions upon the President and congress. The pulpit and the press would have trumpeted the government to a new crusade. We should all have enjoyed a wonderful glow of emotion, of righteous and not very expensive indignation.

Nowadays we are a bit wiser. We know something about the drama, and we are not ready to accept Lord Curzon as a modern Perseus saving the Christian damsel from the dragon Moslem. When we look at the scene we see international rivals working out a tangled plot of self-interest, the British using the Greeks, the French and Italians the Turkish Nationalists. When Lord Curzon talks about Turkish atrocities we do not forget that when the Greeks took Smyrna there was a general slaughter.

We don't doubt evil is done by all concerned. To massacre and burn has been a part of the technique of neighborliness in the Balkans and near east for generations. Doubtless it is going on still, but when we are invited to take sides against the unspeakable Turk we have now enough information to know there is something to be said in his behalf and a lot to be said against his enemies. We have especially become aware of the fact that Turk, Greek, Syrian, Kurd, and Armenian are pawns in the game of imperial enterprise played by the great powers, and we have no inclination to sit into that game.

Considering the present situation concretely and the charge that the Turks are destroying the Greeks and other Christians in Asia Minor, Mr. Larry Rue, the experienced correspondent in the near east of THE TRIBUNE Foreign News Service, calls attention to evidence that Moslem majorities behind the Greek lines are starving because of the devastation wrought in the Greek advance, that hundreds of thousands of Turks are destitute because of the burning of Moslem villages, and that, while Greek deportees were suffering, so also were Turks.

The gist of the matter, as we see it, is that selfish ambition, and not interest in the welfare of the races of Asia Minor, has controlled intervention in that region by the European powers. Great Britain and France, Greece and Italy have been struggling for their own objects, fomenting hostilities where, if they had been as altruistic as they pretend, they would have been harmonizing; grabbing for themselves when they should have been helping the local races or nationalities to get on their feet in their own right.

This is the old story of Europe's relations to Turkey and Asia Minor. Doubtless the case of the native minorities was cruelly hard under the stupid and oppressive rule of the sultans, but it was not bettered by western imperial politics. As far as we can see, it has been worsened. Rebellion has been encouraged, and then not properly supported. That meant reprisal and massacre. Submission would have been better, hard as it is. Intervention has been selfish, and no one has benefited by it thus far in anything like proportion to the cost.

Until the powers are ready to help Asia Minor instead of helping themselves to Asia Minor, the United States will do well to keep out of the situation and turn what moral indignation it feels against those who are responsible for a perpetual turmoil while pretending to pursue humanitarian ends.

Editorial of the Day

FRAMING A TARIFF.

[Ohio State Journal.]

While the senate has been proceeding rather slowly with its work on the tariff bill, up to yesterday morning it had already fixed the tentative rates of duty on formic acid and acetic anhydride. Now, what in the world does the average congressman know about formic acid and acetic anhydride and their proper status in the world market? Absolutely nothing. These rates of duty and a thousand others are determined in accordance with the measure of influence brought upon congressmen by persons who have a direct pecuniary interest in what the rates shall be. These persons often maintain their attorneys and their lobbies in Washington, but there is no people's lobby. If a congressman has no desire but to serve the public to the best of his ability, what way has he to find out what he ought to do with respect to each of hundreds upon hundreds of proposed tariff taxes on articles with whose uses in commerce he is not familiar?

The objection is urged against the President's plan of a flexible tariff, involving the delegation of authority to a permanent tariff commission of experts to alter duties from time to time as conditions change, that the big private interests might exert an undue influence upon such a commission. There would be not half so much chance of it as there is now that the interests will frame the tariff law, as they almost always have in the past.

BABY'S FIGHT FOR LIFE.

IN Brighton, England, Dr. D. Forbes made an investigation of the health of the babies according to the economic status of the parents. The study extended over a period of twenty years and was divided into a first section prior to 1913 and a second subsequent to the first of that year.

Those English towns do not change much in twenty years. Therefore, a division into four sections: One inherited by well to do; a second by men of fair incomes; a third by unskilled workers, and a fourth by the very poor. These would be much more fixed and unchanging than could be made in any city in America.

To these four groups he added a fifth—the illegitimates.

In all there were 51,000 babies of parents in these groups—enough to get away from individual peculiarities.

The study showed a baby death rate under 1 year of age of 60 for the babies of the well to do, 87 for those of the next group, 103 for those of the unskilled workers, 133 for those of the very poor, and 170 for the illegitimates.

Using the best group, the babies of the well to do, as a basis, and setting their death rate as 100, the other groups ranked 145, 170, 200, and 280.

Of the children of the very poor only one-half as many lived to be 1 year old as was the case of the well to do.

Comparing the five groups, so far as the death of babies during the first week of life was concerned, it was found that illegitimate babies are apt to die soon after birth, but that the babies of the other four groups were about on a par.

Getting born and then living a week is a very hazardous undertaking. The hazard is about as great among the rich as among the poor. Somehow somebody must find a way to make childbirth and early infancy safer in all the levels of society. The baby really does not get a good toe hold on life until he is 1 month old.

The babies of the well to do have a considerably better chance to live to reach 1 month than those of any other group. Those of the well paid artisans and employé class are not nearly so well off.

Summer diarrheas are much more destructive to illegitimate babies and babies of the poor than to those of the well to do, the death rates of these groups being 68, 42, and 26 respectively.

Pneumonia and bronchitis make up another group of diseases from which the babies of the poor suffer greatly.

In the last ten years baby life has been made very much safer than in the good old days. The improvement has been greater among the babies of the poor than among the babies of the well to do. When it comes to individual diseases, the poor have had more than their share of improvement when it comes to getting born and living that first difficult week.

Neither group has improved much, but such improvement as there has been has come to the poor. All in all, the last ten years has been the poor man's decade. The next ten years should witness further improvement. The general baby death rate of the poorer people is still much too high. It will come down as they learn mothercraft.

The diarrhea death rate is still much too high, especially among the babies of the poor. Better protected milk supplies should remedy that.

All babies suffer too much from pneumonia, coughs, and colds. Maybe better housing will help there.

How we are going to make it safer for babies to get born and how they can be helped to get a better hold on life in the first week I do not know, but it must be done somehow.

NEXT WINTER'S GREENS.

Mrs. J. writes: "I offer the following suggestions:

"For more moisture where a hot air furnace is used, have furnace man hang another iron pail, and higher. Our furnace evaporates three gallons a day, according to the heat, of course. The first winter I noticed coughs were harder to get rid of. Better since.

"About the use of bran. If the housewife will make her own cookies, adding 1½ to 2 cups of bran, packed, the bran will be eaten very readily. Any cookie recipe.

"Also, now is the time to gather greens, dandelions, etc. Clean, wash dry on a sheet, put in tin can and cook and eat next winter. They are good."

DON'T YOU DARE LAUGH, DICK!

M. K. R. writes: "As to 'How to keep 'em up,' I know. At the up and coming girls' school I attended, we used the kind of elastic garters worn by actresses and professional dancers—and nary a wrinkle in the hose, nor a ridge on the leg.

"Any large theatrical house carries these invaluables.

"If your neighbor cares to laugh at my continuing this little problem, slightly removed from things medical, why let him—I'm a legionite."

THERE'S LIME IN MILK.

Mrs. J. L. B. writes: "1. In one of your recent articles you stated that lime was good for one who has convulsions. Will you please tell me in what form it can be given?

"2. What causes convulsions in an adult past 50 years of age, who has never had any previous to this time, and has always had fairly good health?"

REPLY.

1. There are tablets on the market. Likewise sirups and solutions in considerable number. Perhaps milk and whole wheat bread and cereals contain as much lime as is needed. There are varieties of convulsions in which taking lime is of no service.

2. There are different causes. Has epilepsy been thought of?

STREET PAVING.

Chicago, May 20.—[Friend of the People.]—Will you please inform me if any of the streets named—Narragansett, Nagle, Natchez avenue, Neenah—will be paved this year. A petition has been sent in.

If any of the streets named are to be paved please inform me which ones.

A. A. B.

Ordinances have been passed by the city council for paving Narragansett and Natchez avenues, between Addison street and Belmont avenue, but as the assessment rolls have not been filed in court we cannot state at this time just when the improvements will be made. Notices will be sent to the property owners as soon as the assessments are spread and the rolls filed in court.

Nagle avenue, between Addison street and Belmont avenue, was ordered at a public hearing held April 28, 1922, but the property owners have filed a majority protest, which will stay the proceeding until April 28, 1923. This street, therefore, will not be paved this year.

We seem to have no proceeding for paving Neenah avenue between points mentioned.

EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary,
Board of Local Improvements.

A NERVY TRESPASSER.

Chicago, May 23.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I own a lot in Englewood. In the next property the man dug out his basement last fall and dumped several loads of clay on to my lot. His tenant also had two chicken coops on my lot. I notified him to remove all, but find it still there. 1. What can be done? 2. Should he pay the taxes on my lot for taking possession of it in this way?

L. G.

He cannot be made to pay the taxes on your lot. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PROBABLE IMPROVEMENT.

Chicago, May 19.—[Friend of the People.]—What, if any, steps have been taken toward paving of Sayre avenue north of Fullerton avenue? If paving is contemplated, how far north?

C. E. W.

An estimate has been ordered for paving a system of streets, including Sayre avenue, between Diversey and Fullerton avenues, etc. Public hearing will be held later.

WHY MARRY?

Dixon, Ill., May 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I was married in August, 1920, and lived with my wife until December of the same year. 1. Can I be compelled to live with her as long as I contribute to her support? 2. Can one go to another state and sue for divorce as long as she does not appear? 3. In what state can one get a divorce on the shortest time of residence? L. H. B.

1. Not if you contribute the sum which the law requires.

2. You should sue in the state of your residence.

3. It is contrary to our policy to assist in evasions of the law of the state of residence. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SERVICE IS RENDERED.

Chicago, May 20.—[Friend of the People.]—Once again, for the third time, I am complaining about the few garbage collections in the rear of the 7500 block of Murphy avenue. Collections are made only about once a month. I wish you'd wake up the department that is to attend to this.

This alley receives service once each week and was cleaned recently. Only half a can of garbage was found in the rear of the complainant's premises.

CINDER ALLEY.

Chicago, May 20.—[Friend of the People.]—Will the city dump a load of ashes or cinders in the alley between Kamerling avenue and Hirsch street, in the 4900 block? In wet weather the car owners are utterly unable to drive through this alley.

J. E. T.

A load of cinders was dumped in the alley at point mentioned as requested.

DOWNTRODDEN GERMANY.

Oak Park, Ill., May 20.—The following is a part of a letter written by an Oak Park woman now in Paris:

"Today I met a woman just from Berlin. She says she never saw so much eating and drinking in her life, or so many diamonds and automobiles. She did not see one indication anywhere in Germany of need or want. They were all crazy the night the compact was signed with Russia. One man said to her, 'We don't need America now; in ten years we'll beat the whole world—we have Russia.' Another said, 'Let America and England get out and we'll chase the French with sticks.' They eat and drink all day long and evening. She said that one hour's food and drink bill would pay their interest. Not a farm touched, not a fence rail out of place.

"Then she came to France. Every old woman, every child of seven years, is carrying a brick or a bit of wire to clean the land. Old women are cleaning up cemeteries all shot up. Every flower or budding tree is dug about and cherished. Not an acre, not a house, fit to till or live in. France has it all to suffer, all to do. This woman went into Germany unprejudiced, now she is seeing red. She says she is just bursting with the injustice, the iniquity of it all, and the insolence of the Germans. She's mad clear through. I have not heard a French person mention the war or mention Germany." E. L.

HELP THE HOME BUILDERS.

Chicago, May 20.—What are we doing about the great army of men and women who want to become home owners? They are the backbone of the nation. They settle down and become interested in a community because they are a part of it.

They are the real savers of the nation. They make gardens so as to reduce their living expenses—and the saving goes into the bank.

Are the banks giving these penny savers the support they deserve? It is possible to build homes today—small ones to be sure—between $3,500 and $4,500. But it is almost impossible to get loans on these small homes.

Hundreds of people on the northwest side have purchased their lots and want to build the cheaper home, but cannot do so, for the banks don't want to bother with anything less than $6,000 or $8,000.

Won't some one come forward and help us to help these people—these penny savers—who amass the dollars by their thrift? We have no more substantial citizen than they. MARTIN POWROZNIK.

EVOLUTION AND SCRIPTURE.

Oak Park, Ill., May 19.—From an editorial from the pen of a celebrated New York clergyman I would like to quote the following:

"It is foolish for a man to argue against evolution on the ground of anything he finds in the Bible. To claim that evolution is a contradiction of the teachings of Jesus, and that an evolutionist is an infidel and a dangerous man, is absurd.

"Any Christian is free to be an evolutionist, if in his judgment the argument for the evolutionary hypothesis is sound. All that he should desire is the truth, and the sole point of concern in this matter of evolution is: Is the doctrine true?

"What effect the doctrine might have on certain stories in the book of Genesis has nothing to do with the question. The book of Genesis says man was created. Science says man was evolved. Is this a contradiction? Not at all. If a man has evolved he was created. Evolution is a method of creation."

The theory of evolution is not contradicted either by the Scripture or by ascertained fact or by common sense.

"A fire mist and a planet,
A crystal and a cell,
A jelly fish and a saurian,
And caves where cave men dwell—
Then a sense of love and duty
And a face turned from the clod—
Some call it evolution,
And others call it God."

ELLA B. TUCKER.

SPEAKING OF HYSTERICS.

Chicago, May 19.—Have you and others got over the foolish hysterics about labor bombs and fires? When some bandits kill a policeman or a Jew has a fire do not forget to blame it on union labor. Keep on doing that and help put innocent men in jail and you will surely help union labor in Chicago.

Why, everybody except the citizens' committee and their gang is laughing at you.

If you wish to do some good, why not investigate the "citizens' committee" and their hired and imported bandits, gunmen and sluggers?

And let me tell you that neither you nor the "citizens' committee" with your foul tactics can crush union labor in Chicago.

There is not one union man in Chicago working today under the so-called Landis award.

Why not print the truth and the facts for once?

But of course everybody knows you are the greatest lying newspaper in the world.

If you had any sense about right or wrong you would thank God for the union labor workers. They are the most honest and law abiding people in Chicago today. CHARLES BERGGREN.

THE "LUXURY" OF OUR COUNTY JAIL.

Chicago, May 19.—The article in "The Voice" this morning, signed "P. G.," is so un-American that I am forced to think that there must be some hidden link between the barbarian and some of your Voice writers. They certainly write as if some one was feeding them raw meat. If "P. G." is jealous of what prisoners get in the shape of heat in the bastile, I feel sorry for him. If he has any delusion there is any luxury connected with the Cook county jail let him go over and stay one night in the animal cage (as he calls it). This would forever cure him of his jealousy, if he would partake of one of their breakfasts, dinners or suppers he would not begrudge these unfortunates their meals on Sunday. Now, Mr. Editor, as you were very liberal with space for "P. G.," have a heart that this article may also be given space. R. G. T.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

TO THE CUCKOO.

By John Logan.

Hail, beauteous stranger of the grove!
Thou messenger of Spring!
Now Heaven repairs thy rural seat,
And woods thy welcome ring!

What time the daisy decks the green,
Thy certain voice we hear;
Hast thou a star to guide thy path,
Or mark the rolling year?

Delightful visitant! with thee
I hail the time of flowers;
And hear the sound of music sweet
From birds amid the bowers.

. . . . .

Sweet bird! thy bower is ever green,
Thy sky is ever clear;
Thou hast no sorrow in thy song,
No winter in thy year!

O, could I fly, I'd fly with thee!
We'd make, with joyful wing,
Our annual visit o'er the globe,
Companions of the Spring!

AL SMITH MAY BE TAMMANY'S ACE TO TRICK HEARST

Miller vs. Ex-Governor Is Probable Outcome.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

ARTICLE V.

New York, May 27.—[Special.]—While further indications that Gov. Miller will be a candidate for renomination were forthcoming today it also developed that former Gov. Al Smith may be selected to oppose him, after all.

It appears that Mr. Smith has not foreclosed acceptance of the Democratic nomination for the governorship and would not decline the candidacy if drafted by the Democratic convention next September. On authority that it is not possible to question I am able to present the following outline of the present attitude of the former governor:

Mr. Smith does not aspire to hold any public office again. He feels that he has had enough of office holding to last a lifetime. He is hard at work managing the business of the United States Trucking corporation and wants to stick to that job.

Really Tired of Public Office.

To those friends who have suggested that he could take the senatorship without retiring from his private business, as he would be compelled to do if he became governor again, he has stated that he has no more inclination to run for senator than for governor. When he says he is through with public office holding he means what he says and he assumes it is generally conceded that the senatorship is a public not a private office.

That's the way he feels about the matter from a purely personal and selfish standpoint. But there is another angel which he cannot ignore—that of obedience to the command of his party. He feels that he owes a debt of gratitude to his party which he never can discharge. His party never deserted him in the hour of need and he will not desert his party if it should decide it needed him as standard bearer.

Won't Stand for Hearst.

Consequently, he does not say that he would not accept nomination to the governorship or the senatorship under any circumstances, for there are circumstances, for which conceivably would require him to accept either one as his party might decree.

The only definite foreclosure of action to which he has committed himself irrevocably is the determination to run for no office on the same ticket with Hearst.

Nomination of Hearst for governor would absolve him from any obligation to party. If the Democratc party should nominate Hearst it would demonstrate that it scorned Smith and waived the right to command his service as a candidate on the same ticket.

All of which is believed to mean that Tammany, if determined to prevent the nomination of Hearst, will endeavor to do so with such possible candidates as Franklin Roosevelt or Justice Robert F. Wagner, but will hold Al Smith up the sleeve as a trump card to play as a last resort in the convention.

Bitter Campaign in Sight.

With either Hearst or Smith as a candidate against Miller the governorship contest would become one of the most spectacular in the country from the start. In any event there will be marked division in the Democratic ranks.

If Hearst should be named the anti-Hearst Democrats would troop off the reservation, while if a candidate unacceptable to Hearst should be nominated, the publisher, according to present indications, would support a third ticket, probably headed by his friend, Maj. La Guardia, an independent Republican.

If Hearst wins out a good deal will be heard of the home rule issue on which Hearst and Hylan are assailing Gov. Miller daily. Miller, they complain, put through legislation robbing New York City of its freedom of action on the transportation and port questions.

If Smith should be nominated he could not, it is conceived, justifiably attack Miller on this ground, for Smith was sufficiently in sympathy with the port development legislation to accept appointment by the governor as a member of the port authority commission.

Valuable Man on Board.

He is accounted one of the ablest members of the commission and his constructive ideas on the question of relieving port congestion and expanding port facilities to meet not only present but future needs have gone far toward justifying the legislation.

Gov. Miller has been accused of playing politics in appointing his well nigh successful opponent in 1920 and potential opponent of the future to a position identifying him with a policy of the Republican administration. To which Gov. Miller replies:

"I don't think any one can, with reason, accuse me of playing politics in appointing the man who gave me such a drubbing in New York City two years ago. I thought the vote he received indicated beyond all doubt that he had the confidence of the people of New York City."

As to the question of home rule Gov. Miller said the state stepped in to remedy a condition which city had failed to remedy and lacked power to remedy adequately because the coöperation of New Jersey was necessary. The transit problem has been solved in the same way, said the governor, by the state because the city lacked the authority to act.

Label Him a Bureaucrat.

Chairman Pell of the Democratic state committee says that the fight against Miller will be based on the expansion of bureaucracy and censorship, and the extravagance of the state administration, which, he say, has increased in expenditures $47,000,000. Gov. Miller says that on the contrary the expense of state administration has been reduced $28,500,000, of which amount $17,600,000 has been saved to the taxpayers of New York City.

"The record is there; there can be no mistake about it," the governor says. "That sum is no bagatelle. Either the taxpayers have got the benefit of it or else it has been wasted by the city administration. For the Democrats to say that the taxpayers have not benefited would involve an indictment of their own party for the management of the affairs of New York City."

YAQUIS START A REIGN OF TERROR IN NORTH MEXICO

Tombstone, Ariz., May 27.—Wholesale murders and robberies by Yaqui Indians in Sonora were reported here today by American refugees from the Yaqui valley.

No Americans have been killed thus far, they said, all victims being Mexicans.

For the last three weeks around Esperanza the Indians have been looting and slaying, according to the arrivals. Many Mexicans have been killed and numbers are missing since the raids began.

Americans are fleeing to the border for safety, according to the travelers. An American farmer was robbed by the Indians of 6,000 pounds of flour and was threatened with death.

Petitions have been sent to the state government of Sonora asking for troops to quell the uprising. The cause of the uprising was unknown to the Americans reaching here.

EXTRAORDINARY CASE OF GIRL, 20, TURNING INTO A CHILD OF 4

Columbus, O., May 27.—Bernice Reddick, 20, ward of the state bureau of juvenile research, who several months ago periodically lapsed into the personality of "Polly, aged 4," taking on all the characteristics of a small child, is sufficiently recovered to be placed on the state pay roll, Dr. H. H. Goddard, director of the bureau, said today.

Bernice hasn't changed to Polly for several months, Dr. Goddard said. Before she ceased her occasional existence, "Polly" was educated to the age of 15. Unable to read or write when she first appeared as the result of a strange lapse in Bernice's memory, "Polly" learned to do both before she ceased to appear.

The baffling change in the mentality of the girl appeared almost invariably after exertion or excitement, Dr. Goddard said, but she has been doing clerical work for the bureau for several months and has been allowed to visit briefly with relatives and there has been no recurrence.

STUDENT WEDS TEACHER, KEEPS SECRET A YEAR

Parsons, Kas., May 27.—Welch, Okla., gave a gasp the other night when Arnold Speaker, valedictorian of the 1922 senor class in high school, called the board of education over to the side of the stage and introduced Miss Mabel Jennings, a teacher in the city schools, as his wife. The high school student and the school teacher were married at Columbus, May 21, last year, and kept the affair secret until Arnold completed his school work. The board bought the couple a silver set.

MADER, FREED WITH "BIG TIM," WAXES DEFIANT

Bondsman Insists Pair Quit B. T. C.

scheduled was satisfactory. He declined to approve the bond, however, because, he said, Carey already was on "more than ninety" bonds. Judge Miller accepted the bond regardless of Mr. Volini's recommendation.

When the police murders occurred on May 9, resulting in the indictment of Murphy, Mader, and Shea, Murphy already was under $500,000 bonds pending the outcome of his appeal from conviction in the federal courts on three conspiracy charges in connection with the Dearborn Street station mail robbery.

Judge Miller's decision to grant bail marked the close of a bitterly fought habeas corpus hearing, beginning Tuesday. Petitions were entered by Attorneys Charles E. Erbstein and Francis W. Walker suing for the release of Murphy and Mader on the plea that the state had no evidence against them.

When Judge Miller, after reading a lengthy decision upholding his act, announced he would permit their release, Mrs. Mildred Mader and Mrs. Murphy, seated in the courtroom, leaned over and kissed their husbands.

Mrs. Veronica Murphy, Tim's gray haired mother, who invariably springs militantly to his defense when he enmeshes himself with the law, jumped up from her obscure seat in a corner of the courtroom and made her way to Tim's chair.

"Hurray for the Irish!" she exclaimed, pounding "Big Tim" on the back with her umbrella.

"See what they get for holding my Timmy in jail when he didn't do nothing. Why was Charlie Fitzmorris afraid to show his face around here if he had anything on my Tim?"

Ordered to Stay in State.

Necessary technicalities dispensed with, Tim approached the judge's bench.

"Your honor, if it's alright with you, I'd like to take a little run down to French Lick for a few days. I'm all tired out," he plead.

"No you don't," frowned the court. "You stay right here."

A similar request by Mader to go to Cincinnati also was refused.

Judge Miller based his decision on the ground that none of the twenty-one witnesses, most of whom were listed as having appeared before the grand jury, gave testimony which indicated overwhelmingly the guilt of Murphy and Mader.

John Miller, however, under indictment as the driver of the automobile containing at least two others responsible for the killing of Policeman Thomas Clarke and Acting Lieut. Terrence Lyons of West Park police, and who is considered one of the state's star witnesses, refused to testify.

Fail to Quiz Fitzmorris.

When brought into court in custody of bailiffs he stood on his constitutional rights, and thus the court could not avail itself of the substance of alleged confessions made by him.

Defense attorneys, also, were not successful in forcing to the witness stand Chief of Police Fitzmorris or Capt. John Norton.

Though deputy sheriffs and a deputy coroner haunted the offices of the chief and even his residence during the last two days of the hearing watching their chance to subpoena him, which would have forced his producing the alleged confession of Miller, the chief invariably was "out." Neither could Norton be found.

Judge Miller, in his decision, took occasion to criticise the chief, intimating Fitzmorris obviously was aware he was wanted in court and declaring that the chief would have to take the responsibility for his failure to allow himself to be subpoenaed.

Fitzmorris, returning to his office after the smoke of battle had cleared, blandly denied he knew of the frantic search by the deputies. He said he had been absent on a thorough inspection of station houses by day and had assiduously played bridge at friends' houses by night.

State's Attorney Crowe refused to comment on the outcome of the fight. He also declined to say if new indictments against the labor men in connection with the death of Clarke would be asked when the grand jury convenes Wednesday.

False Deputy Sheriff Fined on Woman's Charge

It cost Linn Wolf, 4721 Calumet avenue, $19 and costs to pose as a deputy sheriff and force unwelcome attentions upon Miss Grace Leonard, 4717 Calumet avenue, yesterday, in the Englewood court.

"He called me up Friday and told me to meet him on a corner," Miss Leonard told Judge John F. Haas. "He said he was a deputy sheriff. I grew suspicious, and signaled a policeman. He's been writing me annoying letters for a month."

Greets Wife as He Passes Into Room to Kill Self

MAYOR FOR HOUR HANKERS TO CAN MR. WILLIAMSON

Commissioner Is Superfluous, Scout's View.

Chicago's city government and traffic direction reins were in the hands of a new administration yesterday morning from 11 to 12. And the first thing the new "mayor," Eugene Clapp of Boy Scout Troop 18, decided was that the city needs no law enforcer.

"Give me 200 extra policemen and I'll clean up the crime situation," he declared. "I don't think we need 1,000 more police, but I am in favor of strict examinations. And I think the city government ought to coöperate with the press. I'm strong for higher salaries for teachers and the 5 cent fare."

On his accession to the city gubernatorial chair, "Mayor" Clapp, who is 15 years old and a student at Lane Technical High school, was catechized by Mayor Thompson. After Mayor Thompson had explained to the temporary incumbent the number of copies of the constitution that had been distributed and pointed out sundry other methods he had pursued in trying to elevate the youth of the city and inculcate love of civic purity, Mayor Thompson faced the mayor pro tem and looked him in the eye.

Favors Riverview Park.

"Now," he said, in his most suave manner, "they are talking about trying to close Riverview park to the children. I want to ask you as mayor, 'Are we going to close Riverview park to the children of Chicago?'"

Mayor Thompson smiled encouragingly.

"We are not," said the mayor pro tem.

"You and I are unanimous," intoned Mayor Thompson. "We don't believe like Mrs. Bowen and some of the women who want to close the gates against the children."

Chief Fitzmorris was replaced temporarily by Stuart White, 17 years old, 4727 Kenmore avenue, a student at Nicholas Senn high school. The new chief's first act was to call out the official automobile and take a ride about the city to see that the law was properly enforced. Under him was a detachment of Boy Scouts who served as traffic policemen in the loop.

Scout Richard McCoy, 14 years old, of 840 Roscoe street, was corporation counsel. Like his predecessor, Samuel Ettelson, he was shrewdly laconic and refused to be enticed into making rash or sweeping statements about any person or policy.

City Officials Thanked.

The "mayor" called his cabinet together shortly before noon and they passed resolutions, properly attested, thanking the city fathers for turning the city over to them and expressing appreciation to the boys' week committee of the Rotary club for its successful efforts to make boys' week go across big.

Other city officials were Everett Lewys, city attorney; Russell Shuler, fire chief; Marcus Denny, health commissioner; Laurence Laumann, city controller; Burdetts Hatch, superintendent of schools, and David Krueger, chief justice of the Municipal court.

Al Made Fatal Error of Mistaking Girl for Wife

"I thought she was my wife," was the explanation offered by Albert Rowe, 1820 South Trumbull avenue, yesterday afternoon, when he was arrested on complaint of Miss Ethel B. Scheps, 4218 Ellis avenue, who accuses him of being a "masher."

According to Miss Scheps, Rowe followed her and took hold of her arm. She tried to hit him and he was getting away in the crowd when she called a policeman.

Watch Hotels of 2 Cities in Quest of "Model Maid"

Hotels, both in Chicago loop and in Milwaukee, are being kept under surveillance by police in the hope of locating Mrs. Etta Perry Heil, identified by the victim as the "model maid," who stole over $15,000 worth of jewels and clothing from the home of Mrs. Owen Brewer, 411 Briar place, last Wednesday. Although no word has been heard of Mrs. Heil since her disappearance, Sheffield avenue police expect her arrest soon.

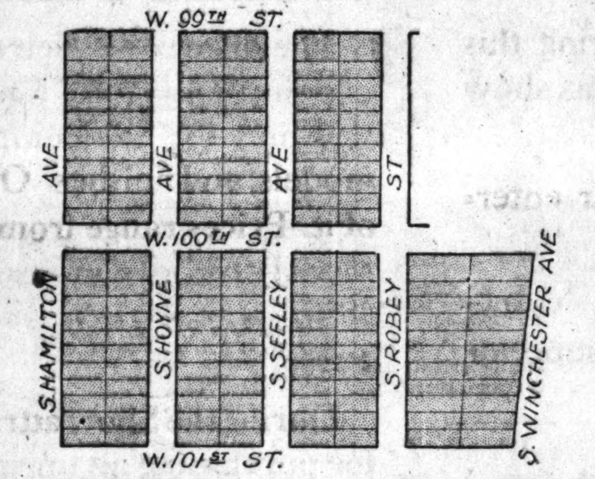
BEAUTIFUL BEVERLY HILLS



LOTS AT $40 Per Foot

SPECIAL OPENING SALE TODAY, TOMORROW AND TUESDAY, MAY 28th, 29th AND 30th

As Fine a Residential District as Can Be Found in Chicago

PRAISE of this beautiful district to the people of Chicago is hardly necessary. Chicagoans already know Campbell's Beverly Hills. They are coming here in ever-increasing numbers. Big business men, bankers, merchants; Swift, Wilson, and Armour men are moving in—this well-to-do class most assuredly realizes the full worth of a DISTRICT LAID OUT PRIMARILY FOR HOME OWNERS. Churches and schools within a few blocks can be reached without crossing Railroads or Street Car Tracks.

Campbell's Beverly Hills Addition Is the Ideal Location for a Home

Located on the top of the Hill—85 feet above the level of the lake—at 99th and Robey streets. IT IS THE LAST OF THE "RESTRICTED DISTRICTS ON THE HILL." The location is ideal for RAPID TRANSIT TO THE LOOP. It is three blocks from the 99th Street Beverly Hills Station on the Rock Island Suburban Line and two blocks from Longwood Drive, where property is selling for $100 to $125 per front foot.

Any lot in Campbell's Beverly Hills Section is a bargain. "Our rigid restrictions are forcing this property to grow rapidly in value."

Zoning restrictions prohibit the building of cheap homes, keep out flats and duplex houses, ban common brick sides to houses; make it obligatory to have building line 30 to 35 feet deep. THIS, TOGETHER WITH THE SPLENDID NATURAL LOCATION, ABSOLUTELY INSURES THE INCREASE IN VALUE OF THIS PROPERTY.

EVERY LOT IS A BARGAIN AT $40 PER FOOT. THE BEGINNING OF ALL PROSPERITY IS THROUGH PROFITABLE INVESTMENT. GOOD REAL ESTATE, PROPERLY AND WISELY SELECTED, IS THE SAFEST SORT OF INVESTMENT.

MAKE THIS INVESTMENT—PROVIDE FOR YOUR FUTURE PROSPERITY. LIVE ON YOUR PROPERTY, THUS GAINING A DIRECT BENEFIT, AND AT THE SAME TIME SEE IT INCREASE IN VALUE.

Call at our Branch Office, 99th and Seeley Ave., and meet our representative. Be among the first to make a selection. Get your choice! Phone Beverly 3346 for appointment.

TERMS: $250 cash, $25 a month. Improvements include water, sewer, gas, cement sidewalks. If desired, we will help you finance your home.

REPUBLICAN ROW BALKS CLOTURE TO SPEED TARIFF

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—Any possibility of a cloture agreement as a means of expediting consideration of the tariff bill seemed remote today when a conference of senate Republicans broke up in a row.

Another conference will be held on Wednesday, but even if a cloture resolution is favored it is unlikely that it will ever be presented to the senate in view of the threats of the Democrats to filibuster against it.

The Republicans were called together to discuss the proposal of Senator Kellogg [Minn.] for an amendment to the rules by which debate could be limited during the consideration of tariff and appropriation bills by vote of a majority instead of two-thirds of the senate.

McCormick Is Against It.

Strong opposition developed to the Kellogg proposal. Senators McCormick [Ill.] and Moses [N. H.] were among those opposing it. Senator McCormick declared that if debate had been limited during the discussion of the treaty of Versailles the United States would now be a member of the league of nations.

Both senators indicated they would not be bound by action of a conference attended by only about half the Republicans and indicated their displeasure by walking out of the room.

Senator Lodge [Mass.], Republican leader, was another who objected to action on the resolution without further consideration.

Steel Wire Duties Cut.

Duties on various kinds of steel wire were reduced somewhat from the original rates of the McCumber tariff bill on the motion of the senate finance committee today. The reductions, however, failed to bring the ratesdown to what the Democrats and some Republicans considered reasonable.

The duty on ordinary iron or steel wire valued at more than 6 cents a pound was made 25 per cent instead of 35 per cent, as originally favored by the finance committee, and 20 per cent, American valuation, as in the house bill. A motion by Senator Robinson [Ark.] to cut it to 15 per cent was defeated by a vote of 30 to 38.

The duty on insulated wire was fixed at 35 per cent instead of 40 per cent, as originally proposed, and 30 per cent as in the house bill. The rate on wire rope and wire strand also was reduced similarly to 35 per cent.

JAPAN EXPECTS TO ACT QUICKLY ON YAP TREATY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, May 27.—Now that the Shantung treaty ratification is ready for exchange with Peking, the privy council is taking up the rest of the Washington treaties all of which will be ratified within two months.

The Yap treaty will be given precedence. There is no disposition here to delay ratification which is taking its regular course.

Japan is not awaiting the action of Great Britain and France but is considering the treaties as a Pacific ocean matter. There is no reason to doubt that the treaties will not proceed smoothly.

A Perfect Shampoo

Over 85% Pure Olive Oil

Nothing has been discovered to equal Olive Oil as a Perfect Shampoo—ask any professional Hairdresser. Olive Oil penetrates the scalp, nourishes the hair roots, and at the same time dissolves and removes dandruff.

Most shampoos are dark and heavy, making hair coarse and dull, whereas Olive Oil is light and delicate, giving the hair a natural brilliancy and, while stimulating the growth, the hair remains soft and beautiful.

Fried Chicken

Real country fried chicken, hot from the pan, is one of the specialties making this the most popular dining place Chicago has ever known.

Here you may have breast of chicken (all white meat) with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce for only - - - 65c

All dark meat of chicken - - - 55c

At other good dining places you will pay $1.25 (or more) for the same portion. And here you get it immediately while elsewhere you must wait a half-hour or so while it is being cooked.

No matter how hot and "sticky" it is on the street the North American Restaurant is kept cool and comfortable and dry by one of the finest ventilating systems ever installed. From 160 feet above the street level, gigantic suction fans draw pure, fresh air into a big concrete chamber where thousands of tiny streams of cold water wash and cool it. Then the air is thoroughly dried before it enters the restaurant. Here, therefore, you breathe pure, fresh air which has been washed and cooled and dried (not damp tunnel air). And the air in the restaurant is completely changed every three minutes.

To further increase your dining comfort we have ready for you at all times (in addition to the many good things which are continually coming hot from the pan) the finest selection of cold dishes you ever ate. And by serving yourself you avoid the "high cost of service" and get big portions of the finest food at low prices. For instance:

Cold Ham boiled in our own kitchen and Potato Salad	40c	Cold Fresh Shrimps (one doz.) with Chili Sauce	30c
Cold Tongue with Potato Salad	45c	Cold Fish	40c
Cold Roast Beef with Potato Salad	50c	Chicken Salad	50c
Assorted Cold Meats with Potato Salad	50c	Fresh Lobster Salad	60c
Cold Breast of Chicken with Potato Salad	65c	Combination Salad	30c
		Asparagus Salad	35c
		Ice Cream, and a big portion	15c
		Iced Tea	10c

Breakfast here is delightful

An Individual 2-cup pot of coffee, with lots of real cream - - - - - - 10c

Honey Waffles, with three strips of bacon, or Mickleberry's Old Farm Sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey - - - - 25c

Bacon and Eggs. Two fresh eggs, fried in butter and four strips of bacon - - - 30c

Open, as usual, Decoration Day

INTERIORS

The value of the Mirror in a room cannot be overestimated, especially in city living where the rooms are none too sunny.

The mirror is in effect an added window, catching and reflecting every ray of light.

Mirrors skillfully used together with an orange bowl or vase of marigolds will transform a dismal room into one of light and cheer.

Mirrors are often made like windows, being so draped as to escape detection.

PARENT-TEACHER COUNCIL ASSAILS RIVERVIEW TRIPS

Urges Mayor to Stop His School Excursions.

Mayor Thompson's Riverview park excursions for school children received the condemnation of the state board of the Illinois Council of Parent-Teacher associations at its annual meeting yesterday at the Woman's City club.

Mrs. Mark P. Mears, president of the council, was authorized to send the following petition to Mayor Thompson:

"Whereas, the distribution of free tickets to Riverview park is productive of evil in the following and many other ways:

Causes Big Waste.

"1. Educational and financial loss of $20,000 per day to the school; loss to the children impossible to be estimated;

"2. Tempting the children to the use of money needed, in many instances, for family upkeep;

"3. Introducing them to unwholesome and illegal forms of amusement, the penny arcade, shooting galleries, and other gambling devices;

"4. Because of the insufficient chaperonage and care of the children;

"Therefore we, the state board of the Illinois Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, in session assembled, do hereby petition the mayor of Chicago to discontinue the practice of distributing free tickets to Riverview or any other amusement park to the school children of Chicago."

Local Organizations Opposed.

"This petition," said Mrs. Mears yesterday, "is from the state board, but I know that most of the local organizations have been opposed to the Riverview excursions for some time and have been trying to work against them."

Mrs. Henry W. Cheney, president of the Illinois League of Women Voters, said yesterday that it was impossible for her to take any official action in the name of that organization because it was state-wide.

"But as an individual and as a mother," she continued, "I wish vigorously to protest against this Riverview situation.

"Mayor Thompson has abundant opportunity to give Chicago's school children recreation combined with wholesome education without sacrificing valuable school hours. Chicago's wonderful parks, Field museum, Art institute, furnish the best possible avenue, provided trained and child loving chaperons are in charge."

"When the mayor said I was always against everything he was for he was perfectly right," was the comment of Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, president of the Woman's City club, on the mayor's reply to her recent letter of protest about the excursions.

COTTON MEN OF SOUTH OPPOSE SOLDIER BONUS

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—Southern manufacturers of cotton goods declared themselves in resolutions adopted at the closing session of the annual convention of the American Cotton Manufacturers' association today as favoring the following:

Defeat of the soldiers' bonus legislation.

Repeal of title III of the transportation act establishing a railroad labor board.

A further reduction in freight rates.

An early revision of tax laws to relieve the burdens on industry.

Prompt passage of the tariff bill.

Continuance of the present qualified embargo on dyes as provided in the McCumber tariff bill.

Non-interference by the government in the affairs of the industries of the country.

Coöperative marketing of raw cotton as a means of stabilizing prices.

In adopting resolutions in opposition to soldiers bonus legislation the association declared that the bonus is not desired by a majority of soldiers and sailors and that it is "an insult to the exalted spirit that made heroic the men of the United States."

Russia Spares Treasures of Roman Catholic Church

MOSCOW, May 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—An agreement has been reached between the Vatican and Foreign Minister Tchitcherin whereby the soviet government will except Catholic churches of Russia in their campaign of requisitioning church treasurers for the famine relief fund. Instead, the Russian will accept payment equivalent to the value of the articles from the Vatican treasury.

ALL ABOAR-R-D! STYX FIRST STOP; CHECK BAGGAGE?

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

How much cargo are you going to take with you when you die?

It's an important question; it involves your future happiness and governs just what geographic spot you will occupy in heaven, according to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who delivered the last address of his American tour yesterday afternoon at Orchestra hall.

You, just as you are, is the first and most important piece of luggage in the cargo that will go from Englewood to the celestial realms, says Sir Arthur. Item No. 2 will be your education. If you never could do long division in this world, you'll be just as baffled by it when you are working heavenly sums on an etheric slate with a spiritual pencil. It is, therefore, never too late to learn something here, the lecturer declares, because it will all help in the other world.

Guard Your Esthetic.

The last tabulated part of the cargo is your spiritual character. If you were solemn and serious in life, you'll be solemn and serious when you come back in a seance. If you were mischievous and played practical jokes your etheric body will be pulling chairs away from material folks in drawing rooms.

"Heaven," the speaker maintained, "is so like earth, only much more lovely, that it is often hard to convince some of the people that they are really dead. They think they are in some beautiful part of the world which they have never seen before. They say to themselves: 'This isn't what the Rev. Mr. So and So told us heaven would be like.'"

In congratulating America upon its interest in spiritism and in the possession of the best mediums in the world, the English spiritist said, "But your American police force is so efficient that it drives most of your mediums over to England and we get the benefit."

Changes American Thought.

As a result of the awakened interest in psychic research evidence during the past two or three months, Sir Arthur said, "American thought will never be the same again."

Conan Doyle and his wife, Lady Doyle, with their three children, left Chicago last night for New York where they expect to sail for England the first week in June.

3 LITTLE BOYS DIE OF INJURIES AUTOS INFLICTED

Driver of Taxicab Held by Police.

Nine year old Anthony Grolick, 521 North Union avenue, died in the County hospital yesterday morning after having been struck Friday by a cab driven by Harry Levy. The chauffeur is held by the West Chicago avenue police.

Robert E. Cordes, 6 years old, 608 North Central Park avenue, who received a fractured skull when struck by John E. Schute's car Friday, died yesterday.

Arthur Stieven, 13 years old, 3610 Honore street, was killed yesterday while riding a bicycle at Lincoln and West 73d streets by an automobile driven by William Kraus, 2047 West Adams street. He fell from his wheel, while "hanging on" a truck, in the path of Kraus' car.

William Hoffman, 3516 West 63d street, an employé of the Illinois Bell Telephone company, died from a fractured skull sustained when he was knocked from his motorcycle by a Yellow taxicab.

Phillipo and Jasper Giardino, 5245 West Chicago avenue, suffered cuts and bruises yesterday when their motor truck collided with a taxicab at Larrabee street and Chicago avenue. Neither was seriously hurt.

Morris Zukin, 70 years old, 8258 Marshfield avenue, is not expected to recover of internal injuries and a fractured skull sustained when his spirited horse, attached to a fruit wagon, bolted at the backfire of an automobile Friday, and threw the driver to the curb.

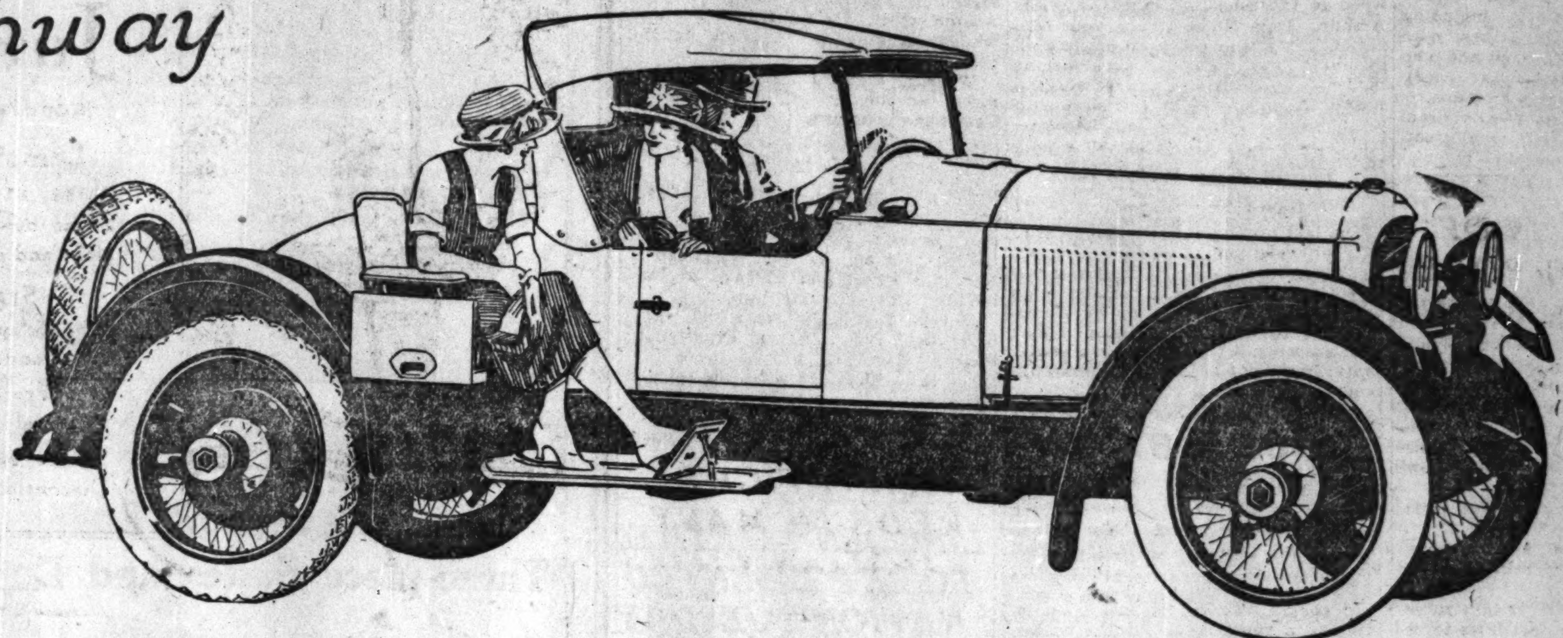
PAIGE

Master of the Highway

Touring Car
$2195



Paige Daytona Six-66.
Price $2495, f. o. b. factory.
Other models listed below.

Six~66 Daytona model, stock chassis travels 25 miles at 96.98 miles per hour

May 7th, at the Cotati Speedway in California, Earl Cooper drove the Daytona Model Stock Chassis Paige Six-66 25 miles in 15 minutes 27.95 seconds—or at the rate of 96.98 miles per hour.

This is an official A. A. A. record, with the chassis strictly checked as to stock status by the officials of the A. A. A. before and after the event.

A new world's speedway record for a strictly stock chassis! Practically 97 miles per hour! The former world's stock chassis speedway record for this distance was made by the Paige Six-66 Daytona model at the rate of 90 miles an hour at Uniontown, Pa., Speedway a year ago.

That record stood for a year unchallenged. Apparently no car maker had a stock chassis which could equal it. So it remained for the Paige to break its own world's record. Now the Paige has set a mark so high—has come through with a performance so wonderful—that it seems destined to remain a stock chassis record for years to come.

You, as a prospective Paige owner, are interested in this stock chassis record because it shows you the tremendous power and stamina in the Paige chassis. It proves to you that the Paige is as remarkable in performance as it is beautiful in appearance. It substantiates as nothing else could our claim that the Paige is in fact Master of the Highway—that it will pass any car on the road.

You may never want to drive faster than boulevard speed—any more than a man who owns thoroughbred horses necessarily wants to race them. But the pleasure of owning a thoroughbred horse is all the keener when you think of what he could do if you should ask him. And the satisfaction of owning a Paige Six-66 is likewise greater because you are Master of the Highway in any situation.

Contrast its amazing power and speed with Paige performance in the hands of a woman in difficult traffic. Bring your wife or daughter with you when you are looking at the Paige. We would like to have her drive it—to see how gentle it is, how obedient, how simple, how utterly easy to manage.

The Paige Six-66 is, we believe, the best car in all 'round performance available today. If you were to pay $10,000 you could not buy its superior for your average daily needs around town or touring. But the Paige sells at no fancy price. It is a car of big production. It is the third largest selling car above $2,000, and the price of the touring car is $2195.

Please avail yourself of our invitation to bring your family to test the Paige—or permit us to call for you at your convenience.

FOES' DRUMFIRE STIRS DAUGHERTY TO DROP BARRAGE

Reviews Morse Affair as Caraway Hits Again.

despite the widespread public sympathy with Mr. Morse and the extraordinary number of petitions signed in his behalf, the action of the President was based entirely and solely upon reports of the department of justice and medical authorities.

Report to U. S. Marshal.

"Briefly, these examinations were made by civilian physicians and by officers constituting a special board of the medical department of the United States army. Under date of Nov. 1, 1911, Dr. E. C. Davis of Atlanta, Ga., made a report to W. H. Johnson, marshal at Atlanta, based on an examination of Mr. Morse. Dr. Davis reported symptoms indicating changes, probably indicating a beginning of Bright's disease, and said as to Mr. Morse:

"'I do not believe in his present condition, with the influence of mental worry added to his physical ailments, that he would ordinarily live more than one or two years unless treated with extreme care and thoroughly protected from arduous work and exposure.

"'His diet ought also to be looked after carefully on account of evidences that were found of the beginning of Bright's disease.'

Different Sort of Finding.

"Under the same date a report was made to Mr. Johnson by Dr. W. S. Elkin of Atlanta, the concluding paragraph of which was as follows:

"'I do not believe that Mr. Morse is suffering from any serious organic trouble nor is his health being materially affected by his present confinement. The nervous strain that he has been under for the last three years would easily account for his loss in weight. I do not think that further confinement will materially shorten the prisoner's life or permanently or seriously impair his health.'"

The statement includes numerous other reports from other private and army doctors, concluding with a letter of Surgeon General George H. Torney of the U. S. army, Dec. 30, 1911, which says:

"The board returned from Fort McPherson yesterday. In view of the clear and nontechnical language of this excellent report, no interpretation of it by this office seems to be necessary. It may be said, however, that it is the opinion of the board, in which I concur, that in view of the mental depression of the prisoner, all recuperative power being in abeyance, no improvement under existing circumstances can be hoped for; his death may be expected unless the depressing influence of confinement be removed."

"Who Is He Sifting, Anyhow?"

In challenging Mr. Daugherty "to state how much of the $500,000 war graft prosecution fund he is spending to hire sleuths and gumshoe men to shadow members of congress," Senator Caraway read a telegram he had received from J. H. Anderson of Little Rock, Ark., stating that an agent of the attorney general had arrived in Arkansas and was making diligent search to "get something on Mr. Caraway."

"Man here by the name of Mathews representing attorney general making extensive inquiry at this point, Hot Springs and elsewhere, concerning you confidentially," the telegram from Anderson said.

Senator Caraway told the senate that Mr. Daugherty had put detectives on the trail of other members of congree, including Representatives Johnson [S. D.], and Woodruff [Mich.], two Republican ex-service men who are demanding congressional investigation of the attorney general's failure to prosecute war contract frauds.

"I would like to have the attorney general tell us just how much of the $500,000 congress gave him to investigate war fraud cases is being used to investigate members of congress," Mr. Caraway said. "I think the congress has a right to know how much of it is being used to intimidate representatives and senators, not to protect the government, but to protect Harry Daugherty himself."

Senator Caraway declared that if President Harding did not eliminate Mr. Daugherty from the cabinet he would fare worse than did Mr. Taft in the 1912 election. "I shall be very much mistaken if he gets any votes in the next election other than those of Utah and Vermont," he said.

Taking up the Morse case, Senator Caraway said: "The attorney general says he got only $4,000 and he got that through Felder. He says 'that is all I got personally.' He does not say who else got money. That was only half enough to pay his part of the expenses, he says.

Questions for Mr. Daugherty.

"I want to ask the attorney general this question: What use did you have, Mr. Attorney General, with $8,000 for your part of the swag to get one man's sentence commuted if he had an honest case for commutation? What acts did you do, Mr. Attorney General, that took $8,000 to present Morse's case and present all these things?

"Whom did you employ, what doctor did you get to issue a false certificate, that you had to pay him such an exorbitant fee as that?

"You paid Dr. Fowler, Mr. Attorney General, by putting him back into the place from which he was kicked for being crooked in this deal. You have made him the doctor in charge of the Atlanta penitentiary, and he is drawing the salary now. You paid him in that way.

"To whom did you pay the $8,000? In common decency, Mr. Attorney General, you cannot tell the people that you spent $8,000 legitimately to represent one man in getting his sentence commuted."

Quizzers Lose in House.

While Senator Caraway was paying his respects to Mr. Daugherty in the senate, the house was adding another chapter to the controversy raging about the attorney general. Representative Johnson made another attempt to gain recognition for the purpose of making a motion to take the Johnson-Woodruff resolution out of the hands of Chairman Campbell [Kas.], of the rules committee, but Speaker Gillett again overruled him, holding that a contested election case must have priority. The Johnson-Woodruff resolution would create a select committee to investigate the attorney general's failure to proceed against the war grafters.

Mr. Johnson succeeded in holding the floor for sufficient time to make the charge that certain Republican members of the rules committee have arranged to hold a meeting next Thursday to kill the resolution, which the committee indorsed by a vote of 6 to 5 several weeks ago. Representative Mondell [Wyo.], Republican leader, and Representative Campbell blocked further debate on the subject.

It's All Right, Watson Says.

Rushville, Ind., May 27.—"Attorney General Daugherty and myself understood each other perfectly," Senator Watson said at his home here today, referring to the controversy in the senate over the pardon of Charles W. Morse.

AMOROUS NOTES TO 'MY DEAR ART' FOUND BY WIFE

Love letters said to have been written by two women and hidden by him in his shoes and under his pillows, proved the undoing of Arthur Hopp, $7,500 a year department manager, made defendant yesterday in a suit for divorce filed in the Circuit court by Mrs. Lou Hopp, 6609 Greenview avenue.

Included in the bill, which was filed by Attorneys Butz, Von Ammon & Marx, are several letters from women, known only as "M. H. S." and "Verne." The couple were married July 19, 1913, and, according to the bill, an earlier separation was avoided by Hopp's pledge, made Dec. 31, 1919, that "henceforth I will conduct myself as a decent husband should."

But later Mrs. Hopp says she found under Hopp's pillow a letter dated Aug. 10, 1920. Then Mrs. Hopp discovered that another woman's picture adorned the face of her husband's watch.

POLICE ASKED TO FIND MISSING GIRL.

Chicago police yesterday were asked to find Miss Lottie Bjerken, 18 years old, who left Minneapolis two months ago, supposedly to find work here. Her sister, Mrs. Otto Klabunde, made the request. Another missing is Arthur Ford, alias Cameron, whose father, Charles Ford, is seriously ill at Silverwood, Mich.

6 ROBBERS CAUGHT BY POLICEMAN AND SON ARE INDICTED

AUGUST L. HARDER

The six alleged robbers, captured April 30 by August L. Harder, veteran policeman, and his policeman son, George, after a spirited gun fight, were held to the grand jury yesterday in bonds of $60,000 when they waived preliminary examination before Judge John A. Bubee in the Maxwell street court.

The policemen routed the robbers as they were attempting to "stick up" a gasoline filling station at Springfield and Ogden avenues. Policeman Arthur Harder received THE TRIBUNE's bravery prize for the month for his act.

The men held are John Donahue, Eugene Marion, Charles Gueduel, Rudolph Smetana, Oscar Hanson, and Charles Ponder.

Four automobile bandits, convulsed in mirth, collected $133 on the west side early yesterday from four hapless citizens within half an hour. Among their victims were Louis G. Brown, 1621 West Division street; Fred Olson, 1715 Washtenaw avenue; Edward Farner, 4705 Long avenue, and J. M. Wandersee, 4932 Barry avenue.

LINCOLN SHRINE TO BE PRESENTED NATION TUESDAY

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—Last touches have been given to the classic marble structure that stands almost at the water's edge of the Potomac and which will be presented formally on Decoration day to the American people as an enduring memorial to Abraham Lincoln.

Chief Justice Taft, head of the Lincoln memorial commission, will make the presentation and President Harding will accept in the name of the government.

Among those present will be "Uncle Joe" Cannon, for fifty years a member of the house of representatives, who sat in the convention in 1860 that nominated Lincoln for the presidency. There will be also Maj. George W. Evans, now chief disbursing officer of the interior department, who received his first appointment from Lincoln.

SHOW WINDOWS

Trade symbols are passing away and many have passed, while others are coming in. The shoe shop no longer sets up a monster boot on the sidewalk, nor the jeweler a giant watch, nor the livery stable a wooden horse at the door.

The streets have become so filled—almost clogged—with signs that it is not easy to read any particular sign. The show window has become the real sign of most firms.

Show windows have become wider, higher and deeper, brighter in their lighting and more spectacular, or showy, or artistic, or attractive.

The show window is the sign that tells what the house is inside.

The progressive firms realize the importance of clean, attractive windows. The prospective customer is thus easily guided in her shopping.

HYDRO-TORON

HYDRO-UNITED TIRE CO.
PHILA PA
35 X 5
GUARANTEED
10,000
MILES AGAINST STONE
BRUISE-RIM CUT BLOW OUT

All the values in Hydro-Toron tires that made them successful from the beginning were kept in them when we reduced prices a few weeks ago.

There is the Internal Hydraulic Expansion process whereby hidden defects in the course of tire building are prevented.

Also the Toron chemical process of treating fabric, which seals the tire against moisture and decay, and increases the tensile strength of the fabric and the holding power of the tire's various parts.

Also the oversize feature, and the unusual guarantee of 10,000 miles against stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out.

Savings effected as a result of doubled factory capacity have been passed on to tire buyers, so that you not only buy these big, sturdy tires at prices lower than cords, but lower than the prices of many of the fabric tires.

The dealers listed below can supply you with Hydro-Torons. Ask for them next time you buy, and enjoy the advantages of more mileage and less tire trouble, without any penalty in the form of price.

GEO. H. JASPERT RESIGNS AS HEAD OF STATION K-Y-W

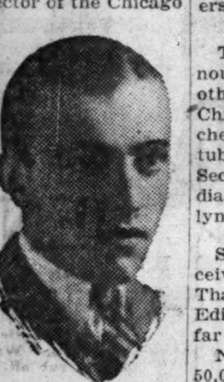
Broadcaster Is Member of Radio Firm.

BY CHARLES SLOAN.

GEO. H. JASPERT.

Announcement of the resignation of George H. Jaspert, "master mind" of station K-Y-W of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company for the last year or more, came from the company's offices yesterday.

Mr. Jaspert, it is understood, has been named secretary of a new radio corporation recently formed by Chicago capitalists. The concern plans to place on the market shortly a complete radio receiver designed by one of the world's foremost radio engineers.



WILSON WETHERBEE.

Wilson J. Wetherbee, formerly assistant publicity director of the Chicago branch of the company and who has been active in the affairs of the station for several months, is to succeed Mr. Jaspert. The latter's resignation takes effect on June 1.

No changes in the schedule of the station or in the plan of operation are to be made as the result of the change in management, Mr. Wetherbee asserted.

"Mr. Jaspert is leaving Westinghouse to the great regret of all his associates," the new director said yesterday. "His new position in commercial life is an offer he could hardly turn down.

"As far as the station is concerned, Mr. Jaspert's plans for future operation, made several months ago, are to be carried out. One of the new aerial towers atop the Commonwealth Edison building has been completed and work on the other is under way. When the new aerials are installed K-Y-W should have from 100 to 500 miles greater range than heretofore."

Mr. Jaspert is probably the best known of all Chicago's radiofans—thousands of whom have written him weekly criticizing programs, making suggestions and complimenting the work of the station, which was Chicago's pioneer in broadcasting.

Numerous inquiries have been made as to the identity of station W-A-A-F, concerts of which have been heard in the air the last three or four weeks. The station is located in the Stockyards and is the property of the Drovers' Journal.

The United States army has announced a sale of Western Electric and other tubes at Brooklyn on June 5. Chicagoans can get them by sending checks or money orders for $5.50 per tube to the Officer in Charge, Signal Section, New York General Intermediate Depot, 59th street, South Brooklyn, N. Y.

Surely there are more than 4,112 receiving stations in the Chicago district. That's the number of replies the Radio Editor of THE TRIBUNE has received so far to the call for a radio census.

New York City boasts of more than 50,000 receiving sets within the city limits. The Radio Editor doesn't think the Chicago district is much behind in the race.

Radio programs for the day follow:

3:30 P. M. (STATION K-Y-W.)

8. Closing hymn: "Savior, Again to Thy Dear Name We Rise."

ROME PILGRIMS HEAR MUNDELEIN WILL GET RED HAT

BY V. DE SANTO.

ARCHBISHOP MUNDELEIN. [Lavecchio Photo.]

ROME, May 27.—Among the 600 American delegates participating in the eucharistic congress here there is a general feeling that Archbishop Mundelein of Chicago will be elevated to a cardinalship at the next consistory, which may take place in a few months.

Archbishop Mundelein is considered the first American bishop entitled to such an honor, on account of his commendable work in building up the diocese seminary and organizing many charity bureaus. This work, it is said, is well known and deeply appreciated by the Vatican.

Another American bishop likely to be elevated is Archbishop Hayes of New York.

HUBER, CROWE AID, CLEARED OF ROBBERY CHARGE

Frederick E. Huber, an assistant state's attorney, Walter J. Wentz, a deputy county recorder, and Thomas Mulligan, who were recently identified by George Miller, formerly a saloonkeeper, as the men who held him up on May 6, taking $445, yesterday established a complete alibi and were discharged by Judge John J. Rooney in the South Clark street court.

"There is not a scintilla of evidence against these men," said Judge Rooney in dismissing them. "They were shown to be of excellent character, and it would be a waste of time and an injustice to hold them to the grand jury. No jury would find them guilty."

Crowe Defends Huber.

"Judge Rooney's decision justifies the belief I have held ever since Huber's arrest—that it was a case of mistaken identity," said State's Attorney Crowe. "Huber is a man with a family, a grandfather, the owner of a home, a member of the bar of twenty-seven years' standing. It was preposterous to think of him committing the offense with which he was charged."

Immediately after his arrest, Huber tendered his resignation to the state's attorney. This Crowe refused to accept, though he granted Huber's request that he be suspended until the matter had been brought to trial and settled.

The three men were arrested May 18, nearly two weeks after the holdup, on warrants sworn out by Miller, after he had claimed to identify them at the detective bureau. Miller said he was held up at the corner of Oak and Wells streets by eight men, who took a wallet containing $5. Three of the eight followed him a block further and took $445 which had been overlooked previously, he alleged. He pointed out the three defendants as these men.

Nine Establish Alibi.

Assistant State's Attorneys Clarence Nelson and Edward J. McCarthy prosecuted the case yesterday. Miller's testimony was refuted by that of nine witnesses who testified that at the time of the robbery Huber was at a reception at the home of his brother-in-law, Joseph Cornelius, 1230 School street. Ald. Charles G. Hendricks of the Twenty-sixth ward was a character witness in Huber's behalf.

Mrs. Theresa Mulligan testified that her husband was with her during the entire day preceding and the night on which Miller alleged he was robbed. Philip H. Hogan, chief county electrician, appeared for Wentz.

Escapes from Prison, Returns After Few Days

Fond Du Lac., Wis., May 27.—[Special.]—George K. Devine, 41, who escaped from the state prison early this week, on Friday knocked at the front entrance of the prison and was readmitted. Warden R. Coles said that the prisoner would not be given the regular solitary confinement, nor would escape charges be pressed against him. Devine escaped with Otto Bierman. Previous to the escape of these two men, only four convicts had escaped from Waupan in the last seventeen years, all of whom have been apprehended.

INLAND CITIES STRONG FOR U. S. MERCHANT FLEET

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—More than a score of national organizations and nearly 200 chambers of commerce and other commercial bodies are now on record in favor of the shipping bill pending in the house committee on merchant marine and fisheries, says a statement issued today by the National Merchant Marine association. The indorsements show that the interior states which in past years have shown little interest in development of the American merchant marine, are more interested in the present measure than even the states on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

All O. K. Merchant Marine.

Among the latest organizations to indorse the legislation to restore the American flag to the seas are St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, Minneapolis Civic and Commerce association, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, Duluth Chamber of Commerce, similar bodies in Columbus, Ga.; Sioux City, Boone, and Davenport, Ia.; Hastings and Fall City, Neb., and the commercial clubs of Curtis Falls, Minn.; Hibbing, Alexander, and Virginia, Minn. In addition received from Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, state of Washington, and California.

How They Stand.

Tabulated, the resolutions of the chambers of commerce, commercial bodies, etc., favoring the shipping bill show these results:

New England states, 13; North Atlantic states, 14; Pacific coast states, 17; Southern and gulf states, 24; middle western states, 80.

An analysis of these figures shows that the states without seaboard constitute more than 54 per cent of the total favoring the bill.

MOONSHINE CRAZED MAN'S VICTIM NEAR DEATH FROM WOUNDS

The shooting took place at Dearborn street and Archer avenue. Pogliano emptied his revolver into a crowd there. He then ran down the street, pursued by Policeman Burns, who fired at him. He was arrested after a struggle.

FIRST HIGHWAY JOBS OF SEASON ARE AWARDED

Initial contracts in the 1922 highway pavement program were awarded by the Illinois state highway department yesterday to cover thirty-six miles of the approved 362 miles' improvement.

Six miles of concrete paving on State route 7 between Geneseo and Moline was awarded to the Capital Construction company of Des Moines, Ia., on its bid of $125,199, grading and other preparatory work having been completed. J. E. Craine of Murphysboro, and a Janesville, Wis., firm were awarded contracts for paving work which will complete the state road running south from Carbondale through Union and Pulaski counties to Cairo. Grading and bridges have also been completed on this route.

Northwestern university's annual commencement will be a three day celebration. Alumni day, when thousands of old grads are expected, on June 17, is the opening day.

June 18 will be baccalaureate Sunday. Graduates will be addressed by Bishop Nicholson in the afternoon.

Osborn Will Speak.

Commencement day, June 19, will close the celebration, with Chase S. Osborn, former governor of Michigan, delivering the address. Eight hundred degrees and diplomas will be awarded.

The day of special celebration will be Alumni day—the occasion for homecoming by graduates, some of whom left the university fifty-five years ago. The alumni will arrange themselves by classes and parade through Evanston, carrying class banners.

After Fifty-five Years.

At Patten gymnasium Elbert H. Gary, graduated from the law school fifty-five years ago, will address the gathering. Prizes will be awarded the class having the largest representation in the parade, for the best float and the best costuming.

The president's reception at the gymnasium will close the day's program. The commencement exercises will take place in the gymnasium.

Labor Incendiarists Didn't Start This Fire

Spontaneous combustion was said to have started a fire in a new three story office building in upper Michigan avenue, directly across the street from the Drake hotel. Oil soaked rags left in a room on the third story by painters were responsible for the blaze, it was stated. An earlier theory that the fire might have been the work of labor incendiarists was discarded by the police.

Do You Know How Malt Extract Is Made?

THE best malt extract is made out of what is known as Number One Choice Barley and is supposed to have the least amount of moisture possible.

Poor malt extracts are made out of cheap corn, flavored with malt, and are saturated with moisture, or water.

If you have ever tried a good malt extract as compared with a cheap malt extract, you'll know the difference in a minute.

A good malt extract gives wonderful results. A cheap malt extract isn't worth taking home.

When a store tries to sell you a malt extract cheaper than the cost of the barley that goes into it, you know that the barley hasn't gone into it.

And good barley is the only thing that makes good malt.

Puritan Malt Extract is the richest malt extract made. Costs more—worth more.

For sale at any store.

JAPAN LAYS UP STORES TO FACE LONG BLOCKADE

Seeks Independence of U. S. and Britain.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TIENTSIN, May 27.—While a few alarmists see in Japan's present military activities preparations for war, possibly against the Chita government, more conservative observers of the trend of affairs in the Far East are of the opinion that Japan, in the first five years of the naval holiday, is seeking to make herself independent of a blockade by any power which may challenge her position on the Asiatic continent. All the treaties negotiated in Washington having been ratified by the United States senate, the position taken by Japan has become more pronounced.

There are many supporters in the Far East of the position taken by Lord Northcliffe in his recent warning of an indirect challenge to the United States and Great Britain as indicated by the new defense policy of Japan.

Details which are slowly becoming public have caused a furore in that country, a considerable section of the press attacking it as trampling upon the principles enunciated at the Washington conference.

Military Rules Country.

Dual government still exists in Japan, and possibly only a revolution at home will destroy it. That it persists is illustrated by the creation of the so-called new defense policy at a conference of the generals of the army and the admirals of the navy without consultation with the premier or the government.

According to the Japanese press, the policy decided upon was ratified at a meeting held in the Imperial palace. In brief, it provides for economic independence both of Great Britain and the United States, and reliance upon China and Siberia for the food and raw materials Japan will require for a period of five years.

To avoid being classed as an alarmist one must ignore the details of the so-called first line of defense in China, which roughly includes the line of the Tientsin-Pukow railway and is predicated on a violation of China's neutrality by any power with which Japan may be embroiled. But within this so-called first line of defense, including not only Shantung province, but also Eastern Chihli and the occupied portions of Manchuria and Siberia, together with Corea, there are signs that this economic policy is being carried out.

Develop China's Salt Fields.

Take the simple matter of salt—trifles often tell a tale. Normally about 60,000 tons of salt are exported annually from Tsingtao to Japan. Since the occupation of Shantung the Japanese have invested $30,000,000 (Mex.) in the development of new salt fields on Kiao-Chou bay. The purchase of these fields is one of the bones of contention in the settlement of the terms for the surrender of Shantung.

Japan is now importing salt from nearly every port in North China and is desirous of laying in a stock of 250,000 tons this year. This is practically a five years' supply.

Loads up on Beef Also.

In the matter of beef Japan is also buying heavily. Only recently beef has been added to the army ration. Formerly Japan obtained through the port of Tsingtao from 300 to 400 head of butchered cattle monthly. In the five months of winter and this spring the number of whole beeves shipped to Japan from Tsingtao totalled 60,000.

At present shipments are going from Tsingtao to Japan at the rate of 3,000 to 4,000 head monthly, or ten times the normal supply.

Beans is another item. Never have they been imported to Japan in such great quantities, although bean oil and bean cake have been important items.

Japanese traders in Tsingtao and Dairen are greedy for tallow, which formerly they did not buy at all. From Tsingtao also great quantities of charcoal are being shipped, an industry that has developed only recently and now has reached large proportions.

Coal is another rapidly growing export from Shantung to Japan.

The Shantung coal sells at $8 (Mex) at the mines and the transportation charges to the principal cities of Japan amount to about $3. This explains why Japan is so actively developing the mines along the Shantung railway. Not only is the coal laid down more cheaply than it can be mined in Japan, but the mines at home are being conserved.

Aside from her steady accumulation of supplies from Shantung and Manchuria, Japan has been paying attention to Siberia. Having her own way in the lower end of the maritime province, authentic information is difficult to obtain, but word comes from Vladivostok that nearly all the war supplies that have been lying there under guard of the Japanese since the British and American contingents withdrew in the spring of 1920, are now being shipped to Japan, including vast amounts of barbed wire.

SOLDIERS BAR PRESIDENT SUN FROM CAPITAL

Strive to Force Canton Leader to Quit.

HONGKONG, May 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. Cheng Chiung-Ming, the south China military leader, is demanding that Sun Yat Sen resign the presidency of the south China government at Canton, it was reliably reported today. The military forces of the Canton government refuse to allow President Sun to enter Canton. Dr. Sun has ordered the navy to bombard the Canton arsenal, it is reported.

Fighting for Revenues.

Southern Chinese officials here, however, declare they do not anticipate military hostilities between the adherents of Gen. Cheng Chiung-Ming and President Sun.

Gen. Cheng Chiung-Ming's troops are holding control of the important points in South Kwangtung. The underlying cause of the struggle is for control of that province, whose finances are largely held by Cheng Chiung-Ming.

Wu's Army Advancing.

TIENTSIN, May 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. Wu Pei Fu's army of Chihli soldiers, victorious in their recent campaign near Peking, have reached Iwanchow, requisitioning cars on the Mukden railway for a general advance to the north.

The British gunboat Bluebell is at Chinwangtao, near Shanhaikuan, ready to land bluejackets, while the cruiser Curlew is off Peitaiko. The U. S. S. Albany remains at Chinwangtao.

LEGION NOTES

Mandel Bros. post No. 305, American Legion, tendered a dinner and reception to National Post Commander Hanford J. MacNider and other high national officials of the Legion Friday evening in the ivory room of Mandel Bros.' store. About 150 members attended. Post Commander W. G. McCarthy acted as toastmaster and an excellent program was carried out. A complete stand of colors was presented to the post by D. F. Kelly on behalf of Mandel Bros. The colors were escorted to the speakers' table by a color guard from the 132d infantry, Illinois national guard, under the command of Lieut. Thomas J. O'Connell. Mr. Kelly made the speech of presentation and the colors were accepted by Commander McCarthy.

7,000 DWELLINGS WILL BE FINISHED BY END OF YEAR

The Chicago Real Estate board yesterday announced, as the result of recent surveys, that there were 1,473 new single family dwellings and 769 two-apartment buildings under construction in the city limits on the first of May.

The board estimated that on this basis more than 7,000 of these small structures will be completed before the end of the year. At a moderate average cost of $10,000 for the two classes of buildings, it indicates that there is a $70,000,000 building boom going on.

"Practically every district in Chicago," the board's report declares, "desirable from a home owner's standpoint, is showing great activity at the present time."

Farmer-Labor Party Opens Second Annual Convention

Buy Your Own Home-Heating System

THE contractor and professional builder are often tempted to buy cheap, undersized, and otherwise inefficient furnaces for their clients. And so we urge every man to buy his own heating plant. Buy it direct from a responsible heating concern—one that issues a worth-while guarantee.

The contractor's temptation results from several causes. First of all, the cost of building a home often exceeds the builder's estimate. And in an attempt to meet the difficulty, he commonly employs the short-sighted policy of skimping on the very equipment that is most vital of all in providing home comfort.

What could be more natural than for a builder to feel care-free about the furnace when he knows the responsibility cannot be definitely placed upon anyone. He realizes that his competitors have also been putting cheap, undersized furnaces in their homes for years, and that they have seemingly "gotten away with it."

The purchaser of a house is told that it is "completely equipped—ready to move into," and he moves in. The contractor is pleased with his commission from the furnace manufacturer or dealer, plus the profit on the furnace sale. All goes well until winter comes. Then nothing goes well, and the home-owner takes the loss.

The majority of Holland sales, so far, have been made for houses already built. Hollands are demanded by people, who make up their minds to heat and ventilate their homes with certainty.

Our business is always good in winter when so many carelessly bought furnaces are found unsatisfactory and thrown out.

Of course, there will be replacements to be made for a long time. But, fortunately, the most conscientious and experienced contractors are more and more urging their customers to put furnace responsibility where it belongs. They realize that it means permanently pleased customers and more business for them.

It is easy enough to prevent the loss and discomfort of throwing away one heating plant, and putting in another. It is easy to have a comfortable, healthful home, as well as real economy. Buy a Holland Warm-Air Circulating system, and you make the world's largest installers of furnaces directly responsible to you for your heating plant—installation as well as furnace.

Take at least as much personal interest in buying your heating system as you would in buying your furniture, and you will protect your house furnishings, and have dependable warmth and comfort.

This Company voluntarily bonds itself to every user, giving the same protection that is always demanded for public buildings. There is no uncertainty about Holland installations. They are made individually upon Holland specialized engineering.

Should you care to sell your house, the Bond helps you. It is transferable, and is recognized by all bankers and real estate men.

Call up a Holland man.

Our special spring terms of payment are so easy and convenient as to make it possible for nearly every one to own a Holland.

Right now, when you are planning a new home, or remodeling, is the time to get the facts about heating. It will not obligate you in the least to get complete information regarding a Holland for your home.

URBAN FABER.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Those White Sox are always making somebody feel miserable. Most of the time it's Kid Gleason, but not yesterday. The humble tail enders reared up with all their might, knocked off the St. Louis Browns in the first of a double header by 2 to 1 in ten innings and then turned around and repeated the dose in the afterpiece, this time 3 to 2, in regulation time. It was quite a treat for 15,000 assembled fans.

Both battles were corkers to look at. The first was a hectic hurling duel between Urban Faber and Urban Shocker. Until the eighth inning Shocker was galloping madly toward a perfect game. Then the charm was broken and three hits with an error beat him.

Win Second in Ninth.

The concluding performance was a little more spectacular than the first because the pitching was not quite as tight. Harry Courtney, the southpaw, looked after the Sox interests, and he was given to wildness. However, he managed to skin through safely until the eighth, when two Brownies nicked the pan and evened the count at two apiece. This put it up to the Sox in the ninth, and they responded in a manner that probably will result in a couple of Lee Fohl's athletes taking enforced vacations.

St. Louis got a one run jump in the second inning of the first game when Jacobson's fly fell for a triple. A moment later Severeid doubled. After that Faber was a tartar.

Schalk Gets Two Bagger.

When Falk came up with one gone in the Sox eighth first base was still virgin territory so far as the home gang was concerned. Bib broke the ice with a single to right. Schalk followed with a double to center, and Falk raced home with the tying run.

The affair was as good as over when Gerber opened the home tenth with a two base wild throw to Sisler on Collins' grounder. Mostil sacrificed the runner to third. Then came Falk with more grief for Shocker. He slapped a hit to right, Collins scored and Shocker departed amid a storm of applause.

Gleason's fellows grabbed themselves a neat lead in the second game by hopping on Elam Vangilder for lone runs in both the sixth and seventh. Ellerbe's double in the Brown's eighth with two on was the thing that tied the count and the only bit of excitement after this was the winning ninth.

The finish started with Gerber making another two base wild heave, this time on Mostil. Falk beat out a bunt. Schalk worked the squeeze and Mostil scored but Catcher Severeid didn't think so and gave Ump Wilson a polite shaking. McManus also horned in on the rumpus to the extent of shoving the arbiter.

WESBROOK PUTS JERRY WEBER OUT OF NET TOURNEY

Walter Wesbrook's upset of Jerry Weber in straight sets by scores of 6—3, 6—4 and the bitter opposition furnished by L. Callahan before succumbing to the gruelling pace set by Jimmy Weber, 13—11, 6—2, featured the opening day's play in the Sherwood Tennis club's annual open cup tournament after three successive days of postponement.

An aggregate of twenty-five matches was disposed of, and carried the qualifiers into the third round of singles. With the exception of Jerry Weber, the favorites came through in easy style, Walter Hayes, state champion, and Alex Squair, last year's runner-up, encountering virtually no opposition. Summaries:

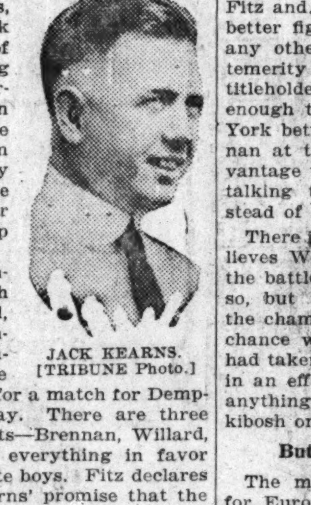
CATCHER'S MODE OF REVENGE ON UMP MAKES ROW

Birmingham, Ala., May 27.—Pop bottles were thrown at Umpire Guthries by fans angered at close decisions in today's game between Birmingham and Memphis, which the locals won, 1 to 0, in fourteen innings. Catcher Robertson of the Barons was banished by Umpire Pfenninger, who charged the catcher with intentionally letting a ball get by him to hit the umpire in revenge for a close decision.

Kearns Assures Chicagoans of Dempsey Match Labor Day

BY FRANK SMITH.



JACK KEARNS.

With the middle west becoming a boxing center in spite of many vicissitudes, a visit from Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, is of more than passing notice, particularly when the John Miller post of the American Legion at Michigan City has come to the front bidding for championship matches.

With the Leonard-Kansas match for July 4 assured, Floyd Fitzsimmons, matchmaker for the post, is angling for a match for Dempsey on Labor day. There are three possible opponents—Brennan, Willard, and Wills—with everything in favor of one of the white boys. Fitz declares that he has Kearns' promise that the champion will show in the new arena on Labor day and there was no denial coming from Kearns.

Kearns in Fine Fettle.

Kearns stopped off yesterday on his way to the Pacific coast, where he will join Dempsey for a seven weeks' theatrical tour. Like Jack, the manager has put on a bundle of flesh as a result of the twin jaunt to Europe. He was feeling in fine fettle and looked as if he could substitute for the champion if the latter became indisposed.

"The John Miller post proposition looks good to me," Kearns said, "and you can say that it is almost certain that Dempsey will appear at Michigan City on Labor day. Matchmaker Fitzsimmons hasn't decided on an opponent, but we don't bar any one who thinks he has a claim to Jack's title."

A talk with Fitz would indicate that he is sweet on Bill Brennan, who already has fought the champion two losing battles. Brennan, according to Fitz and the record books, has put up better fights with the champion than any other man who has had the temerity to enter the ring with the titleholder. The writer was fortunate enough to see the last battle in New York between the pair, and had Brennan at that time followed up his advantage we probably would have been talking to Leo Flynn yesterday instead of Jack Kearns.

There is no question that Kearns believes Wills would give the champion the battle of his life. Jack didn't say so, but the idea was conveyed that the champion didn't propose to take a chance with the colored boy until he had taken on a couple of other fellows in an effort to find out if he has lost anything physically since he put the kibosh on Carpentier.

But Match Isn't Cinched.

The match with Carpentier is set for Europe, and there appears to be no way out of it. Georges certainly must be a glutton for punishment. From all reports Brennan has not deteriorated in ability in spite of the fact that he has not done much active work since his bout with the champion. Anyway, the match itsn't cinched, and there is a possibility that Matchmaker Fitzsimmons may change his mind regarding an opponent for Dempsey.

In the meantime Fitz will put his shoulder to the wheel in an effort to make the coming championship match between Leonard and Kansas a success. The new arena at Michigan City is being pushed to completion, and tickets for the brush will be put on sale tomorrow at loop headquarters. Al Bloom, the local special train expert, already has chartered sixty cars to make up special trains for the big doings.

WEISS BREAKS HIS OWN WORLD SWIM RECORD

Honolulu, T. H., May 27.—Johnny Weissmueller, youthful swimming marvel of the Illinois Athletic club, swam the men's open championship at 2:15 3-5 in the meet here last night, breaking his own world's record of 2:17 1-5. Harris of the Outrigger club finished two yards behind Weismueller. Warren Kealcha was third by half a yard.

Kealoha, representing the Huimakanai club, won the fifty yard men's open championship in :23 3-5. He beat Weissmueller by half a stroke. Harris was third.

Marie Chen Wehselau won the woman's free style 100 yard dash in 1:05 flat, smashing her own Hawaiian record of 1:06.

Walter Christie of U. of Cal. Heads U. S. Track Coaches

Swampscott, Mass., May 27.—The Association of College Track Coaches of America was on record today as in favor of prohibiting freshmen competition in the annual intercollegiate A. A. A. A. championship games. The association elected as president Walter Christie, coach of the University of California track team.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your questions to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned.

The Question.

Whom do you consider the greatest all around player [the one most valuable to his team] in the National league?

Where Asked.

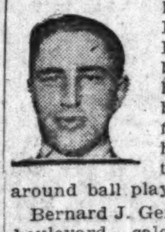
At Humboldt Fellowship club, 1447 North Washtenaw avenue.

The Answers.

Harry Schwartz, 1304 North Campbell avenue, Yellow Cab company, cost man—Rogers Hornsby is one of the best all around baseball players in the National league. He can play any position, is a consistent batter, and he is as good as any one in running the bases.

Irving Modjesky, 2633 Potomac avenue, accountant—Grimes of the Cubs. He is a first class first baseman, a very good runner, and a man quick to take a chance when the opportunity arrives. He is not only a fine player, but a good all around athlete.

Harry J. Tratner, 1102 North Ashland avenue, violinist—Eddie Roush of Cincinnati. Roush is the greatest center fielder in the National league. His batting average for the last ten years has been around the .300 mark. The Giants are wise to seek Roush.



land avenue, student—Hornsby of the Cards. He is one of the best batsmen in the league, he is good at stealing bases, and as an infielder he stands out by himself. In short, I think he's the best all around ball player in the league.

Bernard J. Gerson, 2654 West Hirsch boulevard, salesman—I'd say O'Farrell. I believe the value of good catchers is underestimated. They play a very important part in the game. In the near future I expect to see Hartnett of the Cubs occupying O'Farrell's prominent position.

LANE SWIMMER LOWERS RECORD IN H. S. TANK MEET

The performance of Wehr, Lane, in the junior 20 yard tired swimmer carry, took the spotlight for individual performance in the qualifying heats of the first annual outdoor swimming meet of the Chicago Public High School league at Hamlin park yesterday. Wehr clocked the distance in .15 3-5 against the indoor record of :17. Due to limited entries a number of events were not contested. The finals in both senior and junior classes will be held next Saturday at the Hamlin tank.

WALTER CHRISTIE.

Cambridge, Mass., May 27.—[Special.]—Coach Walter Christie's University of California athletes swept aside all eastern opposition in the forty-sixth annual track and field meet of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America on Soldiers' field here this afternoon, and for the second time in as many years carried off to the far west the eastern intercollegiate team title, rolling up the overwhelming total of 40½ points.

Leland Stanford, showing surprising strength in the final tests, was third with 26½ points, and Cornell, a "dark horse" of the east, was fourth with 21½ tallies.

Two Records in Discard.

Two records were swept into the discard in the final tests, which with the hammer throw record of Merchant of California, made yesterday, made three new marks for the meet. At least one other mark came near being shattered and several others were closely approached.

Through the maize of superb competition, one figure stood out in bold relief. It was the compact, splendidly muscled form of Jack Merchant, California's great all around star. It was Merchant who supplied the principal impetus to the blue and gold triumph, and in a manner that earned him distinction as one of the greatest athletes in the history of college sport in this country.

In winning, California placed one or more men in nine of the fifteen events. The only event in which the Bears were not represented when the final points wre counted were runs—the 100 and 220 yard dashes, the half mile and the mile, and the 120 and 220 yard hurdles.

Tosses Discus 140 Feet ⅛ Inch.

This afternoon Glenn Hartranft, the Stanford giant, won the discus event, new to these games, thus establishing a record with his heave of 140 feet ⅛ inch. G. E. Bronder of Pennsylvania also established a record in the javelin throw, the second new event, with a fling of 185 feet 8⅝ inches.

J. A. Leconey of Lafayette clipped a tenth of a second from the 100 yard dash time of :09 4-5, held jointly by Wefers, Craig, and Patterson. Roy Brown of Dartmouth completed the record breaking by a leap of 6 feet 4⅝ inches in the high jump, displacing the former record of 6 feet 4½ inches made by Wesley Ole of Yale in 1915.

Merchant accumulated a total of 13 points with first place in hammer, second in the shot, fourth in the javelin and fourth in the running broad jump. Glenn Hartranft, the Stanford Hercules, and J. A. Leconey, the Lafayette flash, ranked next with individual scores with 10 points each. Hartranft won both the discus and shot, and Leconey the 100 and 220 yard dashes.

"Brick" Muller garnered 6½ points for California with a second in the discus and a tie for second in the high jump. Robert Le Gendre of Georgetown was another high scorer with 6 points, winning the broad jump and taking fourth in the discus.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

INTERNATIONAL SPORT.

AFTER America's overwhelming supremacy was recorded in the international sporting events of 1921, The Wake expressed the opinion that we should expect more strenuous opposition in the future from those countries, especially Great Britain, which had been occupied with war and post-war activities.

This impression seems to be confirmed by the few events already held—more conclusive tests are to follow—although the invaders from this side for the British women's and men's amateur golf titles were hardly representative, Mrs. Gavin really the only notable among the women, and John G. Anderson the best of the five Yankees in the men's event.

The British probably will send much stronger teams relatively in quest of our similar titles, so our own players must defeat them to keep the count "all square."

In the other event, University of Pennsylvania's four mile relay team, with whose class no fault can be found, finished second to Cambridge runners. Thus we have not yet attained a win on the other side.

The British pro golf tourney and the Wimbledon world's tennis matches are imminent. Jock Hutchison will defend the title he won last year. It is asking a great deal to expect him to repeat, for where large fields of evenly matched experts meet at medal play golf the least little bit of luck or hard luck often determines the winner. It will be a source of gratification, however, if any one of the Yankee entrants brings back the title for a second time.

The women's tennis honors, barring upsets, lie between Mlle. Lenglen and Mrs. Molla Mallory. Our readers already are familiar with that situation.

The Wake welcomes sterner competition from our friendly rivals of other nations. We think it furnishes a stimulus to our own athletes, and thereby raises the caliber of competition. We begrudge to others no fairly earned laurels.

THE SCORE TRIMMER.

A stickler for truth in a business deal,
His working motto, "Thou shalt not steal";
A model for men in all other things,
But a master crook from the time he swings
His driver back at the starting tee
To the end when he claims an eighty-three.
He lay in the rough. From where I stood
It looked as though he were chopping wood;
He finally holed from among the sticks
And asked me to mark him up a six.
I questioned his count in a friendly way,
And he cut me cold for the rest of the day.
I'd trust him with all of my worldly store,
But I will not play when he keeps the score.

Excelsior!

The friend soon wrote—and my lips smacked—
He'd sent that day a quart, uncracked,
And 'round the stuff had been well packed—
Excelsior!

The package came all safe and sound,
I opened it with no one 'round,
And this is all that I e'er found—
Excelsior! Albuquerque Crabb.

KAY GOLD.

Winning the University of Chicago national interscholastic track and field meet yesterday afternoon, Washington High school of Cedar Rapids, Ia., earned for itself a claim to possession of the niftiest prep team in America. The Iowans accumulated 23 points in yesterday's events, completely outdistancing Austin, Tex., and Oxnard, Cal., who through the efforts of Keeble and Houser, sole representatives of these two towns, tied for second place with 14 tallies.

In the academy division Shattuck Military school early in the meet established a substantial lead, and at the end of the scoring totaled 48 points, while Culver carried off second honors in that section with 36½ points.

Kay Gold was the star of the big Shattuck team. He won firsts in the 220 and century, besides placing fifth in the discus and fourth in the 440. Pierard also ably represented Shattuck in the weights.

Two Records Smashed.

Although the records at which the athletes performed at yesterday's meet were high, only two previous marks were made past history. "Bud" Houser, the celebrated weight hoister from the coast, who also placed first in the discus and third in the hammer and fifth in the hammer throw, made himself a world's interscholastic champion by setting up a record of 56 feet in the twelve pound shot put, and Bill Dowding, performing in the academy division, hopped 23 ft. 8½ in., one inch better than the United States interscholastic mark.

Houser was easily the individual star of the carnival, and upon his appearance before the stand after making his famous toss he was greeted with a prolonged ovation.

Naegeli High Point Winner.

Victor Naegeli, the sole representative of Pillsbury academy, Minnesota, won fourth place for that school in the academy division by placing in the seven events which he entered, being the star point collector of the day.

The field that took part in yesterday's events was hailed by a crowd of 6,000 as about the fastest bunch of high school boys that has ever been collected. In nearly every event there was heated competition for first place, and in the high school division there was no definite indication as to the probable winner of the meet until the events were wellnigh completed.

Joe Dicenzo of Toluca, Ill., who tied with Houser for individual honors in the high school class, had a close finish with Herschell Smith, San Fernando, Cal., another star of the day, in the century, the Italian winning the event in :10.

Dope Upset in Mile.

One of the most interesting races of the afternoon was the mile run. The outcome, which was believed to lie between Kerr of Huntington Beach, Cal., Cox of Rochester, N. Y., and Irwin of Cedar Rapids, with Kerr a possible favorite, was finally decided in favor of Cox, Kerr dropping completely out of the race, an also ran, in the third quarter. The winner's time was 4 minutes 35 seconds, 1 4-5 seconds slower than the record set by G. Cowley in 1909.

Kerr tallied in the 880 yard run, however, passing the six men who led him at the start, and leaving them twenty yards in the rear when he crossed the tape in 2:02 3-5.

Cedar Rapids Wins Relay.

Cedar Rapids put up swift running to edge out Deerfield high in the three-quarter mile relay, coming out victorious with a record of 2:31. University High, thanks to Goodwillie, took third in this event. Goodwillie also placed third in the 220.

Henry Bagby of Pine Bluff, Ark., was the star of that team, accumulating nine of the two-man outfit's 12 markers. Hines of Cedar Rapids was well on his way to a victory in the 440 yard run, but a spill put him out of the games for the rest of the day. His previous record of :50 3-5 looked good for first place. The event was won by U. Miller of Louisville, Ky., in :53 2-5.

Last night the athletes were guests of the university.

A feature of this, one of the most hotly contested meets ever held on Iowa's field, was the performance of Wilson, Iowa, who dashed off the 220 yard distance in :21 1-5, equalling the world's record. In the 440 he cut the track mark to :48 2-5, best time in the west this season.

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

Cincinnati, O., May 27.—[Special.]—Bill Killifer's Cub nine took a nose dive right into sixth place in the National league rating today. The cause was a double defeat at the hands of the crashing Cincinnati Reds, who took the first game of a bargain day bill, 8 to 1, and came back and grabbed the second after a heart breaking battle, 7 to 6.

The Bruins really didn't have a chance in the first contest, getting off to a bad start and then failing to hit the ball in the pinches when hits meant runs. Johnny Gillespie who worked for the Reds in the opening contest had it all over Jones, Freeman, and Kaufman who slabbed for the Chicago nine, holding the Bruins to five scattered hits.

Reds Bunch Blows.

The Reds bunched blows in the first, fifth, and sixth frames for the necessary runs to take the first battle, shoving across three tallies in the first, one in the fifth, and three in the sixth on solid blows. Pinelli's single and a blunder by Ray Grimes presented Moran's men with another run in the second. Although the locals clouted out thirteen hits which included five triples at most opportune times.

The second game was a seesaw affair, the Reds getting off to a two run start in the first innings. After the Morans had added two more tallies in the fifth, the Cubs arose and swatted in four counters to tie up the battle in the sixth. Five hits were registered in this frame, while an error by Pinelli aided.

The locals took the offensive again in their portion of the sixth with one run, only to have Killefer's men tie it up again in the seventh. The Reds were not to be denied, and grabbed their two winning runs in the last half of the seventh.

Cubs Get Fifteen Hits.

Johnny Couch and Cliff Markle, who hurled the second game for the locals, were nicked for fifteen hits by the Cubs. Three of them were doubles. The Reds gathered ten safeties off Osborne, Jones, and Stueland, but again there were those pesky three base bingles that always came up with the bases inhabited—this time four three-baggers, two of them from the bat of the slugging pitcher, Couch, and a double by the veteran, Ivy Wingo.

Both teams took delight in razzing Umpires Hart and O'Day, the Bruins taking picks on the guessers in the first game and the Reds doing all of their squawking in the second. The fans, and there were some 14,000 of them out, rose up in the sixth, when the Cubs were engaged in their rally and booed and showered the umps with bottles and cushions.

Kelleher Sprains Ankle.

The first game cost Killefer the services of Third Sacker Johnny Kelleher, who suffered a badly sprained ankle when Pinelli slid into him in the second inning. Kelleher probably will be out for a week. Marty Krug was rushed into the fray and ably blocked up the hole for the rest of the play.

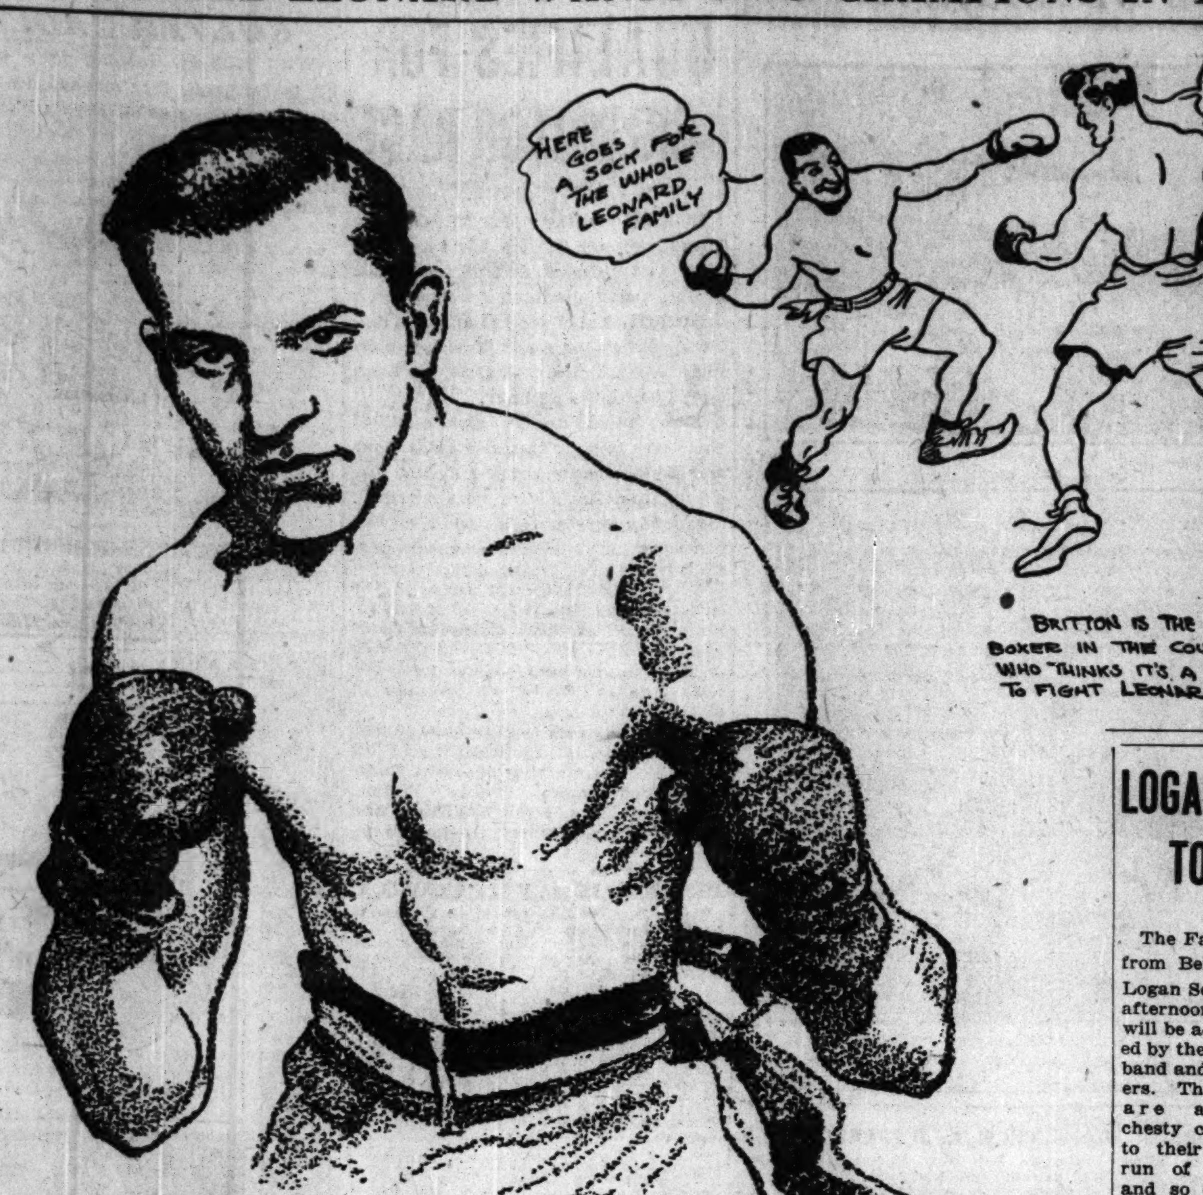
BENNIE LEONARD WANTS TWO CHAMPIONS IN FAMILY



HERE GOES A SOCK FOR THE WHOLE LEONARD FAMILY
ALL RIGHT, BENNY, AND HERE'S ONE TO KNOCK THE WHOLE LEONARD FAMILY OUT!
BRITTON IS THE ONLY BOXER IN THE COUNTRY WHO THINKS IT'S A JOKE TO FIGHT LEONARD
R. Edgren.

BENNY LEONARD'S KID BROTHER. JOEY LEONARD
BENNY IS FIGHTING JACK BRITTON TO GET A NEW TITLE SO THAT HE CAN MAKE JOEY LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

HERE'S an inside story.

On the surface you might think that Benny Leonard's match with Jack Britton is just an effort by Benny to grab another title. But the wheel within the wheel is Benny's kid brother, Joey Leonard. Benny wants a different title so that brother Joey can become lightweight champion.

Of course, Joey and Benny can't fight each other for the lightweight championship, and Benny's ambition is to see Joey among the titleholders and big money makers of the ring. Benny isn't ready to simply step down and out. So he has chosen the obvious way. He'll go after another title for himself, and if he gets it will gradually drop out of competition among the lightweights until the kid brother is ready to step into his shoes. Meanwhile Benny will stick around, and if any particularly tough ones come along before brother Joey is experienced enough to take care of them brother Ben will tip them over and shove them aside.

Discourages Joey.

Two or three years ago the germ of this idea began to grow in Benny's mind. Four years ago, when brother Joey began to box in the gymnasium where Benny trained, Benny didn't want Joey to become a fighter. He has been all the way through the mill from the preliminary class to the championship, and he knows that success is only for the few, and the others get little but hard thumps.

At that time Joey was 15, and not very healthy or strong. He began boxing for exercise. Benny took him on the road when he trained and taught him a little about boxing. He regulated Joey's diet and directed his daily workouts, and after a while Joey began to fill out and show a deep chest and broad sloping shoulders where a rather skimpy, skinny torso had been before.

Now Great Fighter.

Right there Benny decided that if Joey wanted to become a professional boxer he'd back him to the limit. From that day on Benny taught Joey all the "inside stuff" that makes a champion—the ring strategy that Benny had learned in a hundred hard battles. Today Benny believes that Joey can beat any man in the lightweight division except himself.

"He's going to be a faster boxer than I ever was, and a harder hitter," Benny declares. "He's going to be the lightweight champion and he'll earn the title. I won't have to give it to him."

Today, 19 years of age, Joe Leonard is 5 feet 8 inches tall—which tops Benny by just three inches. He weighs 132 pounds stripped. He has an exceptionally long reach and is a terrific puncher. He is very aggressive, boxes like a master, and is game and cool under fire. His strength, like that of Benny Leonard, is far beyond the strength of other boys of his weight and age.

Britton a Whirlwind Fighter.

But to get back to the coming Leonard-Britton match, when Benny tries to work his way into another class to leave a vacancy for brother Joey he's going to, put up the fight of his life. And for once Jack Britton will need all of his veteran skill to stand off a challenger for his title.

LOGAN SQUARES OUT TO HUMBLE FAIRIES

The Fairbanks-Morse unbeaten team from Beloit will be the attraction at Logan Square this afternoon. They will be accompanied by their factory band and 300 rooters. The visitors are a pretty chesty crew, due to their straight run of victories, and so overconfident, that the home club may give them their initial setback.

JIM VAUGHN.

The Fairies will send in Big Jim Vaughn, who will be opposed by Rip Hagerman.

The other local league game on the schedule is at Marquette Manor, where Joliet will make its first appearance of the season. Tom McGuire, former White Sox, will hurl for the visitors. Lefty Sullivan will oppose him.

Kerr to Oppose Maples.

The third league game of the day is between the Chicagos and the Simmons at Kenosha, where Dick Kerr and Rolla Maples are billed to do the southpawing.

The Pyotts drew another open date in the schedule and booked the Romeos for a return game. The last time they met the home club won a 1 to 0 pitching duel, in which Buckeye and Cantwell were the hurling stars. The same pair will resume the argument this afternoon.

The Cubans will play the first of a four game series with the American Giants at Schorling's. It will also be the first appearance of the season of the Islanders in Chicago.

Four Champ Games On.

While all the teams in the City league will go into action only four championship games will be played, the other clubs booking exhibition contests. Following is the schedule:

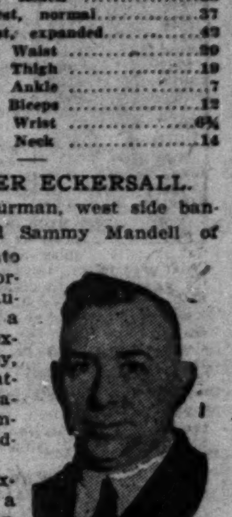
When Joe Burman, west side bantamweight, and Sammy Mandell of Rockford step into the ring tomorrow night at Aurora to settle a question of boxing supremacy, the Rockford battler will be favored with a number of natural advantages.



JIM MULLEN.

Mandell is expected to be a trifle heavier than Burman, although they are slated to weigh 121 pounds at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Sammy will have a three inch advantage in reach and as many in height. He also has a larger chest expansion, and is six years younger.

Burman will rely on his ring generalship to offset these handicaps. There is little about the finer points of the game which Joe does not know, and his ringcraft will be one of the factors in deciding the issue. Joe can punch harder than Mandell, especially with the right hand, but Sammy may have the edge when it comes to popping the left.

Around local fistic headquarters fans are inclined to make Burman a slight favorite. The dopesters believe Joe's experience will be a big factor in his favor. On the other hand, Mandell's supporters point to the bout with Pal Moore a year ago to support their claims of Sammy's ring craft. Indications are the boys will enter the ring with odds about even.

Mandell will leave for Aurora this afternoon. Burman will leave tomorrow morning.

Matchmaker Jim Mullen has announced that Dave Miller and Dave Barry will handle the show. They are considered two of the best referees in this section, according to Promoter Jack Sager.

In the eight round semi-windup Herbie Schaffer of Chicago will meet the Mexican Kid. They will weigh 117 pounds. Kid Murphy of New York and Joey Boyle, both flyweights, will open the card in a six round bout. Jack McGurn and Eddie Mahoney, welterweights, will trade punches in the second preliminary of eight rounds.

TAKE one swing with a Heddon Casting Rod and you'll say that split bamboo is the rod for you. It has no equal for combined lightness, strength, natural spring, and accurate casting force.

The original Heddon construction—long tip on a short butt—prevents any one point from getting the full force of a sharp strain, and distributes it equally over the full length. Longer, more accurate casts with less strain on rod, arm, and wrist.

4½, 5, and 5½ foot lengths, beautifully finished as befits their high quality $6 to $30. See Heddon Rods, Reels, and Baits at the store displaying the mammoth bass window card. Universally sold and used; made by

THE STRENGTH OF SPLIT BAMBOO

Split bamboo rod construction, showing how the strips split from the tight-grained outer sheath of the wood are wrought into a single shaft—live, elastic, and immensely strong.

In the eleven years of the "Field & Stream" National Black Bass contests more prize winners have been taken on Heddon-Dowagiac baits than all other artificial minnows combined. The original and only genuine "Dowagiac" minnows are made by Heddon.

ROWING EVENTS ON MISSISSIPPI THIS SUMMER

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

WALTER ECKERSALL.

Rowing, one of the most popular of college sports in the east, which has been sadly neglected in the middle west despite the many natural facilities, will come into its own next spring when a large regatta will be held on the upper waters of the Mississippi at Minneapolis.

No name has yet been given the event, but present plans call for it to be known as the northwestern regatta. Certain entrants in the opening race, which will be held over the Henley distance of less than two miles, will include Wisconsin, Minnesota, St. John's Military academy, and the University of Manitoba.

Unless those who are behind the movement change their plans, the event will be open only to college or prep school crews. There is some talk of admitting the Duluth Boat club crew and eights of other institutions in the section. University officials, however, are not in favor of making the event an open regatta and are more inclined ot confine the competition to the universities, colleges, and prep schools.

Wonderful Course.

It is extremely doubtful if there is a better racing course in the country than that afforded by the father of waters at its source. Even the Hudson river with its large expanse off Poughkeepsie does not afford the facilities that the Mississippi does. This fact is vouched for by those who have attended the eastern intercollegiate regatta for years.

The race will either start or finish off Minnehaha park, one of the most picturesque spots in the northwest. The Minnehaha falls referred to by Longfellow in one of his poems as laughing water is a short distance from the river's edge.

The course is an ideal one for spectators. Two beautiful boulevards extend on both sides of the river while there are numerous walks along the shores of the river. The drives are much higher than the level of the water and as the river is about wide enough for six crews to race at the same time, spectators will have little trouble to distinguish between the contestants.

Straight Between Points.

The river is almost straight between the points where the races will be pulled. There are no snags or bridges and the water is deep enough to allow large craft to follow the races. Unless the wind should blow either up or down stream, the water would be perfectly calm because the surface is protected by the large bluffs on both sides.

Because of a government dam, there will be no current at the time the races are held. The locks will be closed and the water made as still as any racing course in the country. Under such conditions it is almost unbelievable that the University of Minnesota and other institutions in the close vicinity of the river have not taken advantage of the rowing facilities before.

Fred Luehring, newly appointed director of athletics at the University of Minnesota, is enthusiastic over rowing and he is one of the prime factors in the organization of the regatta to be held next spring. At the present time over fifty students at the Gopher institution are taking advantage of the equipment of the Minneapolis Boat club and are on the river five days in the week.

Director Luehring was formerly connected with the athletic department at Princeton. He has seen races held on Carnegie lake, the artificial boating place of the Tigers. He has also looked upon the annual regattas pulled on the Hudson off Poughkeepsie. He has attended other boating events, but it is his candid opinion that none of the eastern places have such natural facilities for rowing as those at Minneapolis.

"Rowing will not lie dormant at Minnesota any longer," Director Luehring said. "We have entered into a verbal agreement with Wisconsin to meet them next year. We will also try to persuade the University of Manitoba to send its crew. St. John's will welcome such an invitation and it may be that Culver Military academy will send its eight.

"If our first attempt is successful I have no doubt but that other Big Ten institutions with rowing facilities will fall into line and that in the course of time the middle west will boast of a regatta which will rank in importance and interest with the big event held annually on the Hudson.

Short Race Is Best.

"I do not favor an eight oared race over two miles. This is plenty long enough to test the oarsmanship and endurance of the crews. Length of such a race would safeguard against the contestants suffering any bad results from the sport which is frequently condemned because it is too much of a strain on the oarsmen."

Those interested in the proposed regatta are doing everything possible to make the first race a huge success. If this is accomplished, rowing as an intercollegiate sport will be established in the middle west.

TOMMY MILTON QUALIFIES FOR BIG MOTOR RACE

Indianapolis, Ind., May 27.—Tommy Milton, winner of the 500 mile race here last year and 1921 champion driver, today qualified for the tenth annual renewal of the Indianapolis motor speedway race next Tuesday, driving the ten miles in 6:22:39, an average of 94.4 miles an hour.

Three other drivers also qualified their cars today. They are Jules Goux and Eddie Hearne, dricing French machines, and Art Klein, who narrowly escaped injury Thursday when he lost control of his mount and was sent spinning into the retaining wall.

Goux made the best time of the quartet today, his mark being 6:11:23, an average of 96.95 miles an hour. Hearne's time was 6:16:05, an average of 95.6 miles an hour. Klein drove the four laps in 6:53:05, an average of 87.15 miles an hour.

Twenty-five cars to date have passed the test and are practically ready for the call to the starting line next Tuesday. Four more, Howdy, Wilcox, Frank Davidson, William Gardner and Jack Curtner, will try to qualify tomorrow.

CHICAGOANS TO FIND HILLCREST COURSE A NO. 1

BY JOE DAVIS.

Chicagoans who are planning to compete in the western amateur golf championship at the Hillcrest Country club of Kansas City next month will be pleased to learn that the course is in great shape.

William C. Jackson, who is constructing the new course at Olympia fields, recently inspected Hillcrest in company with Vice President James E. Nugent of the Western Golf association, and found the course of championship quality. It is located on the crest of a hill and so is well named. Surrounded by rolling hills and gently undulating valleys, with Swope park in the distance, it is possible to see for miles over a beautiful country.

Fair Ways Have Fine Turf.

The course is as near perfection as it is humanly possible to make it, the fairways having a fine turf and the greens being true. Chicago players will find the greens slower than those here, as they consist of clover and blue grass, which are best adapted to the Missouri climate.

The yardage of the course is 6,406, with a type of hole predominating which makes it hard to get home in two shots. An added handicap is the prevalence of tricky cross winds which require real golf to offset.

Hearty Welcome for Chicagoans.

James E. Nugent extends a hearty invitation to Chicago golfers who are eligible, and as the hospitality of Kansas City is proverbial they are assured of a pleasant visit. Arrangements have been made to convey players from the hotels to the course by motor.

A tie resulted in the novelty event staged at South Shore. Contestants were to select the best eight holes of the eighteen played, and as a result J. F. Sheehy, who had 90, as well as A. I. Camp, both finished with a choice of 31. H. W. Hayes, R. E. Hughes, S. A. Dee, and N. O. O'Donnell tied with 33 each.

MIDLOTHIAN.

Honors in the ball sweepstakes rested between D. J. Malloy and J. C. Reber, who tied with net scores of 75. The former had a gross of 89, minus 14, while Reber had 87, less 12. C. W. Booth had low gross with 84 and was tied with three other members for second low net.

EVANSTON members who shot at a blind bogey of 73 were unable to get a bullseye, Max Whitacre being the nearest with 76. C. J. McKenna was second with 77 and J. F. Craddock third with 79. E. W. HOLDERNESS IS NEW BRITISH GOLF CHAMPION PRESTWICK, Scotland, May 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—Great Britain's new amateur golf champion is Ernest W. Holderness, an Englishman. His runnerup, John Caven, a young Scotchman, stuck to him like a burr throughout the final round this afternoon. The match provided one of the most sensationally interesting tilts in golfing history. Holderness won on the eighteenth hole.

Spectator Drops Dead.

So intense was the interest of the gallery of 5,000 that at the sixth green William Henderson, 60 years old, a retired inspector of schools, dropped dead.

Holderness had a stroke of fortune at the thirteenth hole which contributed materially to his victory. In pulling a shot in his approach, the ball struck a woman spectator and was thus saved from going into the rough. He won the hole, 4 to 5.

Holderness, who was born in India in 1890, entered the tournament from Walton Heath. He played for the Oxford varsity team three years, beginning in 1910, and against America in last year's tournament. He won the Oxford and Cambridge society's tournament three times, and this year he established a new record for the Walton Heath club. This is the third successive year that an Oxfordian has fought through the amateur finals.

Caven's Nerve Remarkable.

Caven, 27 years old, of the Cochran Castle club, is an engineer employed by the Paisley firm. Although he won the Eden tournament at St. Andrews, he was comparatively inexperienced in big matches.

His coolness and unshaken courage in today's nerve wracking struggle were regarded as remarkable.

ON OTHER GOLF COURSES.

BOB O'LINK.

C. Williams and K. W. Curtis had low gross in the handicap at Bob O'Link, A. V. Konsberg with 70 and Richard J. Collins with 74, heading the net column. Winners in the ball sweepstakes were: Class A and B—C. Williams, 81; K. W. Curtis, 81; B. H. Boyd, 82; C. E. Karstrom, 85. Class C—F. A. Cascaden, 75; R. B. Umberger, 76; T. Johnson, 78; F. O. Butler, 78; A. M. Clement, 82. Class D—R. J. Collins, 74; F. M. Perry, 76; L. M. Rutledge, 82; A. C. Allen, 84; W. H. Robinson, 88; E. H. Pence, 88.

INDIAN HILL.

W. D. Truesdale won the event against par at Indian Hill finishing all square. Roger Sherman was 2 down and B. F. Cummins, who had low gross of 80, Howard V. O'Brien, Paul Wilder, and A. D. Edwards, tied for third place at 4 down.

OAK PARK.

Double honors went to C. L. Peniston, who won the ball sweepstakes and the eighteen hole medal play event with his card of 87. N. H. Davis, 94; E. Forbes, 98, and W. G. Oliver, 101, also won in the latter contest.

EVEN LIGHTNING CAN'T DOWN A GOLFER WITH LUCK OF THIS BRAND

IT is said lightning does not strike twice in the same spot, but Guy N. St. Clair had two electrifying experiences at the Calumet Country club last week. Playing Wednesday for the home hole, he sent his drive into the rough at the tenth fairway. Taking a spoon, he got away a fine ball, which reached the green and ran into the cup. The next day he was one of a party of three players who were shocked by lightning, but fortunately was not hurt seriously, and was able to play yesterday. Mr. St. Clair is champion of the Chicago Coal Trade Golf association.

GLEN VIEW.

A. W. Eddy, who had a score of 86—13—73, won in class A of the regular weekly handicap event, while G. B. McCormick, 88—17—71, led in class B. The conors in class C were carried off by B. W. Cunningham, 103—27—76.

NEAL LEADS GOLF QUALIFIERS AT WESTMORELAND

T. C. Neal got under the spotlight in the official launching of the competitive season at the Westmoreland Country club yesterday. His card of 98, and an allowance of 23, enabled him to lead the qualifiers in the Argyle cup and win the Fellowship cup with 75 net.

C. M. Haugan won the blind bogey event with 96-12-84, while President Art C. Hammond, M. A. Mummert and A. Croxon tied in the sweepstakes with a total of 79. Qualifiers in the Argyle cup, besides Neal, were:

E. T. Marsh, 88—11—77; A. C. Hammond, 91—12—79; M. A. Mummert, 94—15—79; A. Croxson, 94—15—79; J. D. W. Archer, 85—5—80; A. C. Boyd, 95—15—80; H. C. Lutkin, 96—16—80; W. Ridgeway, 100—15—85, and C. B. Lapham, 110—25—85, tied for second place in the bogey event.

FLOSSMOOR.

Both low gross and low net in the Splash tournament at Flossmoor were carried off by R. J. Daly, who had a total of 80, which, minus his allowance of 2, left him with 78, which led the class A players. In the B class H. H. Taylor, 86—10—76, led, while F. J. Ansley Jr., 103—21—82, was the winner in class C. J. H. Lang, 105—25—80, took the class D prize.

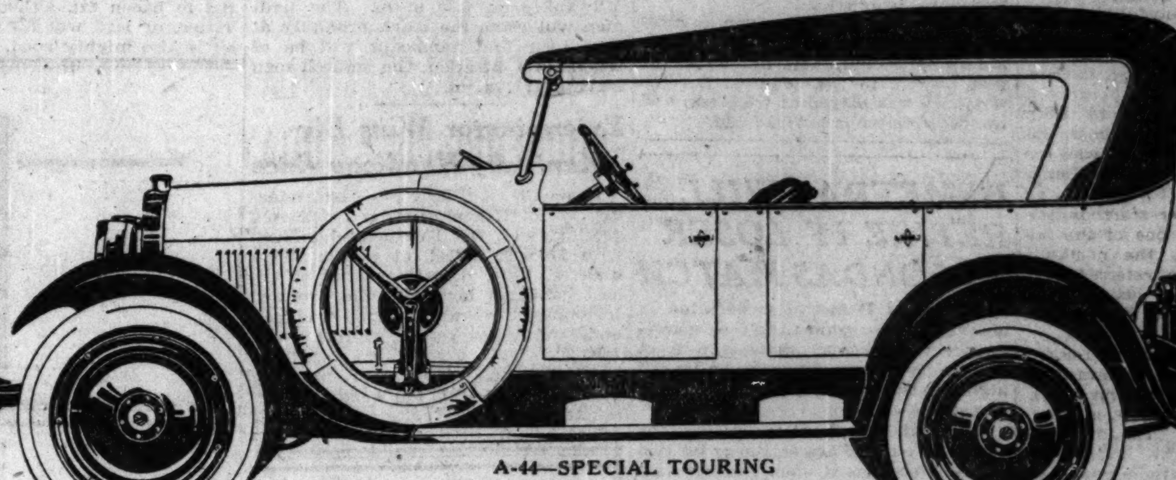
WESTCOTT

The Car with a Longer Life



A-44—SPECIAL TOURING

$1690

Westcott Takes Price Lead Among Quality Cars

Now you can buy a car built on a quality basis at a price that has heretofore meant vastly less in motor car value.

Reductions effective immediately cut from $200 to $600 from the prices of Westcott cars.

There is no need now to consider buying a car of indifferent character and quality whose sole appeal has been price.

With these new prices Westcott remains the same car of real merit. There has been no change, no cutting of quality.

1923 Construction Ideas

Westcott offers in the new models, introduced a few months ago, scores of ideas that point the way for 1923 motor car construction.

There is a California top without extra cost.

The carburetion is controlled thermostatically, giving greater power, economy and speed.

The chassis lubrication is by a 500-pound oil pressure system.

A new braking design gives better brakes and removes all rods and tubes from the rear axle.

It is a wonderful car to handle. Despite its size it turns in a circle with an 18 foot radius.

The upholstery is beautiful hand-buffed leather.

It has chrome vanadium steel springs.

A Special Model at $1965

The special touring car, carrying much extra equipment, including Tuarc disc wheels or wire wheels, and two extra tires and tubes, is listed at $1965.

The body is painted an Onondaga brown, with water-crushed leather upholstery to match. The extra wheels and tires are mounted alongside, at the cowl. A trunk and three suitcases and polished aluminum guard rails in the rear add to the smartness of this car.

Bright windshield brackets, scuff plates, and other little touches here and there take this car far from the commonplace.

A Seven-Passenger at $1890

A remarkable new Continental motor features the seven-passenger touring car, which sells for $1890.

Whether for a trip down the boulevard or across the continent, here is a car that will meet your every demand. The new motor is designed to give that extra burst of speed or that surplus supply of power which perhaps you won't often use but may sometimes want.

Whatever model you choose, you will find Westcott first of all a quality car in performance and appearance.

YOUNG JAKE SETS PUBLIC RIGHT ON HIS CUE TEACHER

Before leaving by auto for San Francisco, Jake Schaefer, the world's balk line champion, said he desired to correct some statements regarding his billiard career which are erroneous. Among these was one that he had been taught the game by his father, the most brilliant performer of his day.

JAKE SCHAEFER.
[Und. & Und. Photo.]

Young Jake asserts his father had no desire for him to become a young prodigy of the game, and it was not until he was about 14 years of age that he began to play.

Regrets Absence of Father.

Schaefer Sr., at this time was ill in Denver and not able to give the boy much instruction. Young Jake regrets he did not get more pointers from the man who was credited with originating many of the systems, which were copied by other experts. When efforts were made to make the game harder it was generally the older Schaefer who found methods to overcome the new difficulties.

Young Jake showed promise enough to warrant the belief he would become a first flighter, and so he stuck to the game and eventually realized his ambition of becoming champion of the world.

Credits Chicago Man.

Jake gives a lot of credit to Dr. John F. Barrett of Chicago for his recent successes. Four months before the Hoppe match he prevailed on Young Jake to take some of his advice and coaching. He first impressed on Schaefer the necessity of being in good physical condition, and for many weeks before the world's tournament Schaefer walked from four to eight miles almost every day. Then Dr. Barrett suggested a few changes in his play, in which Jake acquiesced, the result being that Schaefer was brimful of confidence when he entered the championship tournament.

Forrey to Defend Title.

Richard L. Forrey, the state amateur three cushion champion, will defend his title at Hodge's room, Evanston, tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights, meeting George Sunde, former champion, in a 150 point match. This being the first championship staged at Evanston, a large crowd is expected.

LAPORTE FORMS WALTON CHAPTER

Laporte, Ind., May 27.—[Special.]—A Laporte chapter of the Izaak Walton league has been organized following several meetings of Laporte county sportsmen. Members of the board of directors who will elect their officers are J. B. Shick, C. V. Shields, Roy Sonneborn, W. H. Worden, Earl Rowley, J. B. Dilworth and Oscar Bokland. About 200 members have joined. The purpose of the league will be to enforce the fish and game laws, restock the lakes, and to keep the lakes from drying up.

West secured nine tricks.

The west hand was nearly strong enough to bid four clubs instead of no-trump, but as a very good dummy would be needed in order to secure eleven tricks at clubs the no-trump bid was better.

The play of the ace of hearts at trick one would have been very bad, although it would have made a tremendous gain.

North should have played the ten of spades at trick two. That would have enabled south to win with the nine of spades at trick five, and make two more spade tricks.

The deal is purposely given as most players would handle it. The north hand was actually held by one of the best players in the country, the ten of spades was played at trick two and the declarer made but one odd.

DEMETRAL WILL RETIRE IF LOSER IN LONDAS MATCH

If William Demetral is defeated in his attempt to regain the Greek heavyweight wrestling championship from Lim London at the Coliseum on Friday night, he says he will retire from the game.

Demetral has been wrestling for years. He met Farmer Burns on two different occasions when Farmer was at the peak of his career. Burns paid the Greek a compliment recently when Demetral wrestled Hanson, the man whom Burns is grooming for the heavyweight title. Farmer said Demetral is one of the cleverest men the game has known.

Woods and Waters

by BOB. BECKER

ON COOKING THE FISH AFTER YOU CATCH IT.

It makes no difference where a fish is caught, whether in clear or muddy water, if it is not cooked properly it is unfit to eat. The saying goes that enough poor coffee is drunk every day in the United States of America to float a battleship, and it is equally true that enough poorly or improperly cooked fish are served every summer to stock a dozen lakes. I have seen and tried to eat (and very likely you have, too) beautiful fish, taken from crystal clear waters, that were so badly cooked that it was an insult to the fish. The best trout or bass can be spoiled if not taken care of after it is landed and will be ruined for the table if it is fried soggy with grease.

Small fish like perch can be fried whole with their backbones nicked so that they won't curl up. As for the medium sized ones, chop off their heads and tails so that you can get them in the skillet. As a rule, it is best to roll fish in cornmeal or bread crumbs before you drop them into the frying pan, as a coating of this sort keeps them from sticking, and also in frying the cornmeal gives the fish a nice brown color.

Fry in plenty of hot grease until a rich golden brown, putting on salt and pepper when nearly done. Some fellows like to put in the skillet a few drops of some "hot" sauce to tone up the flavor of fish, and I was camping at one time with a fisherman who was keen for lemon juice as an improvement on the flavor of his portion from the frying pan.

As for the grease to be used in frying, there are a number of kinds which will do very well. We are rather partial to bacon fat, although salt pork, butter, or lard will fill the bill. Olive oil is also mighty good, but darn few of us have olive oil along on fishing trips. Above all, wipe the fish dry before putting it in the pan, as it will absorb too much grease if damp or wet. But the point which usually makes for punk, soggy fish is not having the grease piping hot. If you drop them in before the fat is crackling hot you are going to eat soggy, tasteless fish for lunch. Moreover, put the pieces in the pan one at a time, so that the frying fat will not suddenly lose its heat. Sounds like mighty small things to watch out for in cooking fish, but they sure are important and make a lot of difference in the way your lunch or dinner is going to taste.

We have eaten trout broiled over hot coals that were tasty enough to fairly make your mouth water, and this broiling stunt is a pretty good thing to get hep to. The method used could also be applied to other fishes when no skillet is available. Take a small green stick and sharpen one end of it. Poke this through the mouth of the fish (which has previously been split down the back and cleaned) and run it into the body in at least one place. Keep turning your fish over the hot coals so that it will broil evenly. Now, if there is any bacon in your lunch kit you can broil some strips at the same time by holding them over the fire in the same manner, and when the drops of grease fall just put your bacon above the broiling fish so that it will receive these splatters of "flavoring extract." After a couple of attempts at this stunt you will be able to turn out a broiled fish, in primitive fashion, done to a turn, that will surprise you.

This method sounds easy, but it is not such a cinch method as it sounds. In broiling the usual mistake made is in trying to do the cooking when the fire is blazing about a foot high. Blackened, charred, half cooked food is the result, and broiling as a method of preparing game or fish then is blacklisted forever.

THRONG TO SEE HOSSES RUN AT PALATINE TODAY

The biggest crowd that has ever attended a Stockyards derby is expected at Palatine this afternoon, when the annual classic of the Chicago Stockyards association will be held.

There are twelve entries and from seven to twelve in the other racing events.

In addition to the horse racing there are numerous events for men and women on the program arranged by the Illinois Automobile club, which has given most of the prizes for the day's sports.

Thousands of motorists are expected to attend. Autoists are advised to proceed north on Sheridan road, west on Dempster street, and on the Ballard road to the Rand road, which will take them into Palatine.

DOCTOR APPROVES SUZANNE'S PLAY AT WIMBLEDON

PARIS, May 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—Suzanne Lenglen, after consulting a specialist who pronounced her heart in good condition, has decided to play through the tournament at Wimbledon, beginning June 26, without waiting for the challenge round, as would be her privilege.

Her doctor today prescribed a short rest, saying the strain of playing through the recent international hard court tournament at Brussels, including the singles, women's doubles, and mixed doubles, after her long absence from the courts, had caused the painful heart action which she experienced last week.

BOY SCOUTS

ISSUES SWIMMING CHALLENGE.

The northwest district challenges all other districts to a swimming meet to be held any time or place after June 3. All that is asked is that the meet be divided into senior and junior events so that all the swimmers can have a chance. The district addresses this challenge especially to the north shore and stock yards distrits.

The west side field day had to be postponed last Saturday on account of rain. The new date is June 2 at Sears-Roebuck athletic field.

Claude V. Hines, field executive of the southwest district for the last two and a half years, leaves to take up the work of scout executive in Peoria.

Many Kiwanis clubs all over the city are showing their appreciation of scout work in various ways. Some of them are doing work in a financial way, while others are presenting troops with American flag sets.

The Morgan Park High school has won the city championship in signaling. The signal corps of the north shore district has issued a challenge to the Morgan Park corps asking for an opportunity to show its speed. Morgan Park has accepted and the contest will be arranged at once.

Calumet scouts will be in the South Chicago Memorial day parade. Scouts will assemble in Kensington street, between 115th and 116th, at 1:45 p. m. Field Executive Bergquist will be in charge.

Calumet scout leaders are building a cabin for their district at Adam Inthout's country place, near the Thornton forest preserve. They haven't announced when it will be ready for use.

The Hyde Park and Englewood Kiwanis' club have already started construction on the scout cabins in the Palos hills tract of the forest preserve. They should be ready soon.

The west side scribes will meet at the Legler branch library on Wednesday at 4:30 p. m.

A World-Wide Preference

No less than half of all the Hupmobile sales in America are being made to owners of other cars.

That shows how far the fame of this car has gone beyond its own immediate circle—which is always growing and keeps on coming back for the Hupmobile.

This conversion of other owners means that the Hupmobile has been singled out for particular preference because of its reliability.

By that we mean the everlasting regularity of performance and service, the consistent economy and efficiency, which have always stamped the Hupmobile an extraordinary motor car value.

Why Kissel Hoods Are Rattle-Proof

Before the hood is placed on a Kissel it is first formed and hand-fitted around a steel pattern—a master model of the Kissel radiator shell. Every hood must fit exactly at every point; minute adjustments are made to perpetuate the accuracy of the original design.

That is why a Kissel custom-built hood fits true at every point around both cowl and radiator shell, and why the roughest road usage will not produce rattling or looseness.

This is but one instance of the precision with which Kissel motor cars are manufactured. Every part in a Kissel is first constructed with hair-line accuracy, then hand-fitted to the unit into which it goes—by craftamen whose pride in their work has made "Custom-Built" mean what it does when applied to Kissel vehicles.

Silent Miles

No car is truly custom-built unless its construction insures freedom from squeaks and rattles throughout its life. And nowhere is the fine craftsmanship of Kissel Custom-Built Sixes better exemplified than in the special manufacturing processes that give every Kissel car this permanent insurance.

Every part that goes into a Kissel body is manufactured as precisely, inspected as minutely, and hand-fitted as painstakingly as is the most important mechanical unit.

Such fineness of body construction is usually associated with extremely high-priced cars. Yet these exceptional standards, applied to both body and mechanical units, are the regular standards of production for the Kissel five-passenger touring car, now priced at $1885—the cost of an ordinary good automobile.

Indeed, the Kissel Motor Car Company has introduced many special manufacturing processes, exclusively its own, to eliminate entirely the body weaving that sooner or later expresses itself in squeaks and rattles.

Every moving chassis part in a Kissel is hand-fitted with a bronze graphited bearing, self-lubricating, which noiselessly cushions the jars of the road.

Patented Kissel adjustments take up all side play in both front and rear springs.

Kissel bodies are mounted on "anti-squeak" material. A layer of leather between fenders and body makes fender rattles impossible.

All doors and windows are cushioned with the same care, with extra rubber bumpers and special "anti-rattlers."

These features show particularly the care that Kissel takes to eliminate noise from motor bodies; but they are typical of the fine craftsmanship that shows in every production step—in the six cylinder 61 H. P. motor, in the perfect balance of every reciprocating part, in the individual adjustment of parts to units and units to car.

Price reductions corresponding to that on the five-passenger touring car have been made on other models in this Kissel Custom-Built line. Here indeed are motor car values that deserve the attention of every intending car buyer.

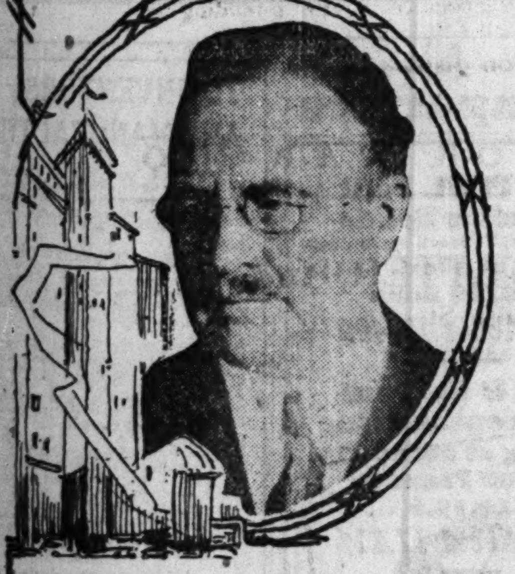
Must a Boy Carry water to the Elephants to Become President of the United States?

PRESIDENT HARDING

JUDGE E.H. GARY



MAYOR HYLAN

DID YOU swim in the ol' swimmin' hole, when you were a boy? Ever play hookey?

These are a few of the questions put to President Harding by Horace Wade, 14-year-old boy author—who has interviewed world-famous men for the Chicago Evening American.

William Randolph Hearst told Horace how a good newspaper is made—and what constitutes a good newspaper man.

Judge Gary, the great steel magnate, was asked: "Would you rather be an author than the head of a great steel corporation?"

Mayor Hylan, of New York, told of boyish ambitions to be an author—and of a love story .... But that's getting ahead of our story.

Babe Ruth and George Sisler, perhaps our greatest baseball stars, gave Horace material for one of the finest baseball yarns you've ever read.

Horace Wade's stories of his interviews—the answers to his questions—will be published in The Chicago Evening American, beginning tomorrow, Monday, May 29th. Don't miss a word of any of them! They are the most entertaining interviews you've ever read—written by a 14-year-old schoolboy who has startled the whole world with his genius.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Answers to inquiries are based upon information which THE TRIBUNE believes reliable, fair, and unprejudiced, but beyond the exercise of care in securing such information THE TRIBUNE assumes no responsibility.

Inquiries must bear the signature and address of writer in order to receive attention. Answers thought to be of public interest will be published. If an answer is not of general interest it will be mailed provided stamped, self-addressed envelope is inclosed. Address letters to Investors' Guide.

Anent Salesmen Who Use Guide as Reference.

For several weeks a "blind" letter has been sent out, over the signature of an individual, offering the public an opportunity to "earn 36 per cent a year—or more—with perfect safety," and giving THE TRIBUNE'S Investor's Guide as a reference. No company or security is mentioned by name, but such extravagant claims as the above and the following are made: "Never before have you had an offer like this. Never again is it probable that such a chance will come your way. . . . Will you investigate the facts of this exceptional opportunity to make big, safe, easy profits?" Those who "bite" and write for further particulars receive by return mail a letter and circular offering the preferred stock of a certain manufacturing company and inclosing a reproduction of an article which we published in this department about six months ago reviewing the stock for one of our inquirers. In that review, after a statement of the company's condition, as shown by its balance sheet and income account, we give the opinion that "from the information available we think this preferred stock is entitled to good rating." That is our only comment, and represents our unbiased opinion, based on the available data, but the mention of us as a reference, especially in the same letter in which such extravagant claims are made, might lead to the false impression that we were recommending this stock, or even sanctioning these claims. Such, of course, is not the case, and we want the public to know this, so that they will not be misled.

In replying to inquirers, whether in the paper or by mail, all obtainable information is carefully analyzed. After weighing all pertinent data, we give an honest and unprejudiced opinion, which we believe the facts warrant. We have no interest whatsoever in the sale or purchase of any securities, our only endeavor being to give our inquirers the fairest advice possible. Our duty and interest ends there. It occasionally has been brought to our attention that articles in which we have expressed a favorable opinion of a security have been reproduced and used by those interested in the sale of the security to assist them in their sales. Our published replies are, of course, matters of public record, and we probably cannot prevent their use in this manner, nor do we especially care whether or not they are reproduced, providing they are not used in such a way as to any way imply that we recommend the purchase or are interested in the sale of the security. What we want the public to understand is that this department has no interest in hindering or helping the sale of any security, that it is conducted solely for the benefit of investors, and that it has no interest other than theirs.

N. Y. CRITICISM OF LAKES TO OCEAN CUT HELD BOGUS

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—Interpretation of certain sections of the report of the international joint commission by New York interests opposed to the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep water canal, and advanced by the New York delegation in congress to President Harding as a reason why he should delay further action on the project, was branded as "false" by Obadiah Gardner, chairman of the international joint commission, in a letter today to Representative Chalmers [Ohio], author of the Chalmers bill and a leading advocate of the seaway in congress.

The paragraph of the report to which the New York interests gave a contortionist interpretation is the one in which the commission recommends that certain matters of detail relating to the lakes-to-sea route be left to a special board of engineers which would function under the jurisdiction of the joint commission.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Speculation in the stocks of the various Standard Oil units was unusually active for a Saturday and new high records for the year were made in many issues. Trading in these stocks during recent weeks has been based upon the many rumors of pending mergers, the rise in the price of gasoline, and other refined products, together with increased consumption demand, the rise in crude, and rumored stock dividends and reports of splitting of shares in the case of Vacuum and other companies. The feature was Standard Oil of New Jersey, which rose 2¼ points. Standard Oil of Indiana was prominent in the "over the counter market," advancing to 118⅝, a new high record for the year. Gulf Refining advanced another 5 points to 580, also a new high for the year.

The sharp recovery in Republic Iron and Steel, following weakness on Friday, was attributable to a report that the "three company steel merger," to include Republic, Midvale, and Inland Steel, had been agreed on and that papers to that effect had been signed late Friday night. The report was not accepted as fact, however, because of the failure of Midvale to act accordingly, as preliminary reports had it that Midvale would be taken into the combination at $45 a share. The price at which Republic was to be taken was given as $82.50. The rise in Republic, however, could be explained on the theory that if the combination is completed this company would be the main factor in the group, as it is more conservatively capitalized than Midvale. Gossip in the street had it that the stock of the consolidation company would be started at around 60 in the open market. With regard to the question of dividends, the opinion was expressed that it would be some time before these would be inaugurated on the new stock, as both Midvale and Republic are not paying anything on their shares at present.

Aggressive buying of Tobacco Products, which advanced more than 2 points to above 79, and a rise of some 4 points in American Sumatra, which sold at 43, marked all around strength in the topacco group

Negotiations have been completed for the purchase by the United Alloy Steel corporation of Canton, O., of the Canton Sheet Steel company, owned by the Hydraulic Steel company of Cleveland. The terms of the sale are not announced. The purchase will increase the equipment of the United Alloy Steel corporation from twenty to thirty-three mills.

Stockholders of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical company are considering a proposal for a change in the company's common stock from 380,000 shares (par $100) to 380,000 shares of no par value, voting stock, and 95,000 shares of nonvoting, or Class B common stock, of no par value. It is also proposed to increase the voting common stock to 905,000 shares.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad announced that coupons due June 1 next and on subsequent dates from the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad company general mortgage 5 per cent fifty year gold bonds, due June, 1942, will be paid at the office of the company in New York instead of by J. P. Morgan & Co., as heretofore.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending May 24, by 199 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $943,606,000, compared with $949,177,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $943,606,000, compared with $848,182,000 for the corresponding week last year.

The United States Steel corporation has ordered the Minnesota Steel company, a subsidiary, to bring all departments of the plants at Duluth to capacity operation. About 1,000 additional men will be taken on.

The Southern California Edison company is offering 50,000 shares of new common stock to shareholders, who may subscribe for one share of new for every ten shares of old. The price is fixed at $102 a share in cash or $103 payable at $5 a share a month.

A. J. Stevens has been appointed receiver in equity for William Whitmer & Sons, Inc., a $3,000,000 lumber concern, which through nine subsidiaries owns and operats timber lands, pulp, and lumber mills in Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, and elsewhere.

Bradstreet's reports 410 failures in the United States last week, against 448 in the preceding week and 317 in the corresponding week of 1921.

RAILROAD NOTES

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis gave out encouraging reports on the traffic conditions. Car loadings generally have been larger than for the corresponding week a year ago, notwithstanding the fact that coal tonnage is falling below last year's figures. Officials of southern roads report a similar improvement.

The St. Louis and San Francisco railroad will equip its passenger trains with radio outfits, and baseball scores, market reports, and concerts will be sent for the entertainment of travelers, it was announced at general offices of the road. The feature will be inaugurated next Thursday on a train running between Oklahoma City and Lawton, Okla.

Interest in the report that a merger of the Chicago and Alton road with the Missouri, Kansas and Texas is impending has been revived by a dispatch from Bloomington, Ill., that accountants for the "Katy" have begun to check up the Alton's rolling stock, buildings, and other property.

Total payment which the government is obliged to make to the Philadelphia and Reading railroad on account of losses sustained by it during six months in 1920, after government control ceased, was set at $9,506,060 in a final accounting approved by the interstate commerce commission. Advance and partial payments have been made against this sum, until the commission was able to certify Saturday that a treasury payment of $1,656,000 would close the account.

The Chicago, Aurora and Elgin Railroad company has asked permission of the Illinois commerce commission to issue $1,050,000 mortgage bonds.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The local unlisted securities market continues steady, but without spectacular feature. Trading has developed a broader scope and greater activity than has ever before existed.

An excellent demand for Butler Brothers advanced the price to sales as high as 41⅞, at which level profit taking caused little reaction to a close of 40½ to 41. Timken-Detroit Axle improved about 6 points to a close of 33 to 33½. Packard Motor issues continued strong, the common advancing about 2 points to 15 bid, offered at 15¼, while the preferred improved to 89½ bid, offered at 90½. Goodyear Tire and Rubber common improved about 1 point to sales at 13, closing at 12¾ to 13¼, while the preferred advanced approximately 3 points to 38¾ to 39¼.

Stearns Motor improved fractionally to a close of 24¼ to 24¾. A good demand was in evidence for the Consumers issues, the common advancing 2 points to a close of 8¾ to 9¼, while the preferred advanced some 9 points to sales at 73. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply relinquished 2 points at 52½ to 54. Sales in McCord common ranged between 5¼ and 5¾. Sales in Ford of Canada ranged between 375 and 380. Avery common advanced to sales at 25½, closing at 24½ to 26. Motor Wheel was fractionally lower at 13¼ bid, 13½ asked. The merger of Wholesale Grocers, Western Grocers, and National Grocers companies caused an advance of the National Grocer common from 7 to high sales at 8. Stock was offered for sale at this figure at the close with buyers at 7⅝.

On a rather limited volume of trade the public utilities receded to slightly lower levels. American Gas and Electric common was an exception, however, advancing some 5 points to 159 bid, 162 asked. American Light and Traction common ranged between 141 and 144. Sales of Cities Service common ranged between 133 and 138.

COAL OUTPUT FOR WEEK INCREASED; 6,000,000 SHORT

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—The eighth week of the coal strike opened with a decided increase in production, according to the weekly report of the geological survey. The returns so far received indicate an output of soft coal close to 5,000,000 tons. Production of anthracite, however, remains practically at zero.

Final reports for the seventh week of the strike, May 15-20, show an output of 4,472,000 tons of bituminous coal and 8,000 tons of anthracite, a total of 4,480,000 tons. In the corresponding week of 1920 the combined output of anthracite and bituminous coal was 11,090,000 tons, and a year ago our mines were producing 9,780,000 tons.

Considering the anthracite and bituminous mines as a common supply of fuel, it will be seen that the quanity of coal now being raised is still more than 6,000,000 tons short of the weekly rate in a year of active business, and nearly 5,000,000 tons short of that in the year of depression, 1921.

INSURANCE POLICY
BONDS

Creating a Lifetime Estate in Only Ten Months

There are countless plans enabling the investor to accumulate money. But most of them require years of patient waiting and investing before they show appreciable results.

The "DeWolf Plan" Estate* is different. Under this plan payments of $50 a month for 10 months create an estate of about $2,500—the exact amount depending on your age.

The plan is simple. You make a first payment on a DeWolf Approved $500 bond and at the same time are insured for approximately $2,000 in an old, nationally known, conservative insurance company.

Monthly payments of about $50 for ten months pay for the bond in full and the first year's insurance premium. Thereafter the income from the bond carries the insurance.

This plan for the first time affords an opportunity to create immediate capital and at the same time provide an estate for the future.

The complete story of the plan is contained in our booklet, "DeWolf Plan" Estate. You will find a table showing the exact amount of the estate obtainable at your age. Call or write for your copy today.

TO INVENTORS AND MANUFACTURERS

One of our clients is looking for a new automobile accessory, which is needed by all motorists, and for which a large sale can be established.

They prefer a product which can be made from gray iron castings, and are only interested in products on which the profit is large enough to justify extensive advertising.

This concern has ample capital—one of the most modern and best equipped factories in the United States—a favorable reputation with the trade—and a Sales Organization that covers the United States and Canada.

We are not interested in "freak" inventions, but are looking for a device, invention or automobile accessory that has merit, which can be manufactured economically, and which can be sold at a fair profit to the dealer, jobber and manufacturer.

WHEAT TRADERS EVEN UP; MAY IS DOWN TWO CENTS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A general move to even up was under way in wheat, especially in the May. Liquidation was on in the latter with prices holding within relatively narrow limits with the finish 2c lower. Deferred deliveries ran into free selling on the bulges, while on the breaks offerings were readily absorbed and final trades were at net gains of ⅛c. Coarse grains were dull with corn unchanged and oats ⅛@¼c lower. Rye closed 1@2c lower.

A collapse of the so called May wheat deal came the last week and with general unloading by scattered longs prices dropped sharply, at the inside showing 23c under the high of the previous week and at the last was off 10c as compared with a week ago. Deferred deliveries were rather unsettled, with July off 1c and September ¼c higher. Corn and oats had a narrow range and averaged lower, corn losing ⅝@1¼c, and oats ⅜@1¼c. May rye went to a discount under July for the first time on the crop, and closed 4@6½c lower. Provisions, while dull, closed with lard unchanged to 7½c higher and ribs 20c higher to 15c lower.

Trade in May Liberal.

Trade in May wheat was on a rather liberal scale, with scattered liquidation by longs in evidence from the start, while shorts took the offerings on the decline. The deferred deliveries showed a tendency to break away from the influence of the May and averaged higher with a little more bullish sentiment noted amongst the pit element.

There was little in the news to induce any material buying or selling of the new crop futures. Dry weather would be beneficial over a good part of the winter wheat belt, with the forecast for generally fair with seasonal temperatures. Export demand slow and mills not inclined to take hold freely.

Coarse Grains Dull.

Coarse grains were dull, but showed stubborn resistance to pressure, and corn rallied easily after a minor break early. Wet weather complaints were again in evidence, especially from Ohio, where considerable corn remains to be planted. Local sentiment is becoming a little more bullish on account of the unfavorable weather conditions. Cash demand was only fair, with little change in the basis as compared with the July.

Trading in rye was mainly of a local character, with some buying on the declines credited to the seaboard.

Lard and Ribs Weak.

Provisions were dull, and, while hogs were higher, there was a little pressure on the July deliveries and both lard and ribs closed unchanged to 5c lower. Scattered short covering was responsible for the bulge of $2.50 per brl in pork, which has been selling much too low as compared with ribs. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the summer season to date aggregates 1,484,000, or 4,000 more than last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Trade sentiment in wheat at the close yesterday was more mixed with a good sprinkling of bearishness, while operators who have been bearish for a long time said they did not care to sell wheat or corn at this level, although they might go some lower. A good class of buying was on in July and September wheat, and there was free selling of September corn at 66c. A feature of the entire trade in all grains was the limited buying support except in July wheat, which was taken on general principles by houses with seaboard connections.

Liquidation in May wheat was on heavily all day from large and small holders. Houses who have been credited with having the largest lines for local and eastern operators were free sellers and delivered a good part of the 1,400,000 bu cash wheat early in the day in all putting out 600,000 bu, while elevator interests sent out 800,000 bu. Commission houses who took a good part of the wheat in early were free sellers of May at the last, depressing it to 2c over July, the smallest premium so far, and a drop to even or to a slight discount is predicted by a number of traders.

Elevator interests that have been active in bringing cash wheat here to deliver on May sales all month were among the best buyers of May in the pit yesterday. One house particularly bought May and sold July at 2c difference. Liquidation has been heavy and May was down to $1.24½, a new low on the present break, showing a drop of 14c from the high of the week and 23c from the top point of the previous week.

There have been deliveries of 5,028,000 bu of cash wheat on May sales the past week and 11,180,000 bu so far this month, and heavy deliveries are expected Monday and Wednesday. Deliveries of corn so far this month aggregate 6,400,000 bu; oats, 6,600,000 bu; rye, 2,046,000 bu, and lard, 9,550,000 lbs. The corn and oats have gone into the hands of carriers and shippers, the lard went to carriers and rye to shippers and export houses. May rye, however, has not been wanted to any extent the past week and had not support at the last yesterday, dropping 1c under July and finishing at the lowest of the week and the inside price in months, being off almost 10c from the high point of the previous week.

There were 3,451 cars of all grains on track here yesterday morning, the largest holdings so far this month and compared with 2,645 cars on May 8. There were 1,142 cars at the elevators, and 2,309 cars on track awaiting inspection and orders. Elevators unloaded 505 cars and loaded 237 cars on Friday. The average daily unloading for the week was about 600 cars. Shipments by lake of all grains for the week were 3,028,000 bu. of which 970,000 bu were wheat to Buffalo.

Purchases of 25,000 bu new No. 3 white oats were made Friday at 1¾c under September for August-September shipment to Chicago.

Board of Trade post No. 304, American Legion, will hold Memorial day services at Mt. Carmel cemetery at 10 o'clock in memory of Pvt. Edward T. Bealin, a former member of the Chicago Board of Trade who was killed at St. Miehle and his body was brought back from France last July. He was the only member of the Board of Trade who went over seas and was killed in action. All members of the Board of Trade are invited to attend the services. Company A, 131st infantry, will furnish a firing squad.

A general evening up has been on in May wheat the past week. Chicago is 3c over Kansas City, 1½c under St. Louis, 11¼c under Winnipeg, and 25¾c under Minneapolis. The spring wheat markets have shown the most strength and scarcity of offerings has resulted in the big premiums over Chicago.

A local cash broker bid $1.28 for No. 2 red wheat in store, offering to take 25,000 bu. There has been 1,250 cars of red winter received at Chicago so far this month, but holders are not disposed to sell at present. They were willing, however, to sell wheat on track.

BUSINESS NEWS IN BRIEF

[Copyright: 1922: By Fairchild News Service.]

BERLIN, May 27.—[Special.]—Soviet Trade Commissioner Johann Sarch ridicules the proposal of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers to establish American clothing factories in Russia. He says while it would be easy to establish factories it never would be possible to dispose of the production. He declared that the net result would be a loss of capital invested, due to the soviet government's restrictions on exportation.

NEW YORK.—Dealers in ribbons, silks and velvets are forming a trade association. Meetings of representatives of leading houses have already been held and a tentative charter and by-laws are being drawn up.

PATERSON, N. J.—The fact that ninety-five skilled silk workers were placed in positions last week by the state employment bureau is looked upon as a good sign in local silk circles.

BRUSSELS.—The linen market here is showing slight but steady improvement. Embroidered linen goods are the leading demand.

ROCHESTER. — Keller - Heumann-Thompsan company, a clothing firm of this city, reduced wages of 1,000 clothing workers, effective June 1.

PHILADELPHIA.—Knit goods manufacturers say they will close their mills at end of present season, about July 1, unless they can begin selling for next year. Present yarn prices prohibit making up stock, they say.

NEW YORK.—Large local woolen and worsted goods buyers predict a poor spring clothing season if piece goods rise any higher. They insist the public will not pay higher prices for clothing.

NEW YORK—Silk manufacturers report an excellent business in print crepe de chine. This fabric has made inroads on business that would otherwise have gone to cotton dresses this season.

PARIS.—A French writer sees American designers as increasingly serious rivals of those on the Rue da la Paix. Russian women of the artistocracy are also becoming important competitors.

PHILADELPHIA.—Increased business in infants' socks and combed half hose, especially the latetr, is reported by knit goods manufacturers.

BERLIN.—German textile centers expect a heavy invasion of buyers this fall. Resident agents say they will be able to guarantee time delivery.

7½% Lincoln Parkway Building First Mortgage Gold Bonds

4% Federal Normal Income Tax Paid by Borrower

The Lincoln Parkway Building 7½% First Mortgage Real Estate Gold Bonds conform in every way to the high standards of Beak Plan Bonds.

The fact that a part of the building has been rented for a term of ten years, with the last two years rental paid in advance, at an amount equal to the total bond issue, is one of the strong outstanding features which makes this issue unusual. The construction cost is reasonable and the location excellent for a business building of this character.

In view of the difficulty of obtaining 7½% interest on security of highest grade, we suggest that you consider carefully the facts regarding this issue and then fill out the coupon which is attached for your convenience.

SECURITY—These bonds will be secured by a closed first mortgage on the building and land owned in fee simple, located at North Clark Street near Deming Place, one block north of Fullerton. The building has a frontage of 110 feet and a depth of 208 feet and is of latest fireproof construction. The exterior of the building fronting on Clark Street is of Bowling Green limestone, with terra cotta and ornamental iron trim. It will be two stories in height and will contain three stores, six offices and a large and attractive automobile display room. The rear section will be one of the largest and most complete garages on the North Side. Additional stories may be added when required.

INCOME AND VALUATION—The net income from the property is estimated at $20,100.00 per annum, which is nearly three times the maximum interest charges. Part of the building has already been rented for a term of ten years with the last two years rental paid in advance, at an amount equal to the total bond issue. Conservative appraisal of the property places a total valuation of $175,000.

LOCATION—The location of the Lincoln Parkway Building, 2470-2478 North Clark Street, is ideal for this type of building, situated as it is in one of the best residential and business sections of the North Side. The property values along Clark Street and adjacent territory are increasing with unusual rapidity and a number of business blocks are being erected. There are many attractive hotels and apartment hotels in the vicinity, among which will be found the Webster, the Fullerton Plaza, the Shore Crest and others. The entire section is most substantial and thickly populated, which will afford excellent patronage to the merchants in the building.

FIRE INSURANCE AND COLLECTIONS—Fire insurance will be carried and assigned to the Trustee for the protection of the bondholders. Collections: The Trust Deed provides that the mortgagor deposit with the Trustee on the 27th day of each month one-twelfth of the principal and interest maturing during the succeeding 12 months, thus assuring the prompt payment of both principal and interest.

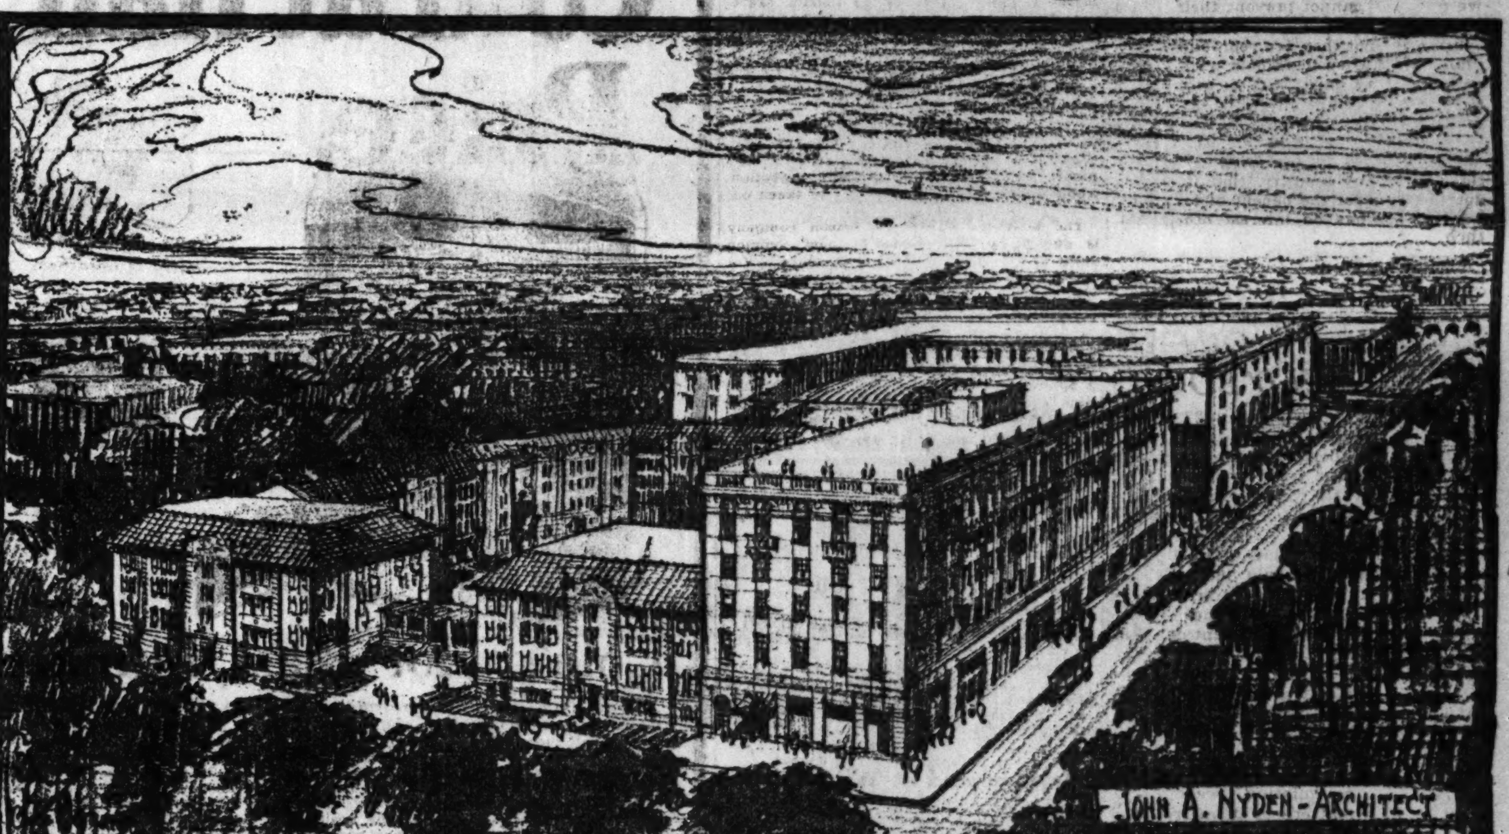
Main Street Evanston Improvement



$550,000 and $300,000

FIRST MORTGAGE 7% SERIAL GOLD BONDS

Advance Offering of Two New Issues

THE UPBUILDING of Evanston's Main Street Business District—recently announced in all Chicago and Evanston newspapers—is creating wide interest as one of the most vital real estate developments of recent years.

The bird's-eye view above gives you an idea of these improvements—exceeding $2,500,000 in value—of which the two buildings in the foreground of this picture are now being financed by H. O. STONE & CO.

This vast building development will give Evanston a magnificent moving picture theatre—one of the finest in America—in a building containing stores, offices and small suites fronting on Chicago Avenue, a similar store and small apartment building on Main Street and a court apartment building of extraordinary design facing Hinman Avenue.

The $550,000 Main Street Block Issue

We announce today a 7% First Mortgage Bond Issue of $550,000 on The Main Street Block—fronting 175 feet on Main Street and 70 feet on Hinman Avenue. It contains 9 large stores of artistic design, 130 one-room suites, offices and lounging and reception rooms. The income is estimated at $168,000.

The $300,000 Fountain Plaza Issue

The second issue—$300,000 7% First Mortgage Bonds—is secured by the Fountain Plaza, the great court building shown to the left. It fronts 155 feet on Hinman Avenue and will contain 42 apartments surrounding a court of exceptional dimensions and beautifully landscaped—a building unlike any other in Chicago and vicinity—an innovation in apartment house design, artistic and livable to the point of perfection. We estimate the income at $70,000.

The New York Times.

New York, May 27.—The stock market today gave another display of strength under the influence of professional pressure. While practically all stocks participated in the upturn, it was noticeable that the greatest margin of advance was scored in those issues which are generally classed as speculative and which can hardly be construed as offering a fair index to the real situation. Other stocks showed gains that were measured only by small fractions.

Among the specialties, however, there were a number of issues that made new high records for the year, among them Studebaker, which all along has been in the vanguard of the advance which has developed among the automobile stocks.

"Merger Talk" Main Topic.

Discussion in speculative circle once again converged on the steel merger, mainly because of an unconfirmed report from the west that a three company merger between Midvale, Republic and Inland had been completed. Just as there has been inconsistency all along, this was evidenced by a rise in the shares of the Republic company, while Midvale showed a net loss for the day.

Wall street is apparently hypnotized by the word "merger," just as many months ago it was impelled to wild speculation in certain issues because of the stock dividend decision. It was with relation to the Standard Oil stocks that the stock dividend was most directly related, and now these issues are beginning to partake of merger talk. Advances in several of them today establish new high levels for the year.

Cotton Center of Interest.

There was more interest in the cotton market today han in stocks. There was a further upturn in July that carried this position above the 21 cent level, and with an increasingly strong spot position in the south, the situation admits of interesting possibilities. The market is waiting with eagerness the government's report on condition and there seems to be little doubt that it will show a situation that is well below the ten year average.

Foreign Exchange Steady.

The foreign exchanges showed only minor fluctuations today, sterling moving within a narrow range, as did the rates on continental points. It had apparently been taken for granted that the conference of bankers would insist upon Germany living up to the terms laid down for reparations at the end of the month.

Clearing House Report.

The weekly report of the New York clearing house banks today showed an increase in surplus reserve of $13,101,990, bringing the total of this item to $18,623,440. Loans and discounts made a further gain this week of $9,106,000. Net demand deposits increased $15,181,000, while time deposits were less by $1,060,000. The statement, with comparisons, follows:

·CHICAGO·STOCK·TRANSACTIONS·

Chicago stocks were active and strong in the week-end session yesterday. Piggly Wiggly resumed leadership and advanced a minor fraction, as did Hupp Motor. Stewart-Warner held firm. Montgomery Ward and Western Knitting declined minor fractions. On small sales American Radiator preferred advanced 4 points, while Cudahy was up a point. Yellow Manufacturing, Illinois Brick, and Middle West Utilities preferred declined a point each. In New York, Sears-Roebuck advanced a point.

At a meeting under the auspices of the library committee, the cashiers of the stock exchange member houses made plans for an organization for the purpose of harmonizing relations between the various cashiers' offices and bringing about uniformity of customs and practices. A committee was appointed to work out the details.

Here is the Plan—First Come, First Served

We will endeavor to take care of names in the order in which they are received. Naturally, the first inquiries received in our office will be entitled to "Group A" selection, the next to "Group B," the next to "Group C" and so on. Each registrant will be notified in which group he is entitled to reserve a lot. Not more than 10 lots will be reserved for any buyer. In the event that any registrant for any group fails to exercise his privilege, his place may be filled by the next name in order. This system is fair to all; it insures an equal chance to every prospective buyer to reserve in advance of public sale—the lot of his choice; all confusion is eliminated and the small investor has an equal chance with the larger one. HERE IS A WONDERFUL CHANCE TO PARTICIPATE IN THE RISE OF CHICAGO REAL ESTATE VALUES. For investment or for home-building, these lots are ideal.

Our Recommendation

We recommend these lots as a fine purchase—for both investors and home-seekers. Their possibilities for appreciation in value are unlimited. There is only one reason that makes this offer possible—a lucky purchase at a remarkably low price. Your registration on the coupon appearing in the lower left hand corner of this page costs you just one two-cent stamp. DO IT NOW!

TERMS

You can secure one of these attractive lots on terms that are unusually reasonable. A moderate down payment on purchase date—easy payments at NO interest the first year, with the privilege of paying in full at any time. Title to every lot is guaranteed by The Chicago Title and Trust Company. Look where you will—you won't find the equal of this offer in all Chicago. Take advantage of it.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

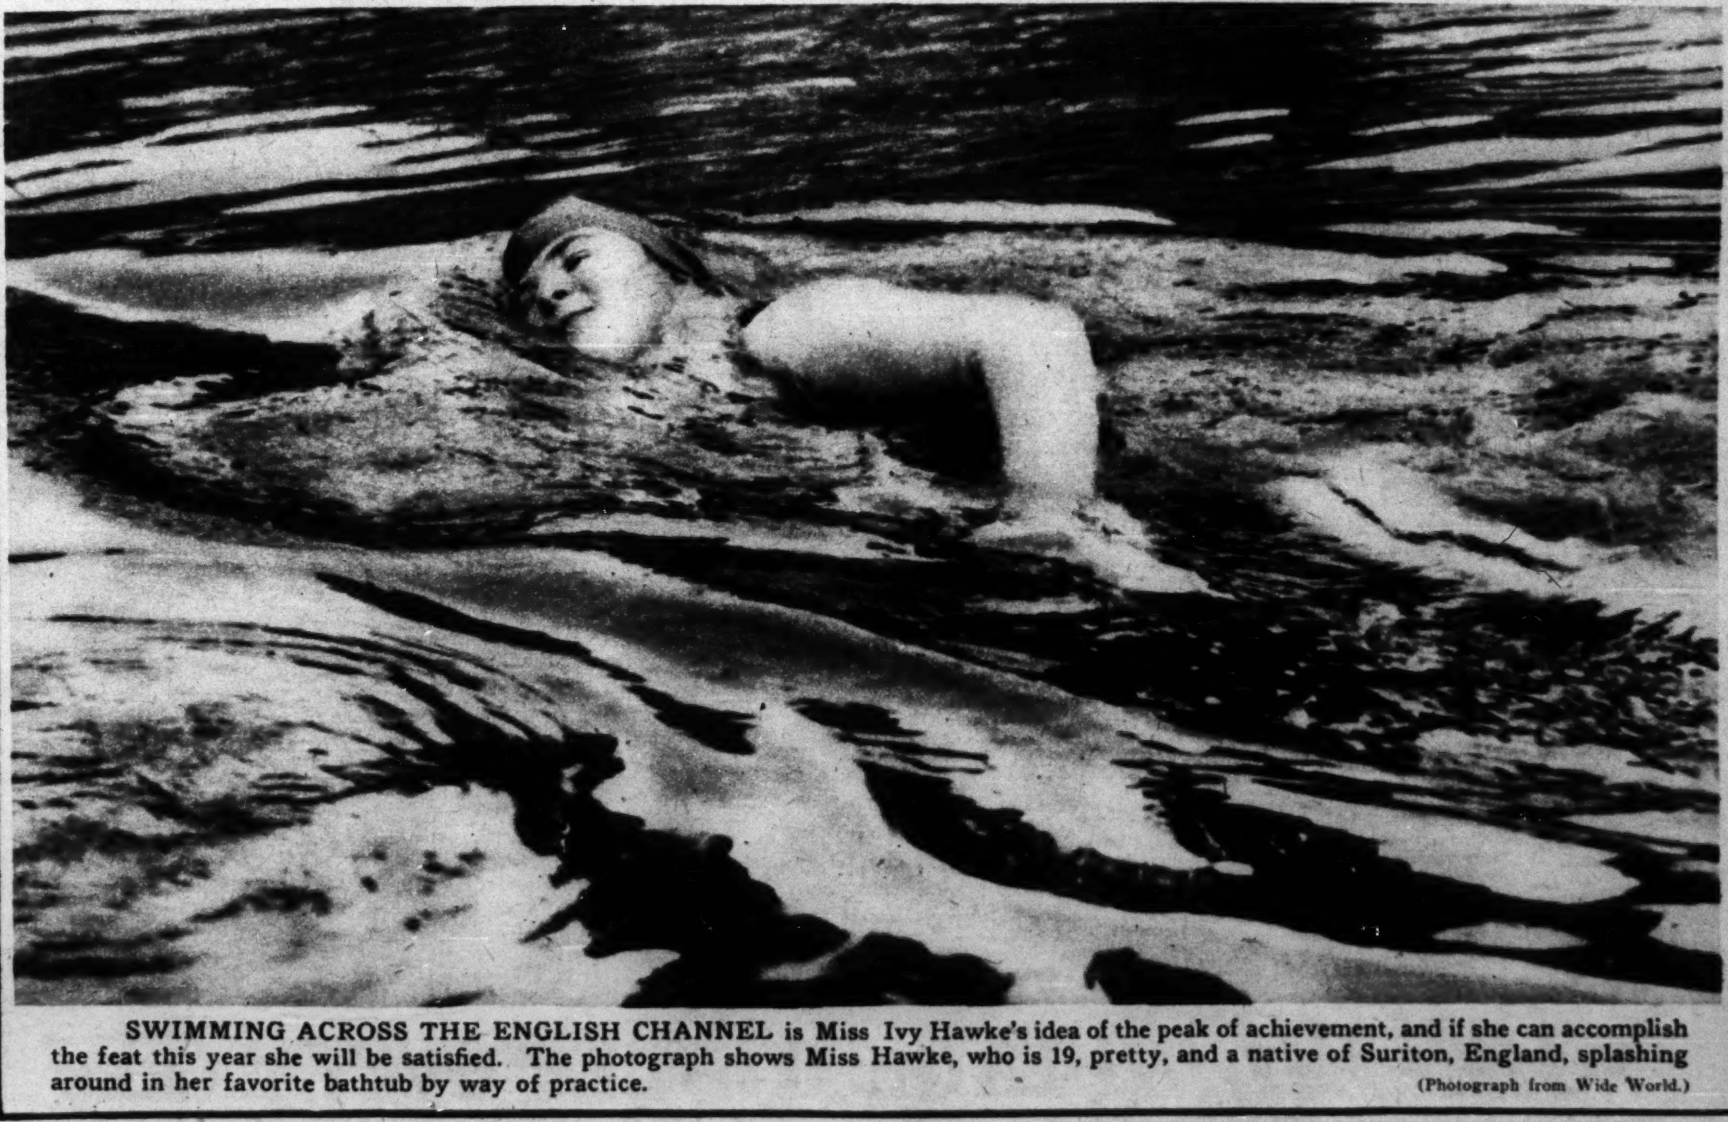
LAYING A GIGANTIC SMOKE SCREEN during a mock torpedo attack on some of the battleships was one of the tasks of this squadron of destroyers during the maneuvers of the Atlantic fleet at Guantanamo. While the destroyers lay hidden behind the smoke screen, the airships whirring above them sent down reports of the movements of the fleet by radio. (Photograph from Wide World.)



SWIMMING ACROSS THE ENGLISH CHANNEL is Miss Ivy Hawke's idea of the peak of achievement, and if she can accomplish the feat this year she will be satisfied. Summer dresses that no one will believe you ever made yourself

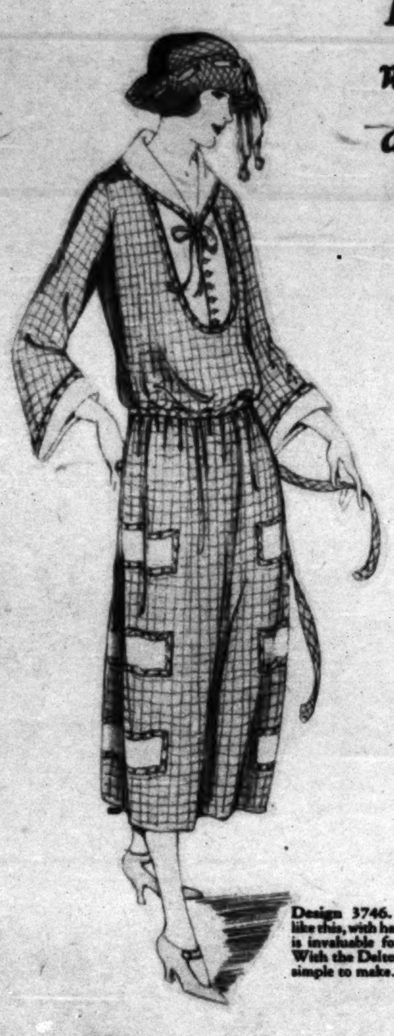
The lines, the fit, the perfection of detail that women used to think only a professional could achieve—now you achieve it yourself



Design 3746. A frock like this, with hat to match, is invaluable for summer. With the Deltor, it is very simple to make.

DRESSES as exquisite as though they came from Paris!

Home sewing has become an entirely new thing for thousands of women since the Deltor comes enclosed with every new Butterick pattern.

Every Butterick pattern is actually made up and fitted on a living model before the pattern is put on sale. As the expert cuts out, puts together and finishes the dress, everything he does is noted down for your guidance. This exact record of how the expert works is your Deltor.

It makes dressmaking simpler than you ever believed possible

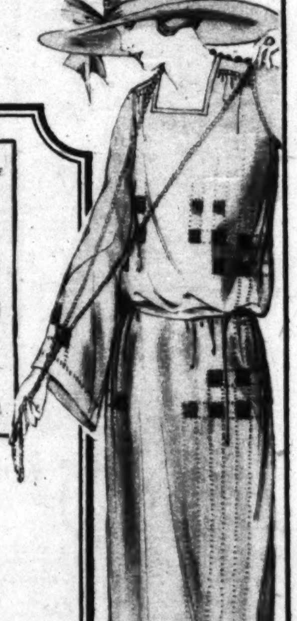
It gives you the economical cutting of an expert, the deft ways of putting together of a professional, and a finish that spells Paris.

Every bit of the Deltor applies specifically to just that garment on which you are working—it is really a complete illustrated dressmaking course for that particular garment.

No matter what fashion feature your dress has, from the new fabric trimming to a cape for a Kasha street costume, the Deltor will show you how to handle it with all the success of a professional.

When you buy a Butterick pattern you will find its Deltor in the envelope. Every new Butterick pattern (30c to 50c) now gives you this complete service. It is the greatest dressmaking help to women since the paper pattern itself.

Butterick, New York, Paris, London.



Design 3750. This dress with its hand hemstitching is exquisite for summer wear. The Deltor shows you that the fashionable hand hemstitching is very easy, after all.

You will be amazed at the material you save

A cutting layout that exactly meets your needs—for the view you have chosen in your size, laid on the very width material you are using!

It saves you from ¼ to 1⅜ yards material on every garment you make.

Women who have sewed all their lives say they never cut so economically before. That is because the Deltor cutting layouts are made by men who specialize in cutting. Not one person in a thousand, however talented, has their experience. You cut with their expert knowledge when you have the Deltor and save time and money.

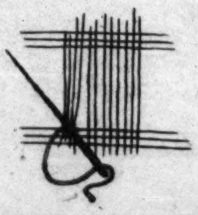
You sew swiftly and surely

Putting your dress together is no task at all, when you have the Deltor pictures and directions. You know just the professional way of working the expert uses. Your sewing goes swiftly and easily, and you know that with every stitch you are creating exactly the lovely lines of the original model.



A finish that is French

The delightful finish of imported frocks is half their charm. It gives what the French call the "bloom" to a dress. The Deltor shows you exactly how to give this French delicacy of finish to the dress you are making. Everything is made simple and easy for you, and your dress, when done, has a truly professional air.

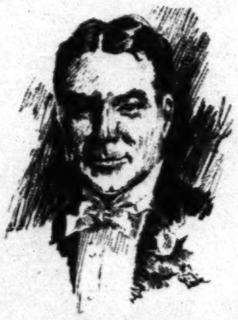
Creator of Gumps signs a Million Dollar Tribune Contract and rides off in this car

THE GUMPS will be with us at least for the next ten years. Sidney Smith (at the right) will receive from The Tribune a minimuin of considerably more than a million dollars during this period for drawing Andy and Min. It is the highest salary paid by any newspaper to a cartoonist. The contract was sealed by the gift of a Rolls-Royce automobile. Arthur Crawford (at the left), manager of The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate, is shown presenting the car.

The Gumps lead the comic field in America because the humor of them is based on human nature. There is no throwing of bricks and custard pies, no heels in the air at the finish. All of us millions who follow the daily adventures of Andy and Min consider them as our friends. They are living people to us. We discussed the love affair of Uncle Bim and the Widow Zander with as much earnestness as if we intended to go to the wedding breakfast of the "old Kangaroo," as Carlos calls him.



SIDNEY SMITH

For weeks, 1,000 people a day wrote to the cartoonist about it. Some folks threatened to stop the paper if the widow married Uncle Bim. No matter what other things we like in The Daily Tribune, the day is never complete without the exquisite humor of Andy and Min Gump.

"The Gumps" in the Tribune every day

"A victim of indigestion for 5 long years"

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast plain, spread on bread or crackers or dissolved in milk, water or fruit juices.

SHE had been treated by the best physicians in the city, yet for five long years she suffered from indigestion. The stomach and intestinal disturbance was very painful.

Then she tried eating Fleischmann's Yeast. After three weeks she began to gain. When she started eating the yeast she was decidedly underweight. Now her weight is back to normal. Her skin is clear and has the glow of health, and best of all her intestinal pains have left.

Fleischmann's Yeast is a fresh food rich in life-giving vitamin. It has a remarkable effect on the whole digestive system, increasing appetite and improving digestion. By eating Fleischmann's Yeast daily you get more nourishment from the other foods you eat.

Two to three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast fresh every day before or between meals will keep your digestion in good shape. Place a standing order with your grocer. He will deliver Fleischmann's Yeast fresh daily.

My Greatest Summers
all were spent in Southern California.

By AN EASTERNER

THAT may seem strange to you. I, too, once thought that Southern California was a place to go in winter, not in summer.

And yet I know no other that offers such a wealth of summer fun, such complete recreation because of complete change, or a summer climate so attractive in all ways!

I have spent summer after summer there, and in a three-months' stay, slept under blankets ninety nights.

What Do You Do?

You motor, if you wish, for 4,000 miles on paved highways through a country unlike anything you've ever seen—unless you've been there.

You play golf on inspiring courses. You stay at beautiful seashores at the foot of mountain ranges, or in the wilderness at mountain camps.

You view a great desert, like Sahara. You visit great National Parks and Forests—see giant trees, stupendous panoramic views. Or you go quietly and fish in mountain lakes and streams or at world-famous ocean fishing grounds.

You hike, you ride horseback, you breathe deep and you enjoy a sort of youthfulness that you haven't felt, perhaps, for years.

And all within a few hours of a great metropolitan center!

Different and Enchanting

The enchanting difference is what lures. It renews your youth, changing your viewpoint if you're "run down." You become absorbed, fascinated, relaxed to perfection. The greatest cure for "nerves" you've ever known.

Summer? An amazing summerland—you'll never spend a more delightful, restful, interesting summer anywhere.

Average mean temperature for Southern California: June, 66 degrees; July, 70 degrees; August, 71 degrees; September, 69 degrees.—The 44-year record of the U. S. Weather Bureau.

Ask any railroad ticket office for further information, or mail coupon below.

Special, low-rate, round trip fares now in effect—No more War Tax.

Plan now for this summer. Let the family have this great change and great trip.

The Big Job Calls

For days the directors' choice hung in the balance between two able men. This one was called to bigger things because he had placed the true commercial estimate on health.

It pays to take good care of the teeth.

Thousands have their efficiency lowered and their resistance to disease cut down by their failure to heed the first warnings of Pyorrhea which afflicts four people out of five who pass the age of forty and many younger.

Are your gums tender? Do they bleed easily when brushed?

Those are the signs of Pyorrhea's presence. If neglected the germs attack the teeth, which loosen, drop out or must be pulled. Pus pockets form and the whole system may pay the penalty of neglect.

If you would prevent Pyorrhea, see your dentist often and heed his advice. Also, start using Forhan's For the Gums today.

Forhan's For the Gums is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S. If used consistently and used in time, it will prevent Pyorrhea or check its course. An excellent dentifrice, it keeps the teeth white and clean and the gums pink, firm and healthy.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's – How to Use It

Use it twice daily, year in and year out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment. 35c and 60c, in the U. S. and Canada. At all druggists.

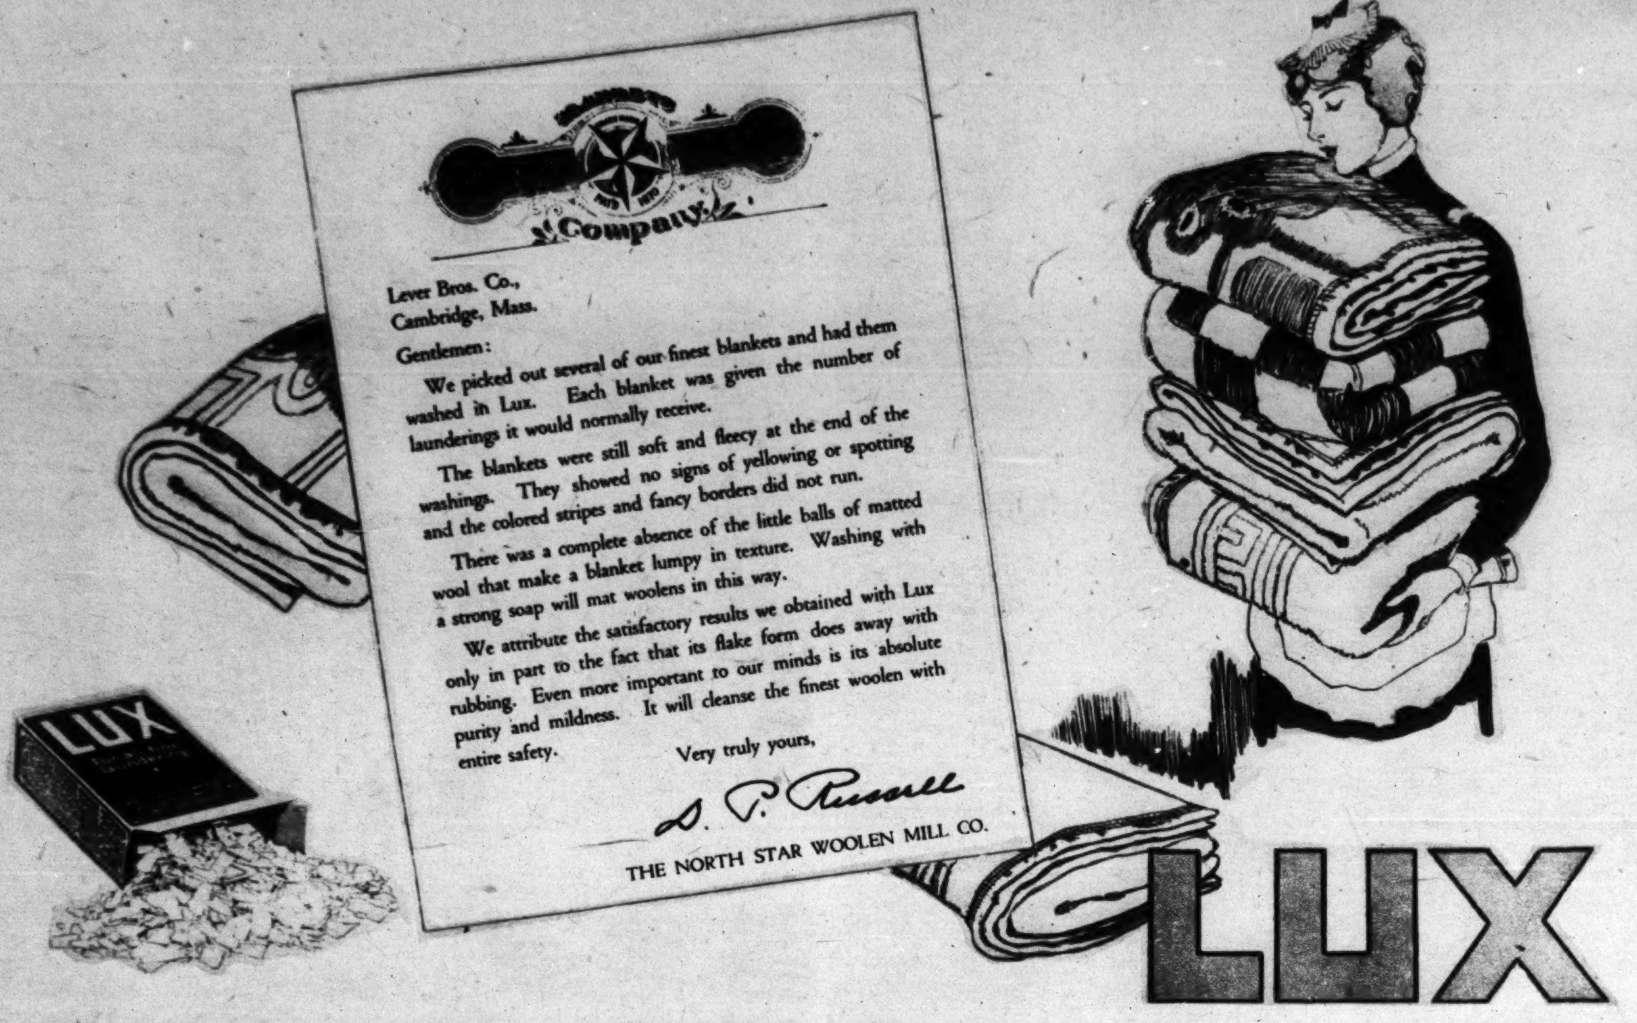
Blankets will stay soft and fleecy washed this way, says famous woolen manufacturer



Lever Bros. Co.,
Cambridge, Mass.

Gentlemen:

We picked out several of our finest blankets and had them washed in Lux. Each blanket was given the number of launderings it would normally receive.

The blankets were still soft and fleecy at the end of the washings. They showed no signs of yellowing or spotting and the colored stripes and fancy borders did not run.

There was a complete absence of the little balls of matted wool that make a blanket lumpy in texture. Washing with a strong soap will mat woolens in this way.

We attribute the satisfactory results we obtained with Lux only in part to the fact that its flake form does away with rubbing. Even more important to our minds is its absolute purity and mildness. It will cleanse the finest woolen with entire safety.

Very truly yours,

S. P. Russell

PINKERTON GOLF COATS

A New Angle With No Angle

If a Golfer pulls his stroke only half an inch in a ten-foot swing, he has pulled his ball A HUNDRED YARDS out of the course on a two-hundred-yard drive. Easy mathematics, but most golfers never stop to figure it out.

The Pinkerton Knitted Coat has become so desirable to the golfers of America because it cannot bind or deflect your stroke by so much as a hair's breadth. It has warmth without weight; it has wonderful elasticity and a coat-cut sleeve for golf as well as a jersey wrist for other sports.

Most golfers "bundle up" for early golf and they come into their season with a bad stroke as a consequence. Whereas, if you wear a Pinkerton, you'll put your game in the pink of perfection in no time.

It's time to change from hot, stiff, heavy shoes to easy, comfortable, summery Keds

LIGHT, cool, easy-fitting, Keds let feet cramped by ordinary shoes return to their natural form and breathe.

As natural as barefoot, yet Keds give the foot perfect protection, combined with good looks and long wear.

There are Keds for men, women, children—high and low Keds, plain and athletic-trimmed—styles for the street, for the home, for sport, for general outdoor wear. America's greatest line of summer footwear—that's what the name Keds means.

No other line of canvas rubber-soled shoes offers you so much solid comfort—such strength for long, hard service—such care in manufacture. Behind every pair of Keds stands the oldest and largest rubber organization in the world.

Examine Keds styles today! If your dealer hasn't the type you want, he can easily get it for you. But remember—not all canvas rubber-soled shoes are Keds. If the name Keds isn't on the shoes they aren't real Keds.

MUD SLINGING, NOT VERBAL, BUT REAL, was the order of the day when the freshmen and the sophomores of Cornell university met in their annual battle for class supremacy. The picture was taken during a lull in the conflict, in which the camera man also qualified, involuntarily, as a mud-spattered hero. If you study the faces in the photograph you will see that a good time was had by all, but the laundryman and the tailor got the most fun out of it. (Photograph from Wide World.)

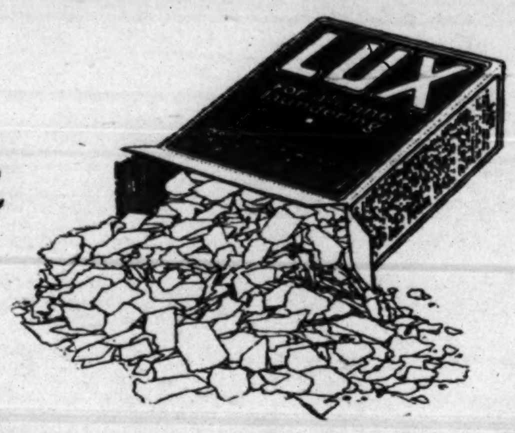
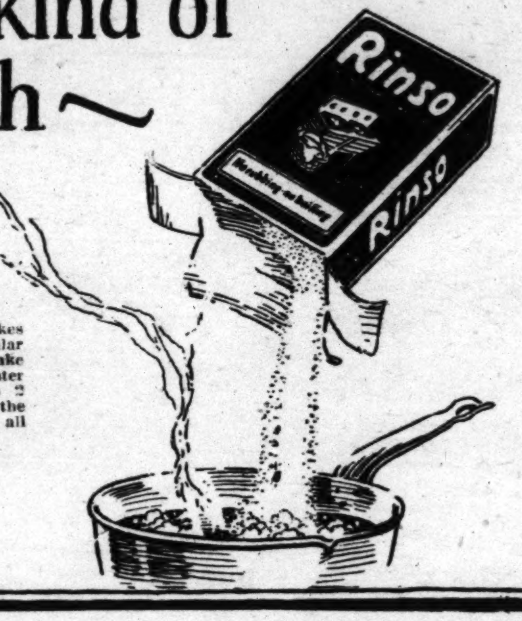
Formerly bar soap for all washing

now Lux for fine things



~and Rinso an entirely new kind of soap for the regular family wash~



Old-fashioned bar soap has been supplanted by two modern soap products.

Lux for dainty things, and Rinso—the new kind of soap that does the family wash as easily as Lux does fine laundering.

Every grain of Rinso is a tiny bit of soap so pure and perfectly balanced that it soaks clothes clean without hard rubbing.

With these two wonderful soaps you need no other soap—no soap powder.

NOTE: In hard water it takes from ¾ to 1 package (regular size) of Rinso to a tub to make good suds. In very hard water you will need from 1½ to 2 packages to a tub to get the big lasting suds that loosen all the dirt.

"IT WILL NOT BREAK"

Unbreakable!

THE roadside lunch, after a long dusty drive—or the stop for a cold drink when you've been hiking for hours—

It's then—just when you need it most—that the ordinary vacuum bottle may fail you. Hasty handling—a fall or jolt—and the delicate glass lining is splintered to bits.

The constant expense of refills isn't the worst—it's the ruined outing, the failure in an emergency, that makes glass-lined vacuum bottles so unsatisfactory.

Here at last is a vacuum bottle that can't break—a bottle made entirely of steel.

There is no glass in the Stanley—you can't hurt it. Its blue Amalite lining—fused right into the steel itself—keeps it sanitary, and will never rust or tarnish. And always, whenever and wherever you want it, the Stanley has your drink ready—piping hot or icy cold.

Pint, quart and two-quart sizes. The Stanley Lunch Kit is equipped with the pint bottle. For keeping solid foods hot or cold, use the Stanley Food Jar, also unbreakable. Every Stanley product—Bottle, Food Jar, Jug—is fully guaranteed.

A quicker lovelier manicure—

The new 5-minute Set

EVERYTHING you want for the quickest, easiest manicure is in the new Five-Minute Set. There are just two things to do to make your nails look as if they had been professionally manicured.

You no longer have to cut the cuticle. Instead of tiresome soaking and dangerous cutting, you just work carefully about the nails with an orange stick dipped in Cutex Cuticle Remover, gently pushing back the cuticle, then rinse, and the hard, dry edges of dead cuticle will simply wipe away, leaving a beautiful, thin, transparent, even nail rim.

Then the two marvelous new polishes in this set help to make the manicure infinitely quicker and easier than it used to be. The new Powder Polish is practically instantaneous. Just a few swift strokes across the palm of the hand are sufficient to bring out the shine and it is more brilliant than the luster you get from any other polish.

The new Liquid Polish goes on swiftly, easily—dries instantly and leaves a brilliant, delicately tinted luster that resists frequent washings. Used as a finishing touch it will make a manicure last just three times as long.

This new Cutex Five-Minute Set contains these essentials for the quickest, loveliest manicure. Full sizes of Cutex Cuticle Remover, the new Cutex Liquid Polish, the new Cutex Powder Polish, orange stick and package of emery boards. The price is $1.00. You will be delighted when you see it.

DO YOU REMEMBER WAY BACK WHEN----

LINCOLN PARK'S ANNUAL BICYCLE RACE was the big thrill? Here is a picture of the crowd that watched the start of the daredevil race on Memorial day thirty-five years ago.

(Photographs from William Hirsch.)

THERE WERE NO AUTOS, and the only rival of the horse was the safety "bike"? Another picture of the Memorial day races at Lincoln park.

THE FIRST "KNICKER GIRLS" made their appearance at the races? They called 'em bloomers then. The photographer was too bashful to get the girls' names.

The Voice That Cried By Ethel M. Colson

It Reached Out Over the Seas During the Tempest and the Wreck to Save the Life of a Struggling Man

"THERE'S something in it," said Old Cap'n Haskell, nodding his gray head sagely.

"Something in what?" asked the young Cap'n Brown, who had just entered the Snug Harbor.

Cap'n Haskell vouchsafed no reply, but young Cap'n Drew, sitting on the edge of the circle, explained in a respectful undertone.

"Spirits and souls and immortality and such-like," he said, hurriedly. "Cap'n Jones said that Cap'n Duncan was dead, and Cap'n Dill said he'd gone to join his old wife, Janet, and Cap'n Jack said you couldn't make him believe in such things, and Cap'n Haskell said there was something in it. Listen! He'll tell a good tale, I bet!"

"I was twenty-five when the John Dick went down," began Cap'n Haskell, preparing to justify the prediction, "and I was first mate at the time. I'd got my masters' papers, but the company had no command for me. Companies were more careful," with a side glance at the younger captains clustered together, "about giving green boys life responsibilities than they are now—though we were real sailors when we traveled under sail."

The group, well content, settled down to listen, and this was the old seadog's tale:

"Cap'n Stout was the John Dick's cap'n, and a good cap'n he was, even if luck was often against him. I'd been with him, man and boy, for ten years, ever since I'd run away from home, a raw lad, to go a-sailing. I thought a lot of him, first and last, but I didn't think much of him, start of that voyage, and what I thought wasn't complimentary. He was bound, being all set, to clear two days ahead of our regular schedule, and there wouldn't be time for me to tell a certain girl goodbye.

"We were sailing from Holyhead, the girl lived ten miles out of Dudley, and my mother was making her home in Liverpool just then. She was the best of good mothers, who'd always stood by me, and I just couldn't start off without seeing her, especially as we were bound for the China coast, trading, and wouldn't be back for three years. But when, swearing mad, I wrote the girl that I couldn't get to see both of them, the letter put her back up. There were no telephones in those days, but she told me, by return post, that I needn't worry about her. She'd lot it was another girl I was going to visit, and there were plenty of other young men about her. Then some one told me that Mary's father, who wasn't keen on the question he knew I wanted to ask her, was sending her away for a visit, and I'd no means of knowing where.

"My mother was a wonderful woman. I hadn't been with her ten minutes before she'd wormed my trouble out of me. Then, mother-like, she tried to bring comfort. But she wouldn't stand for a word against Mary, whom she knew and liked.

"'Hold on, Arthur!' she says, sharp and sweet as she'd often spoken to me when I was in mischief. 'Mary's a good girl and loves you all the better for being a bit jealous. You write a good letter to her and I'll find out where to send it. You can get your promise by mail.'"

"I didn't have much faith in the idea, at that time, and mother cried, though she tried not to, when I had to leave her. So I got back to the ship in such a black mood that I took no thought of weather and could have wrung Cap'n Stout's neck for making such a fuss about 'weather breeders' when the sky was clear as a bell and the sunshine unusually bright for November. I didn't feel to care, really, whether we sunk or kept afloat.

"'Cheer up, boy!' says the Cap'n, as we swung out of the harbor. 'The good men ain't all hung yet, and we've got enough water for the voyage. And if it's a girl, don't worry! Plenty more where that one came from. What you need is work.'

The Tempest

"WELL, it wasn't long before we all had work a-plenty. A storm come up such as nobody had ever seen in the English channel. It went down in history. We'd just cleared the breakwater when it came, almost out of a blue sky, and we were in trouble directly. We had to beat back to shelter, Cap'n Stout swearing and fuming at the delay, and me burning up inside with anger because the time we were wasting would have made it all right with Mary. And then, just at dusk of the third day, the storm got so bad that we dragged our anchor, drifted right out of harbor, and lay at the mercy of the sea. We were close-hauled, of course, but we were swept bare of everything in no time, with a black night and a bad coast ahead.

"'Get out the boats and make a raft, Arthur!' orders the Cap'n, pale as death and grimmer. 'I'm downed, lad, for the first time since I've followed the ocean. Never had to beat back to shelter, never had to be late on my schedule, never had a ship break under me inside the harbor. But it can't be helped,' he says, near to weeping. 'Get out the boats.'

"So we made the raft and got the boats ready. We had only three, being a small crew, and one, we found, had been badly smashed by the sea before we knew it. A third of the men were put into the next and the wind swept it away, like a march, while it still hung in the davits. The roaring darkness swallowed those men at a mouthful. We got none of them back, of course.

"'I believe the raft'll be safer,' says the Cap'n. 'Offer less wind-purchase.' And he orders the rest of the men into it, under care of the bo'sun.

"'Lower away!' he bellows, calm as a summer morn, though the wet on his face by this time wasn't all seawater.

"'Aye, aye, sir!' answers the bo'sun, his voice a bit shaky. Then, just as they began turning the windlass, the Cap'n raises his hand for a halt.

"'Raft or boat, Arthur?' he asks me, sudden. My place was with him, of course, officers always leaving the ship last, but he was a little soft on me, Cap'n Stout, account of a good turn I'd once done him, and he wanted me to have the best chance.

"'Boat. With you, sir!' I tells him, and they swung the raft clear of the rail. It was ticklish work, but we got it down safely, somehow, as we could tell by the men's voices. And all those lads washed safe ashore.

"Then we tried the last boat, and, by God's mercy, we got into the water without swamping. There was me and the Cap'n, and the second mate, Carter, and the steward, who'd asked to go with the Cap'n, feeling safer. Poor Joe! He was the first to leave us, swept overboard by a huge wave almost as soon as we started. Carter went next. Another great wave broke over us, and Carter, who was directly before me, was washed by with a groan. The third giant did for the whole thing in a hurry. The Cap'n and I were struggling among those mountain-high waves almost before we knew it. 'We're gone!' I thought, but just then something hard struck me, nearly breaking my back, though I didn't know it till later. It was a plank from the John Dick or some other wrecked vessel, and you'd better believe I clung to it like hell and desperation. I look around for the Cap'n, and there he was looming high above me, on the crest of another giant. I managed to catch hold of him, somehow, and there the two of us clung.

"It was awful work, holding on. I never can see how we managed it. The waves pounded us every moment. My body was black and blue for days afterward, and so was the Cap'n's. The wind howled like a demon and tore at us as though it was bound we should drown. We were stiff with cold, into the bargain. Now and then I'd glimpse the Cap'n's face, all green and blue and purple with cold and suffering, and I suppose mine wasn't much better. But the Cap'n had a young family to live for, and I'd my mother and Mary, so we clutched at that plank like limpets. And by and by we managed to get to opposite ends of the plank, and that steadied it a little, though now I'd be almost over the Cap'n, then he'd be thrown sky-high next minute, with me in the trough of the sea. And the cold rain that came next, and the darkness! We might have been in the bottomless pit, only when a rocket would go up, somewhere near, from some distressed craft that was asking assistance or from the life saving men on shore. We were so near to land and yet the whole thing seemed so hopeless. More than once we thought we could hear voices, but of course we never knew.

"Hold On, Arthur!"

"WE lost all track of time, of course, but we were more than eight hours in the water. We'd left the ship about 7 and it must have been somewhere near midnight when I began to feel I could stand it no longer. The waves were coming so hard, with no time to rest between the shock of them, and I was half drowned with the water I couldn't help but swallow. And my head had begun to swim.

"'Buck up, man! Remember your mother!' shouts out the Cap'n, when a vicious wave flung him high above me. 'Buck up and hold on a little longer. Rate these seas are traveling we'll be carried ashore before morning. And I think the storm's letting up!'

"I remember thinking that only the Cap'n could have made himself heard in such a tumult, and I was grateful for his good intentions. But I couldn't buck up, and knew I couldn't hold on much longer. There was no strength left in me. I knew I was dying with cold and exhaustion, and it seemed I might as well get it over quickly. Then I began to dream.

"They say that when a man's drowning scenes of his life pass before him, and I suppose it's true, for I'd begun to see pictures. Mary in her blue Sunday gown and the hat with pink roses, and Jim, the dead brother I used to play with, and Dudley Castle, that Mary and I had visited together, and mother—mother standing up before me, suddenly, so tall and handsome, and with her hand raised in command.

"'Hold on, Arthur!' I thought she told me, sharp and sweet, as I'd often heard her. 'It won't be much longer. For my sake and Mary's hold on!'

"Well, I tried to obey, and I suppose I must have managed it somehow, though that's all I remember of that part of the story. The next thing I knew I thought I was in heaven. I was resting, all easy and warm, in a place that was strange to me, and Mary's face was above me, looking so lovingly down.

"It wasn't heaven, as my aching limbs soon told me, merely a coast village some miles below Holyhead, where Mary'd been visiting relatives, and where the Cap'n and I, all stiff and unconscious, but still with our arms locked around the plank, had been washed ashore. It was the morning sky, shining gold and blue through a narrow window, that had made me think of the pearly gates.

"Well, Mary was so sweet to me—matter of fact, I never asked her that question I'd wanted, for when they left us alone together it didn't seem to matter—that heaven seemed nothing to me, or the death I'd just escaped either, and when we'd agreed to be married at once, even if I was out of a berth and had lost all my three years' outfit, I didn't care for anything only to hear that the Cap'n was all right. And he was all right, more power to him. The company knew he'd only put back to save the ship, and there was the storm and the shipping bureau's record of twenty-seven ships wrecked and sixty dead bodies washed ashore to prove that his seamanship hadn't failed him. So they gave him another ship as soon as possible, and I went with him again until I got my own command. But all he could do then was to get back to Holyhead as soon as possible, and of course I had to go before the trial board with him, being first mate and having my own captain's papers. Then I posted off to Liverpool straight as an arrow, fearing that mother might be breaking her heart.

The Voice

"MOTHER'D been living with my married sister since my father'd been dead, and it was Belle herself who came to the door when I got there late in the evening. She was a widow, too, and her children and the maid were in bed. She was vastly surprised to see me. The John Dick should have been far out at sea by that time, and, as it turned out, she hadn't been reading the papers and had never heard of the storm. But she was so glad to see me that she cried on my shoulder, and she cried again when I told her of the wreck. When I'd finished telling her, she said we'd go down to the kitchen and make a cup of tea.

"When we'd put the kettle on she was fussing at the pantry shelves, behind me, and I could see her reflection in the looking glass the maid had hung on the opposite wall. Suddenly I noticed that Belle wasn't fussing about cups and saucers; she was standing still, looking at me with the strangest expression—sad and anxious, as though she was wanting to tell me something and didn't know how to do it. And all in a minute I noticed something else. Belle, who'd been out of mourning for a long time, was all in heavy black!

"She turned, as I looked, and went to set the cups and saucers on the table. I suppose she'd decided not to tell me until I'd had something. But I knew, then, before she said a word.

"'Mother!' I said, leaping from my chair, but with something clutching at my heart so I could only whisper. 'Mother——'

"Belle came to me, at that, put her arms about me, and cried again like a baby.

"'Yes, Arthur,' she said, when she could speak, 'very suddenly, Thursday night about midnight. She'd a bad cold when you went away, you remember, and it grew worse steadily. She had to go to bed the day after you left. But we didn't think it was serious until Thursday, and even then we didn't dream how bad it was.

"'But all Thursday even she was very uneasy. She was worried about you, for some reason, and kept saying so. I thought it was all part of her illness. Then, suddenly, just about midnight, she went quiet and I could see that she was sinking. And then, all in a minute, she sat up straight and spoke to you clear and loud.'

"'Hold on, Arthur!' she said, didn't she, I asked, all queer and shivery, and Belle, poor girl, cried again as she nodded.

"'That's just what she did say, Arthur, sharp and sweet and tender, just as if you were there before her. And then, Arthur, she smiled and lay back and died.'"

WHICH TWITCHCOMB? A remarkable Blue Ribbon short story....................By George Barr McCutcheon think things over, might not have wished she'd been less precipitate.

The last part of Myra's letter brought him up pretty short, too. He wanted Myra, and that's all he'd considered. He was a selfish brute. He knew perfectly well that to ask her to live on his salary was asking her to mighty slim living.

It was along these lines that Harry's thoughts ran for the whole week following Myra's flight, and the more he thought the more he saw the essential rightness of Myra's attitude.

That he lost five pounds thinking of this rightness and contemplating what might happen if Myra decided she didn't love him didn't alter his reasoning. He was miserable, but he realized that for once in his life he had really shown himself capable of cool, abstract, and just thought.

Explaining It All

HE was bleakly indulging in that kind of thought on the seventh evening after Myra's departure when his phone rang and Myra's voice said:

"Hello, Harry. I'm back. Come on over."

Myra met him in the hallway with both hands outstretched. Harry rather flaccidly took one of them.

"You're—you're home ahead of time, aren't you?" he inquired.

Had he been watching Myra's face carefully he would have noticed a shade of disappointment flit across it, but he wasn't looking at her face. Ever since he had known her that soft mouth of hers had tempted him, and he knew if he looked long at it it would make him forget his new found ability at ratiocination.

"I got your note," Harry began, as they sat down in the living room. "I—I've been thinking it over, just as you said."

"So have I," Myra declared, "and I think it was the si——"

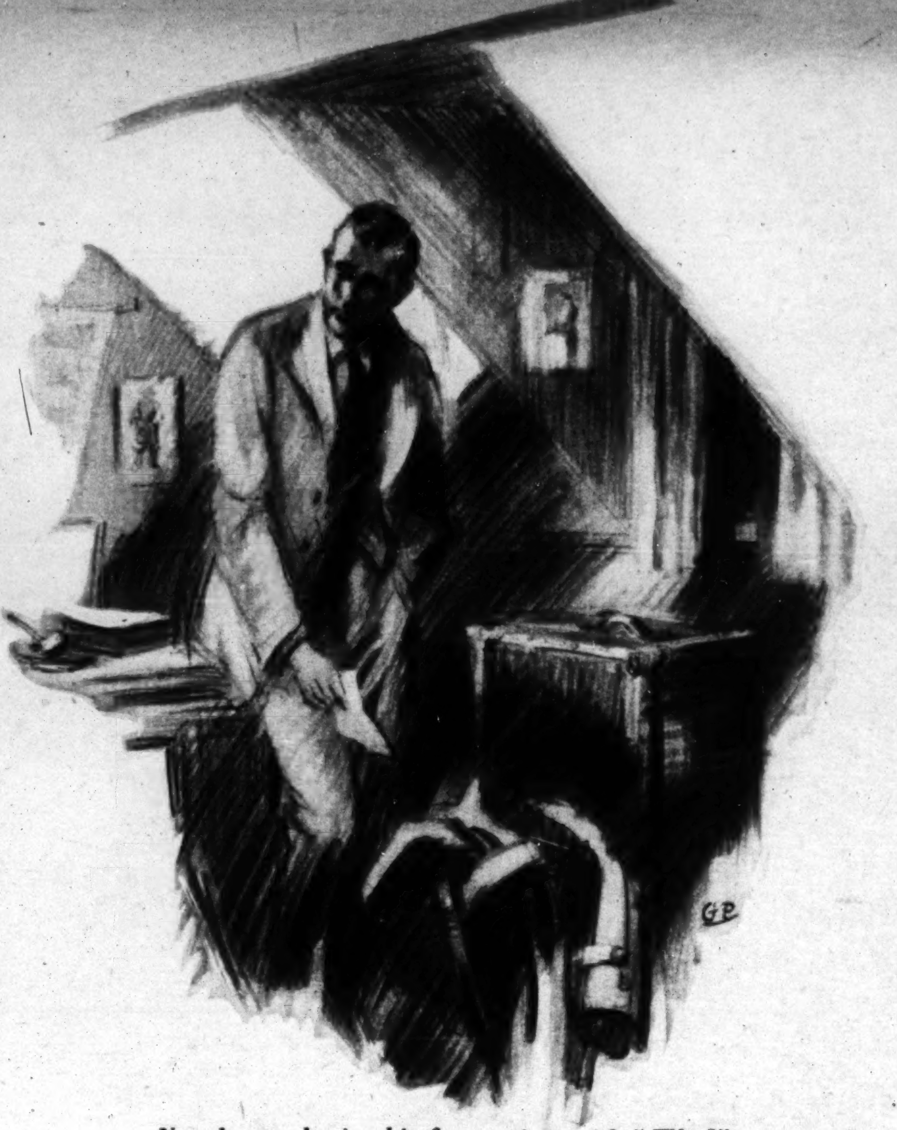
"And I see where you are right, Myra. I didn't give you a chance to know your own mind, really. And about the other part—I was a—a cad to ask you to marry me on what I make. Why, it would mean poverty and struggle and everything—and I was a selfish brute to expect you to share that. You deserve everything that's fine and——"

"Before you go any further, Mr. Harry Cochrane," demanded Myra severely, "will you answer me one question?"

"What is it?"

"Do you still love me or have you decided you obeyed the wrong impulse."

"Of course I love you. I'm crazy about you. But when I came to think of the hard, practical matter of money I realized that you were right. I can't afford to ask a girl to marry me. I've really done some solid thinking——"



Now he was having his first sessions with "Why?"

"Solid ivory thinking," said Myra. "Do you know what's been the matter with me all my life?"

"Nothing the matter with you, you're wonderful."

"The matter with me is that I've thought too much and acted too little. While I was in Chicago I found that out. So—I came back."

"And now—now you're here," Harry said, inanely.

"No," laughed Myra, getting up from her chair, "I'm here." With which she slipped into his lap, put her arms about his neck, and kissed him.

"Now I can explain it all to you clearly," she said.

"You see, I've always been a rather slow thinker. I haven't had a bit of 'womanly intuition'; my mind never worked that way. I couldn't jump at conclusions. I always had to arrange all the facts and circumstances carefully in my mind and then reason out the matter—whatever it was—like a problem in mathematics.

"So when I went away it was to think this all out calmly and coolly and mathematically. When you were around you were so sure—and so determined that I was sure that I didn't know whether I was sure because you wanted me to be, or sure by myself. Goodness, that's complicated, isn't it? Well, anyway, I went to Chicago to think about us without you around to distract me with your absolute certainty and your charm. You are charming, dear—awfully charming."

At this point in the explanation there was a brief interruption due to the inability of Myra's lips to do two things at the same time.

With Myra's Aid

"WHERE was I? O, yes. I was telling how I went away because I didn't want you to distract me from my thinking.

"But, you see, by the time I had reached Chicago I discovered that I couldn't get away from your distraction that way. It came right along with me. And the longer I stayed away the more distracted I was. I tried to think about you coolly and mathematically and arrange you according to logical formulas, and you wouldn't let me. I attempted to analyze my feelings toward you and I couldn't analyze them—I—I just wanted you, and couldn't think of anything but wanting you, and didn't want to think of anything but wanting you.

"And then all of a sudden I realized that you and nature and me—the real inside me—had already thought it all out for me; that I wouldn't have to think about it any more at all—that all I had to do was to get on the train and come back as quickly as I could, and—well, so I did.

"And so you see, Harry, I've just got to marry you because there's no use my trying to think about it."

Harry considered this statement dispassionately for a moment—as dispassionately as he could with Myra's arms about his neck and Myra's head snuggling into his shoulder.

"But, Myra," he said, "I had been thinking, as I told you, and, though it's wonderful to know you couldn't stand it to be away, I think you were right in your letter. Marriage is a serious step and I am earning so little that I——"

"Can't afford it? Dear heart, I've figured that all out. Just as soon as I saw that I simply had to marry you and you simply had to marry me, I could think. That was a question of mathematics and I was always good at mathematics. You can afford to marry me—and after you've told me you love me as many times as you ought to have and haven't, and after you stop looking like a stupid owlish old Christian martyr who still feels that there's something wrong because he isn't being fed to the lions—after you've got back to being Harry the Direct Actionist instead of 'Harry the Thinker, by Rodin'—well, after that I'll prove how we can do it.

"All right, that's settled. I've been away for a week; I love you, Harry, you love me. I hear mother and father on the porch; won't they be surprised when you tell them we're going to be married next week? You'll tell them, won't you? Fine. Obey that impulse, kiss me—hard. There, dearest—now we've got to spring the glad tidings on the folks. Come on.

"Let's go."

fallen in love with you. If you're wise, you'll leave Kent House and let West court you somewhere else and marry you and keep you away from all this family trouble. That's my well meant advice, so don't ask me any more—just take it."

"It is not advice for which I asked," Marie flung at him. "I am not in love with anybody and least of all with any person's money. More than ever I wish you to tell me the thing I asked."

"Well, hear it then!" Colfax said in exasperation. "You have me in a corner. I can't afford not to tell you. Breck was born and reared a thief. Before he was twelve years old he was a skillful pickpocket. When he was fourteen he took to porch climbing. He spent his fifteenth year in a reformatory. Then an old New England preacher took him into his family. He stole a roll of bills from under the old man's pillow while he was asleep and started out west with it and was caught, and that time Breck went to prison——"

He was interrupted by Marie's gasp. She was dead white and staring. Her arms had grown lax and the spaniel slid to the ground.

"It's true, every word of it," Colfax said. "It happened away up in Maine, but Haslett, Mr. Dunbarton-Kent's lawyer, heard of it, for there was a trial and Breck gave his right name, Breckenridge Dunbarton-Kent; the police had always known him as Ken Smith. Then Mr. Dunbarton-Kent went to Breck's rescue. He did all he could to get Breck a short sentence—they gave him two years. Mr. Dunbarton-Kent was an awfully good sort, a good business man, too. He'd made a lot of money and he'd helped West's father to make money. Bella's father was no account and when he died Mr. Dunbarton-Kent took Bella into his family. When West's father died, he gave West a home, too, and looked after West's money.

"That was the kind of man Mr. Dunbarton-Kent was. He had faith in Breck, for there was something to be said for him. Breck's father had been the black sheep of the family, crooked as he could be—the Dunbarton-Kents had lost track of him years before—Mr. Dunbarton-Kent hadn't even known that his brother had a son. Breck's father was about as low down the scale as a man could get when he died and left Breck to shift for himself. Stealing came easy to him; he'd been raised among crooks; you couldn't blame him so much."

ON THE GORILLA TRAIL

edged with delicate little trees, exquisite miniatures relieving that long line that went up, up, to the citadel crag of the top that glowed with umber rock.

The gorilla was a tremendous male. When tugged and propped upright I shall never forget the impression he made. The great girth, the thickness and length of arm, the astounding shoulders, made him a giant.

The face was only ferocious when the mouth was open. The normal expression was of a curiously mild and patriarchial dignity. Without being sentimental you could see in that face a gleam of patient and tragic surmise as if the old fellow had a prescience that something was happening in the world against which his strength was of no avail—as if he knew the security of his high place was gone.

For generations he had lived without fear. He preyed upon no one for his food; he ate the wild carrot and fresh greens, disturbing no one and disturbed by none of his world. He could have crushed a lion or strangled it, and an elephant, if gripped by the trunk, would have had no thought but of escape. He had been indeed the king of the African forests.

The measurements we took then showed his height to be five feet seven and a half inches, the reach from his hand to the ground eight feet and two inches, and from hand to hand seven feet eight and a half inches. His chest was between sixty-two and sixty-three.. He was, we felt sure, the big bull of Karissimbi, of which we had heard. This bull had been shot at before, and we found an old wound in the hip, which had given a decided curvature to the spine, shortening the height.

Looking at his great arm and curving fingers—the fist as big as a man's head—I could understand how unwary hunters in the old days had been scooped out like soft shell crabs.

All that day the men worked on the gorilla, for Mr. Akeley preserved everything for museum and medical records. And constantly they paused to photograph the changing clouds and mountains.

It was a marvelous day. The sheer beauty of it was a spell, and the presence of this great gorilla made it seem like a page from the very beginning of time.

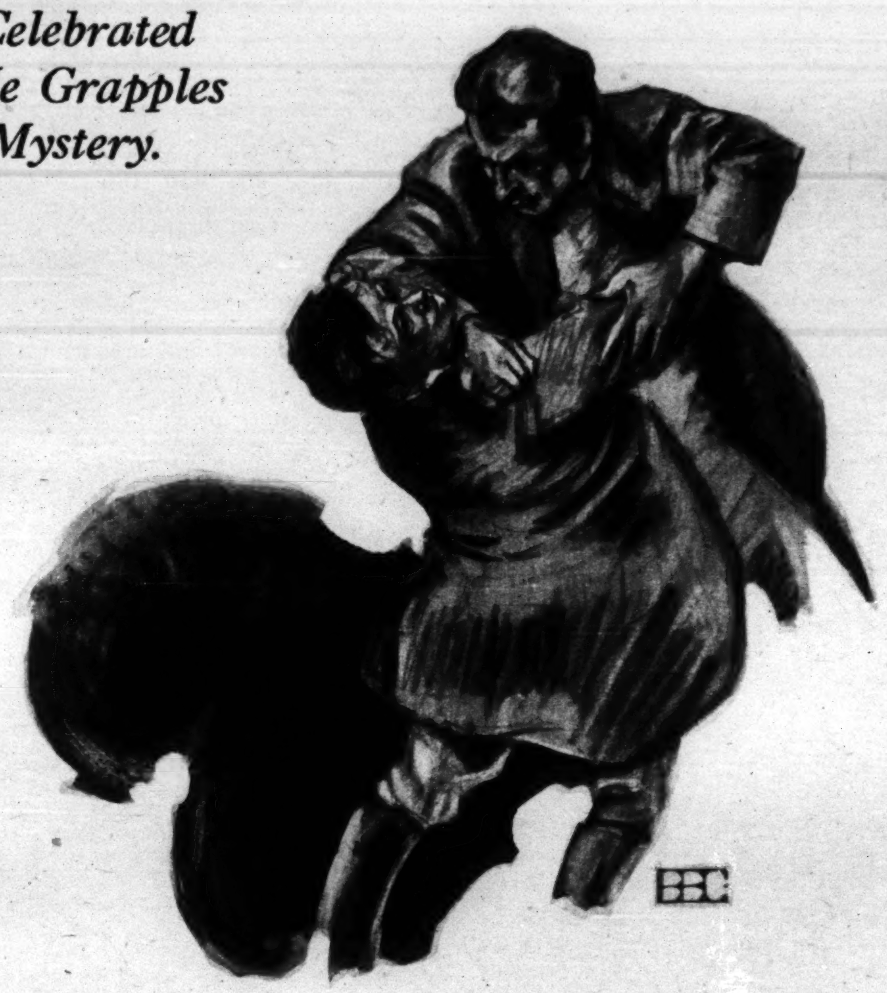
THE DYKE GRANGE MYSTERY

by Sax Rohmer

Of Course You Are Acquainted with Paul Harley, the Celebrated Detective; Today He Grapples with an Egyptian Mystery.



"The light was very dim . . . but I could see enough of him to know that he had read his death sentence in my face."

"YOUR complaint that there is a certain monotony about Norfolk's scenery," said Paul Harley, "is not justified by the facts."

I raised my head from the cushion upon which it rested and stared at him. He was contentedly watching the float upon the end of his line, which bobbed gently up and down on the miniature waves of the river. At a spot selected by my friend we had anchored our boat, the anchors consisting of blocks of stone lowered over bow and stern. The day was hot and still, and the contents of the luncheon basket from the "Cardinal's Hat"—a quaint riverside hostelry which was our temporary home—had induced in me a somnolent mood, without in any way diminishing Harley's enthusiasm for rod and line.

So tortuous were the windings of the little stream that one might behold the miracle of a wherry with its great brown sail seemingly traversing a meadow. No other fishers were near us, and except for the periodical passage of the wherries, whose masters, without exception, seemed to cherish a fiendish desire to run us down, nothing had disturbed our placid sport.

"What do you mean?" I said sleepily.

"Look!" Harley pointed down stream.

Resting on my elbow, I stared in that direction, and then sat upright, staring even harder.

A man wearing a tarbush, that little red felt cap commonly called a fez in this country, was standing on the river bank a hundred yards below us. He was otherwise attired in European fashion except that he wore a jacket of khaki drill. He was clearly some kind of eastern.

He seemed to be looking in our direction, when:

"Ha!" exclaimed Harley, rapidly winding in his line. "A big one this time!"

He proceeded to land a roach, and I was stricken with the old amazement to note how this man, whose life had been one long adventure, whom I had seen calm and unmoved amidst scenes of panic, now was stirred to childish excitement by the presence upon his line of a flapping fish.

"Splendid!" he cried. "The biggest today. I think that will do, Knox. Our oriental friend seems to be coming in this direction. Suppose we hail him?"

Dropping the fish into the basket which contained his earlier captures, Harley raised one anchor and I the other, so that very gently we began to drift downstream. At a suitable spot I forced the nose of the boat into the reedy bank as the man in the red cap approached us.

"Salamat!" cried Harley genially.

The brown face of the stranger lighted up at sound of the familiar tongue.

"Esh-halak, Effendim!" he replied.

Harley turned laughing eyes in my direction.

"An interchange of Arab greetings on a Norfolk river bank," he said. "Are you satisfied, Knox?"

He scrambled forward and jumped ashore, entering into an animated conversation with the oriental in what was evidently the latter's native language.

I gathered that the brown man was some kind of peddler—although of a superior sort since he was neatly and respectably dressed. This idea was born of one more terrifying. for, as the two conversed, I saw the man produce from his pocket a dangerous looking dagger, its hilt thickly incrusted with gems, whether real or otherwise I could not determine. I started, but, seeing him hand the weapon to Harley, recognized that his intentions were pacific enough.

Harley examined the thing critically, shook his head, and returned it to the man, speaking to him rapidly in Arabic. Finally a sum of money changed hands, and the oriental, with many expressions and gestures of profound gratitude, departed, whilst my friend rejoined me in the boat.

"Very odd, Knox," he said, scrambling perilously to his place. "That poor fellow's guardian angel must have guided his steps in our direction."

"What is he?" I asked. "An Arab?"

"Possibly has Arab blood," returned Harley, "but he comes from Mitrahina, in Egypt, that romantic village in the palm groves which is all that remains of royal Memphis."

"What on earth is he doing wandering about Norfolk?"

"He is some kind of performer; a member of a combination which came to grief in Cromer recently. The manager did the traditional thing and bolted with all the available funds, leaving poor Ali Mahmoud and the rest stranded. Ali's case is aggravated by the fact that he has very little English, and he has been wandering about for several days endeavoring to raise enough money to get to London, from whence he seems confident that he can work his passage home."

"Did he want to sell you that wonderful looking dagger?"

"He did. He uses it in his performance apparently, and it's the only thing of value which he has left." He stared at me queerly. "I advised him to keep it and gave him the address of a man in London who would offer him a fair price for it."

"Is it genuine, then? Are the jewels real?"

"Absolutely real, Knox. It's old Damascus work—apart from which I should say there are a hundred pounds' worth of gems in the hilt." He paused, fumbling for his tobacco pouch. "Ali Mahmoud offered to sell it for forty shillings," he added. "I gave him that amount and returned him his dagger."

"Very odd," I murmured, taking the sculls and heading upstream.

Dusk was not far off, and our beer jar had long ago run dry. The day had been an exceedingly hot one, and now the charms of the "Cardinal's Hat" called to me urgently. Harley began to arrange his tackle and I to pull gently upstream. But another encounter was to come; for, as we turned a bend, where a row of pollard willows broke the reedy flatness, there stood a short, thick set man in riding kit, staring intently toward us.

"Sir Joseph Peek," murmured Harley. "As pretty a scoundrel as anything outside Moscow. But I suppose we must be civil."

I had been staring at the man over my shoulder, but now I turned my head again and grimaced at Harley. My acquaintance with Sir Joseph was slight, and I had no desire to improve it.

At this moment, however, surprise was predominant in my mind and my grimace had indicated this, for Sir Joseph Peek, a wealthy land owner of the neighborhood, had accumulated his fortune and subsequently earned his knighthood in the Egyptian Delta, his interests being concerned with cotton.

"Yes," murmured Harley, reading my glance aright, "it's very odd. First an Egyptian juggler and then an Egyptian cotton grower. Complain no more, Knox."

"Hullo!" called Sir Joseph from the bank as I pulled slowly by. "What luck today, gentlemen?"

"Fair," returned Harley, holding up the roach which he had last captured. "Sixteen inches of him. Did you ever see a bigger?"

"No," returned the other, a sardonic smile showing momentarily upon his dark, florid face. "But I don't like roach."

"Sorry," drawled Harley, dropping the fish back into the basket. "In that event I will keep it myself."

"Ha, ha!" cried Sir Joseph. "One to you, Mr. Harley. But I will return good for evil. May I expect you and Mr. Knox to dinner at the Hall tomorrow evening?"

Harley muttered something under his breath which I was unable to detect, and then:

"Thanks," he said. "It's very good of you. We shall be delighted."

"Pleasure, Sir Joseph," I murmured.

"Cheerio, then," came the heavy voice from the bank. "Seven-thirty tomorrow night."

"Means well," murmured Harley; "but I happen to know too much of his private history to experience any rejoicing. Couldn't very well refuse, though, could we?"

"No," I answered absently, as another bend in the stream concealed Sir Joseph from view.

But nevertheless I was annoyed at Harley's acceptance, and I pulled on in silence to the little landing stage of the "Cardinal's Hat," where we disembarked and walked up the gravel path to the inn.

Murder!

"I CANNOT understand what has become of Wessex," said Harley.

We had dined, and dined well, and now we sat, one on either side of the little porch, smoking and looking out to where the river whispered gently past the landing stage. It was a still and perfect night, and, save for occasional bursts of conversation from the bar parlor, the silence was unbroken.

This was the sort of solitude in which Paul Harley really reveled—wisely, no doubt, since there could be no more complete change from the stress of such a life as his. But I was as curious as he respecting the absence of Wessex.

Detective Inspector Wessex of New Scotland Yard, an old friend of Harley's, had been investigating a sordid but mysterious tragedy in Great Yarmouth. It was one of those beach murders which sometimes enliven the dullness of a summer season, and Wessex had traced the crime to a member of a highly respectable and religious family, a middle aged man whose Sunday school activities had instantly aroused the suspicion of the trained investigator.

Wessex had conducted the inquiry very ably, and he was returning to London in the morning, but, knowing that Paul Harley was sojourning at the "Cardinal's Hat," he had arranged to dine and spend the night there with us and to outline to the celebrated private investigator the details of the case. His absence was unaccountable, for we knew that his official business in Great Yarmouth had terminated early in the day.

Now, as we sat there in the porch, drinking in the freshness of the evening breeze, the hum of a car upon the winding road reached our ears.

"Here comes Wessex," said Harley. "I wonder what has detained him. He is too late for dinner, but no doubt there is cold meat available, and the ale is excellent."

Louder and louder grew the drone of the motor, and presently the car rounded the last bend and the light of the head lamps shone through the hedge on our right. We

LE'S GO! by Berton Braley

Direct Action Versus Deliberation as a Policy in Love and Life

IT wasn't the army which taught Cochrane the phrase; though it was so much the watchword of the A. E. F. that it might have done for a flag. "Le's go" had been a sort of slogan with Harry Cochran from the first day he picked it up, when he was sixteen. It happened to fit his natural ebullience perfectly; it expressed in two words both the restlessness and the need of action which were his impelling characteristics.

Harry always fidgeted at discussion, squirmed at considered conferences. Teammates of his on the Jefferson High school football team remember how Harry, after listening for five minutes to the detailed and elaborate plan of strategy promulgated by the coach before the game with Harlowton High, suddenly interrupted the coach by jumping to his feet and blurting:

"Aw, the way to beat those guys is to play 'em off their feet. Le's go!"

And the recollection of those who heard this impertinent declaration is that the coach frowned for an instant, then grinned, and said:

"All right, kid, you've said it. Do it. Le's go!"

Those teammates needn't stretch their memories much, either, for it's only eight or nine years since that day—a day glorious in Jefferson's annals—and they can tell you how, in the last ten minutes of the last half, Harry, streaked with dirt, sweat, and blood from his gashed cheek, with the score 4 to 0 in favor of Harlowton, simply lifted that battered and groggy Jefferson team over the line for a final plunge that made the score 5—4, with his "Come on, fellows, hit 'em again. They're just as tired as we are. Le's go. Le's go!! Le's GO!"

It was only logical that Harry, finished with college and energetically making good in his job on the sales force of the Acme Manufacturing company, should apply his phrase to the matter of getting into uniform when America joined the war.

While a group of his friends debated the question of enlisting, with some pros but more cons, Harry put an end to the discussion by saying:

"The way to join the army is to join the army. There's a recruiting station just down the street. Le's go."

And as he started out three of the members of the group went with him, for Harry's "Le's go" had a way of getting other people to acquire similar momentum.

That iterated phrase of his aroused less attention in the A. E. F. than in civil life because, as suggested in the first few lines of this chronicle, it was a "le's go" force. So that his slogan failed to stamp Harry as unusual, except in the unthinking way that, when quartered in dull billets with no excitement stirring, Harry would occasionally say "Le's go" to a couple of equally restless companions and be A. W. O. L. for a day or two. That meant guardhouse on his return, of course, but as soon as movement or fighting started the usefulness of such an efficient, if impatient, soldier made it a certainty that he would be in the ranks again.

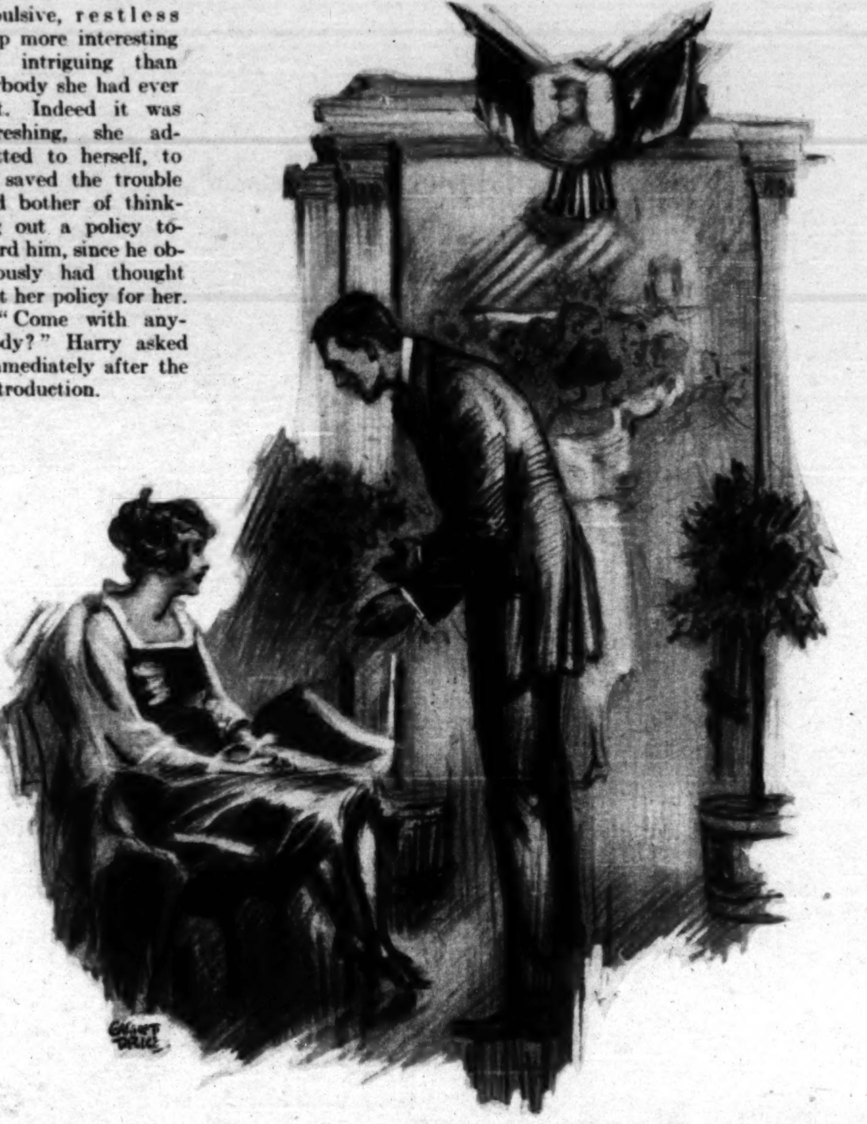
It was this restless energy, this dynamic impatience of Cochrane's which undoubtedly appealed to Myra Larkin. Probably because these were qualities in which she was deficient.

Had Myra been a bigger or a stupider girl one might have called her phlegmatic. But she was little and dainty and behind her contemplative brown eyes was a brain of excellent quality. Only it was a brain in which the motor cells were held sternly in check by the ratiocinative faculty. Myra never acted without a process of carefully considered reasoning. She always had to "think things out first."

You could be pretty certain Myra wouldn't make any silly and sudden mistakes, but equally certain she wouldn't take any of the blind chances that often lead to glorious adventure or glad romance.

Yet from the moment she shook hands with Harry at the first dance given by his chapter of the Legion she found this impulsive, restless chap more interesting and intriguing than anybody she had ever met. Indeed it was refreshing, she admitted to herself, to be saved the trouble and bother of thinking out a policy toward him, since he obviously had thought out her policy for her.

"Come with anybody?" Harry asked immediately after the introduction.



"Le's Go!"

"With my brother," said Myra.

"Then that's that," Harry responded, "and he doesn't count. So all we have to do is to consider ourselves. I like you right off, you're going to like me, even if you don't yet, and I'll just put my name down for forty of these dances and supper. There's the music for the first fox trot now. I hate to miss any of a fox trot, don't you? Le's go."

And she found herself dancing with Harry before she had time to bring her ratiocinative faculties into operation.

Monopoly

OTHER men had always been a bit daunted by Myra's detached manner. Some of them mistakenly thought her cold, but Harry was too impulsive to have noticed anything except that she was small, well contoured, with lovely hair and eyes.

She let herself be monopolized by Harry because he hadn't given her any opportunity to weigh or judge. He'd gone ahead as though it was all decided beforehand. And she liked it. It had remained for Harry to prove that, though quick decision and action were not possible to Myra, she admired them in other people—and recognized them in Harry.

"You know," she said, as she gave him her hand just before they said good-night at her home, "I've had a wonderful time tonight. It was so good of you to see that my dances were all filled. I was afraid when I came I might be a wall flower."

Harry, who had fought off nearly all the other men in the post in order to take at least half her dances himself, looked straight into her clear, candid eyes under the porch light. But he found there no hint of raillery, no glint of sarcasm.

"Good to myself, you mean, Miss Larkin," he replied. "You see, you honestly struck me all in a heap when I first saw you and I said to myself: 'Boy, you for her. Le's go.' I had to do it, you see. Do you mind?"

It was the first time he had offered her any chance to consider, and she began dispassionately to survey her evening in retrospect to discover whether she had minded or not. Just exactly what her weighted decision might have been even Myra will never know, because Harry said:

"There's no use your minding, anyhow, so you might as well not mind. It's necessary to my peace and happiness that you should like me and like this evening and like tomorrow evening when I come around, so why argue about it? Why, indeed? I'm glad that's settled.

"I'll be around about eight-thirty with the Lizzie and we'll buzz down the long, white roads into the blue moonlight. Good-night, Myra."

"Good-night," Myra said as he went down the steps.

"Did I hear you say 'Good-night, Harry'?" Cochrane paused at the bottom of the steps. "Let me hear you say 'Good-night, Harry.' Harry is an easy name, only two syllables. Le's go!"

"Good-night, Harry," said Myra.

There were two whirlwind weeks after that in which Harry continued to give Myra no particular opportunity for decision or analysis. And even when she slipped into bed at night and lay there trying to think out exactly how she felt about Harry she found it a failure. Because some of his inconsequent whimsicalities, his impulsive actions would leap into the midst of her cerebrations and interfere with any balancing of emotions. Perhaps it was the sheer luxury of not having to decide anything or fret her faculties with the processes of reasoning by which she ordinarily arrived at conclusions; perhaps it was the boyish, confident charm of Harry himself; but anyhow Myra allowed herself to be monopolized completely, and even enjoyed the process.

Then came the night when Harry, driving the Lizzie homeward from a country club dance, suddenly turned the car into the dense shadows under a spreading oak, shut off the power, and put on the brakes.

"What's the matter?" Myra asked.

"Nothing whatever. Everything is all right, so far as I can see," said Harry. "I just stopped because this is a nice dark and comfy spot. A man doesn't want to kiss a girl out in the blazing moonlight."

"But I don't want to be kissed," gasped Myra.

"Now, that places me in a most unfortunate situation," Harry remarked. "You see, something has been telling me that I must kiss you. I've tried to resist it, I've struggled and fought against it, but that something just keeps at me. And so I have to do it. Of course, I want to, but I didn't feel that the time was ripe. Only something said, 'Sure it is, Harry. She wants you to kiss her. Le's go.' And now you say you don't want me to kiss you, and I've simply got to—and it does seem an embarrassing situation."

"Don't be ri—ridiculous, Harry. Drive on, please."

"How can I drive on until I obey that impulse? 'When duty whispers low, thou must, the youth replies, I can.' Honest, honey, I've got to kiss you. Why, Myra, dear, I love you and you love me and we're going to be married right soon and everything's settled, so—le's go."

He kissed her.

"There," he said, "you see, it wasn't bad at all. Only it was sort of incomplete. Kiss me, Myra."

Myra's brain was trying to struggle to its proper ratiocinative state, but for once the purely motive cells got away from her, and before the perceptive faculties could interfere her arms were about Harry's neck and she had kissed him.

Yet when Harry Cochrane drove up to Myra's house early the following evening her mother came to the door and told him Myra had gone to visit a friend in Chicago and wouldn't be back for two weeks.

"She left this note for you, Harry," said Mrs. Larkin.

Harry stared blankly at the note in his hand for a moment, forgetting that Mrs. Larkin was there.

Then he stammered, "Er—yes, I—I beg your pardon, Mrs. Larkin. Thank you," turned and walked back to his car.

"Dear Harry," the note read, as he opened it in his room, "I'm running away from you. I'm not angry over last night; it was sweet; neither am I sorry. Only when I got home I realized that I hadn't really had a chance to think about us two since we met. I've let you sort of carry me along in your impetuous way, and it's been nice to do so, because—well, because I've always had to think things out and I think slowly. You saved me that, and it was like a rest to me. But, Harry dear, we can't go into marriage that way. I know you'd say we could, that I can just leave it to you, but we can't. Because sooner or later I would, whether I want to or not, have to think it all out. And if I discovered that I had let you carry me away and that I didn't really care enough to live all my life with you, it would be dreadful. Besides, Harry, I'm mercenary enough to wonder if you really should marry me with what you earn. I want to think about that, too—and I want you to think about it. MYRA."

Thinking It Over

NOW Harry's first impulse was to jump on a train and find Myra—to brush aside her caution with kisses, and to sweep her up in his arms as he had the night before. But he read the note again, and for perhaps the first time in his life he began weighing deeds with consequences. It seemed to him as though Myra's note had tapped a hitherto unused portion of his brain, and as if therefrom flowed a sequence of thoughts—clear, cold, practical thoughts which daunted and awed him. All his life Harry had been ruled by Lady Mechant's motto, "Why not?" paraphrased in his favorite "Le's go?" Now he was having his first session with "Why?"

He knew he loved Myra. There wasn't any doubt about that, for in all that array of chill ratiocinations which came forth from his brain as he pondered over Myra's note not one made denial of that fundamental fact.

But he saw that he hadn't really given her a chance to know her real mind, that he had just plunged along Lochinvar fashion. That was all very well in a poem, but he found himself wondering, with a pained grin, if Lochinvar's Lady, when she had time to stood up, crossed the little patch of lawn, and walked down to the gate. Inspector Wessex stepped out of the car.

"Mr. Harley!" he cried. "Thank heaven you are here. I have walked straight out of the Great Yarmouth case into one that has simply stunned me."

"What do you mean?" asked Harley. "What has happened?"

"Murder has happened!"

"What! Another beach crime?"

"Nothing of the kind. Some one has been murdered at Dyke Grange, not a mile from here."

"But when?"

"Tonight—less than an hour ago."

"What?" cried Harley. "How in heaven's name did you come to hear of it?"

"Simple enough," explained Wessex. "The Norfolk police knew I was here, and when the application came through to Yarmouth the superintendent, knowing where I was bound for, phoned to have me intercepted. So instead of coming to the 'Cardinal's Hat' I went to Dyke Grange, and I only left there ten minutes ago."

"And you say a murder has been committed?" I exclaimed.

"Undoubtedly. But the circumstances! Gentlemen, I am utterly bewildered."

"Do you want me to look into the matter?" asked Harley.

"I beg of you to do so, Mr. Harley. I don't know what to make of it."

"Come up to my room for a moment, and then we will accompany you."

Wessex agreed, and presently the three of us were seated in the little low ceilinged room, the lattice windows wide open, so that from where we sat we could see the headlights of the car in the lane. An oil lamp burned upon the table, and Henry, the solitary waiter of the "Cardinal's Hat," had placed a tray of refreshments beside it.

"It's this way," said Wessex, leaning his elbows upon the table and staring across at us. "Dyke Grange is an old Jacobean place, at one time surrounded by a moat. The moat is dry now, however. The property is supposed to be to let, and is actually in the hands of a Norwich estate agent. But from what I can gather the owner places impossible obstacles in the way of prospective lessees."

"Who is the owner?" I asked.

"Sir Joseph Peek."

"What!" cried Harley. "And you don't think he really wants to let Dyke Grange? Why not?"

"Well," Wessex spoke slowly, "a man named Forder and his wife act as caretakers and live in the wing where the servants' quarters are situated. They are a very unpleasant couple, but I don't think they know anything about the crime. The rest of the house is unfurnished, with the exception of a bedroom and sitting room, access to which can be gained by a side entrance. I rather fancy——" he hesitated, staring significantly at Harley.

"What do you fancy?" prompted the latter.

"I fancy Sir Joseph used these rooms at odd times."

"For?" prompted Harley.

"Well—he slept there when he was too drunk to go home, and also arranged interviews there which he did not want to take place at the Hall, you understand?"

"I follow you. The man has an unpleasant reputation."

"He had," corrected Wessex.

"What?"

"I say he had. He is lying in Dyke Grange, stabbed to the heart!"

Harley sprang to his feet excitedly, and I, scarcely knowing if I heard aright, clutched the edge of the table, watching the speaker.

"Old Forder, the caretaker," Wessex continued, "came rushing down to the village constable at Dykeham at about half-past eight—that is to say, about the time that I was due here. In going round to lock up he had found the dead man. As a result I was held up just as I came through Dykeham village. We had had a puncture and I was half an hour late. Otherwise the news would have reached me here."

"Good God!" muttered Harley. "Good God! And we were speaking to him only this evening. Go on, Wessex, go on."

"Well," continued the detective, "what do you say to coming and seeing for yourself? I have had everything left absolutely as I found it, and the local man is on duty there."

"You are right," said Harley shortly. "Let us start at once. Wessex, it's almost incredible!"

Gypsy Peggy.

WE descended the stairs just as Peggy Gatten, the landlord's daughter, crossed the passage below. She started and turned her head aside as if to avoid us, but:

"Good evening, Peggy," said Harley genially.

"Good evening, Mr. Harley," she returned, but hurried on without further speech.

I derived the impression that she had been crying, for her fine, dark eyes looked unnaturally bright. She was a handsome brunette, her figure too full for classic beauty, indeed of an orientally voluptuous mold, so that I had more than once suspected a gypsy strain in Peggy, possibly inherited from her mother. She was no stranger to the arts of the toilette, but practiced them with so heavy a hand as to mar rather than to enhance her rustic good looks.

Dave Gatten, her father, came of a stock which had bred fenmen in the old days, a poaching, lawless lot, and I wondered if even his present prosperity had entirely quelled the family spirit within him; for he was an independent fellow, and at times there was a wild look in his eyes which, as Harley had laughingly remarked, lent him a remarkable resemblance to a Stevensonian pirate. His treatment of his daughter was sometimes harsh to the point of brutality; more than once I had overheard him taking her to task respecting her mode of dress. But tonight we had little leisure to consider the domestic life of the "Cardinal's Hat."

As we hurried out to the car which waited a mental picture arose before me of Sir Joseph Peek lying in his blood. I seemed to hear his rather coarse voice crying: "Cheerio, then. At seven-thirty tomorrow night."

As the car moved off:

"What was the weapon used?" asked Harley.

"Well," replied Wessex, "that's the point about which I am so hopelessly puzzled."

"Why?"

"He was stabbed to the heart—so much is evident. And in the next room—not the room in which he was killed—I found a jeweled dagger on the floor."

"A jeweled dagger!" I exclaimed in a hushed voice.

"Yes, a wonderful looking Moorish thing."

"Good God!" whispered Harley. "Do you hear that, Knox?"

"I do."

"But," continued Harley, "where is the mystery—if you say you found a dagger lying on the floor?"

"Here's the mystery," returned Wessex. "There is absolutely no trace of blood upon the blade!"

A Cigaret Stump

THE car pulled up in a narrow lane beside a low stone wall in which a gate was set.

"There is a path from here," explained Wessex as we descended, "which leads directly into the wing in which the crime was committed. Sir Joseph was in the habit of using this path, and tonight it was probably used by some one else as well."

The path which we were following was a mere grass track, at one point passing through a clump of trees; then, as we came out from their shadows, Dyke Grange lay before us. Built upon a sort of mound, possibly artificial, the Grange, a low, rambling building, must be approached from this point through a piece of weedy ground where the path was more clearly defined, and thence through the dry moat, into which and up on the farther side the track led.

"This was the way I came tonight," explained Wessex, as we crossed a narrow piece of neglected lawn and approached a curious Gothic window, tall, narrow, and pointed at the top.

The room within was dimly lighted by the moon, and the churchlike quality of the illumination was enhanced by the presence of stained glass in a smaller Gothic window upon its further side. The floor level was three feet beneath us where we stood, and I could see that there were oaken steps leading down from the window. As the three of us stood looking in:

"This," said Wessex in a rather hushed voice, "was Sir Joseph's private entrance, and the furnished rooms are immediately above."

Neither Harley nor I answered him, for we were both staring at something which lay upon the polished oaken floor some ten or twelve feet from where we stood. It was a jeweled dagger, its blade gleaming coldly in the moonlight and the stones of the hilt glittering like eyes of venomous serpents.

I looked silently at Harley, and he read my glance, nodding his head slowly.

"The same, Knox," he said, "beyond a shadow of doubt! Ali Mahmoud's knife!" He turned to Wessex. "Where are the man Forder and his wife?" he asked.

"They are in their own quarters at the other end of the house. Relations of the dead man, and others, are there as well; and a local officer is on duty in the next room—the room through that doorway yonder. But"—he spoke eagerly—"do I understand that you have seen this dagger before?"

"I have, Wessex! But be patient. Let us go in. This was the way you approached tonight?"

"Yes," replied the inspector shortly, piqued, I thought, by Harley's reticence.

He pushed the leaves of the window and they opened noiselessly.

"No creaking," muttered Harley.

"No," returned the inspector. "The hinges are oiled; I examined them. He used this door pretty frequently, I fancy."

We walked down the steps on to the polished floor. There was a curiously musty smell in the room, not unlike that of a cheap cigar. Harley dropped on one knee, and, bending, stared intently at the dagger. By the light of his electric torch he examined it critically, but without touching it. This done, he raised it, submitted it to further scrutiny, and replaced it. Then:

"Not a stain," he muttered. "Not a stain. It fell a yard from where it lies. The notch is just discernible. It hasn't been touched, Wessex?"

"No; it lies exactly where I found it."

The sound of an interrogatory cough reached us from the room beyond, and:

"It's all right, constable," cried Wessex. "We're coming in."

The communicating door was open, and, our footsteps echoing in the big, empty room, we crossed and entered that adjoining. In some respects it was similar except that it possessed no Gothic windows and was lighted from the north. The constable was standing over by the window, watching the doorway through which we had come, and some distance from him, beside a second, closed door, lay the huddled figure of a man wearing riding kit. He lay half upon his face, one clinched fist shot straightly out before him, the other arm doubled under him unnaturally. A great quantity of blood had stained the oak beneath his body.

We stood for a moment silent, then:

"Anything to report?" asked Wessex.

"No, sir," replied the constable, evidently awed by the intrusion of a great tragedy into his humdrum routine.

"Did you move him?" asked Harley, turning to Wessex.

"Only enough to enable the doctor to examine his wound," was the reply.

"Who sent for the doctor?"

"The man Forder, after he had communicated with the police."

"And he arrived while you were here?"

"He had arrived a few minutes before."

"I see. Was he smoking?"

"Smoking? No. Why do you ask?"

"Sniff, Wessex, sniff!" He turned suddenly to the constable. "You have not been smoking, officer?"

"Certainly not, sir."

"Sure?"

"Quite, sir!"

Harley walked all around the ghastly figure, shining his torch upon the floor and examining the bloodstains. It was a sickening spectacle, and once, when a ray of the torch fell upon the pallid face of Sir Joseph Peek, I reflected how I had disliked his florid complexion earlier in the evening, and I shuddered at the thought.

"Anything of interest in his pockets?" asked Harley.

"Nothing," was the reply. "Keys, cigarets, a few odds and ends in his note case, but no money."

"No money?"

"No paper money. He had a little silver in his trousers pocket."

Harley stooped and gingerly turned the body on its back.

"Ugh!" he exclaimed at sight of the bloodstained breast. "A strong blow, Wessex."

"Undoubtedly. And with just such a weapon as——" The inspector jerked his thumb over his shoulder in the direction of the next room.

Harley made a brief examination of the hands, clothing, and hair of the dead man and stared critically at the soles of his boots. Then:

"Here's a burned match on the floor," he said abruptly. "Upstairs."

Opening the door, we found ourselves at the foot of a carpeted stair, and, mounting this, we entered an elegantly furnished and well lighted room in which the pictures, statuettes, and decorations spoke eloquently of the tastes of its departed owner. There was a vague smell of tobacco in the stale air of the room, and Harley, staring about him, said slowly:

"What sort of cigarets were in Sir Joseph's case?"

"Algerian," replied Wessex. "Similar to French Caporals."

Harley turned to me.

"That is the smell in the room below!" he said.

He pushed open a door and walked into a tastefully appointed bedroom, glanced rapidly around, shrugged his shoulders, and came out again. Silk shaded lamps burned in both rooms. One of the drawers of a large writing desk was open. In an absent fashion Harley began to examine the contents. He came upon a number of photographs. Turning his head, he glanced over his shoulder at me quizzically.

"There are two points to be decided," he said.

"What are they?" I asked eagerly.

"First, where Sir Joseph dropped the cigaret which he lighted and partly smoked in the room below; and, second, which, if any, of these fair but frail ladies"—he tossed the bunch of photographs upon the desk—"was here tonight."

"Good God!" said Wessex. "What makes you think a woman was here?"

From a little coffee table standing beside a deep settee Harley took up a china ash tray and held it out toward Wessex. It contained the stumps of three tiny, gold tipped cigarets.

"Choice Egyptian," he said. "Hadjes Nessim. A man with a palate for these could never smoke Algerian!"

Wessex stared rather stupidly.

"But," he began, "a man may have been here—the man who murdered him. Why"—his face lighted up excitedly—"the clew of the knife is strengthened, Mr. Harley. The man who smoked those Egyptian cigarets was the owner of the oriental dagger!"

"If the dagger is the property of a man," returned Harley, "then its owner certainly did not smoke these cigarets."

"I don't follow you," Wessex declared bluntly.

Between finger and thumb Harley took up one of the gold tipped stumps and held it directly under a shaded lamp.

"Examine it closely," he invited.

Wessex and I bent forward, staring curiously, until:

"Do you see the faint red stains upon the gold?" asked Harley. "Lip salve, Wessex; lip salve!"

Theories

"WELL," said Inspector Wessex, walking into our sitting room at the "Cardinal's Hat" on the following morning, "we've got the Arab; he was arrested an hour ago at Norwich."

"Good!" said Harley, standing up and crossing the room to where his tobacco pouch lay upon a seat beside the window enough; the ache in her had become a tormenting pain. She did not know which hurt her the most, the determined way in which Breck had urged her to leave Kent House or the way in which he had hung his head when she questioned him. When she thought that possibly the neglected dog was following Breck she felt desperate. Breck would think she cared nothing for his present.

She looked everywhere for the animal. It had not gone up the road to the farmhouse nor down the road into the park. Marie searched the park for quite a radius. The high park wall ended at the edge of the park; then there was a fence which ran along the road to the farm and up to the highroad. It divided the Kent House property from the neglected grounds of Colfax Hall, and, finally, it occurred to Marie that the spaniel might have wandered off beyond the fence.

She thrust through the undergrowth which made a hedgerow of the fence and anxiously scanned the field behind Colfax Hall. At the rear of the house were tall trees and a tangle of shrubbery, but the field was fairly open, patched here and there by weeds. To Marie's relief, half way between her and Colfax Hall she saw the spaniel. The little animal was nosing the ground and going in the direction of Colfax Hall.

Marie climbed the fence and started down the field in pursuit before it occurred to her that the spaniel was in danger. Colfax' fierce huge dog would with one snap end the life of anything so tiny and helpless as the spaniel. And there was danger to her, too. She and her little dog were trespassing.

Terror gave speed to Marie's pursuit, but the spaniel, having reached a well worn path, was running toward the house. Marie did not think of stopping—it was Breck who had given her the dog. For his sake she would have faced both Colfax and his mastiff. When the spaniel disappeared in the tangle of shrubbery she plunged after it, praying fervently that Colfax and his dog might not be at home. She tore through the shrubbery just in time to see the spaniel maneuvering with difficulty the steps of a side porch. There was a blanket beneath one of the windows on the porch and the dog hastened to it and nosed it eagerly; evidently it was the resting place of the mastiff—when the animal was at home.

Shock.

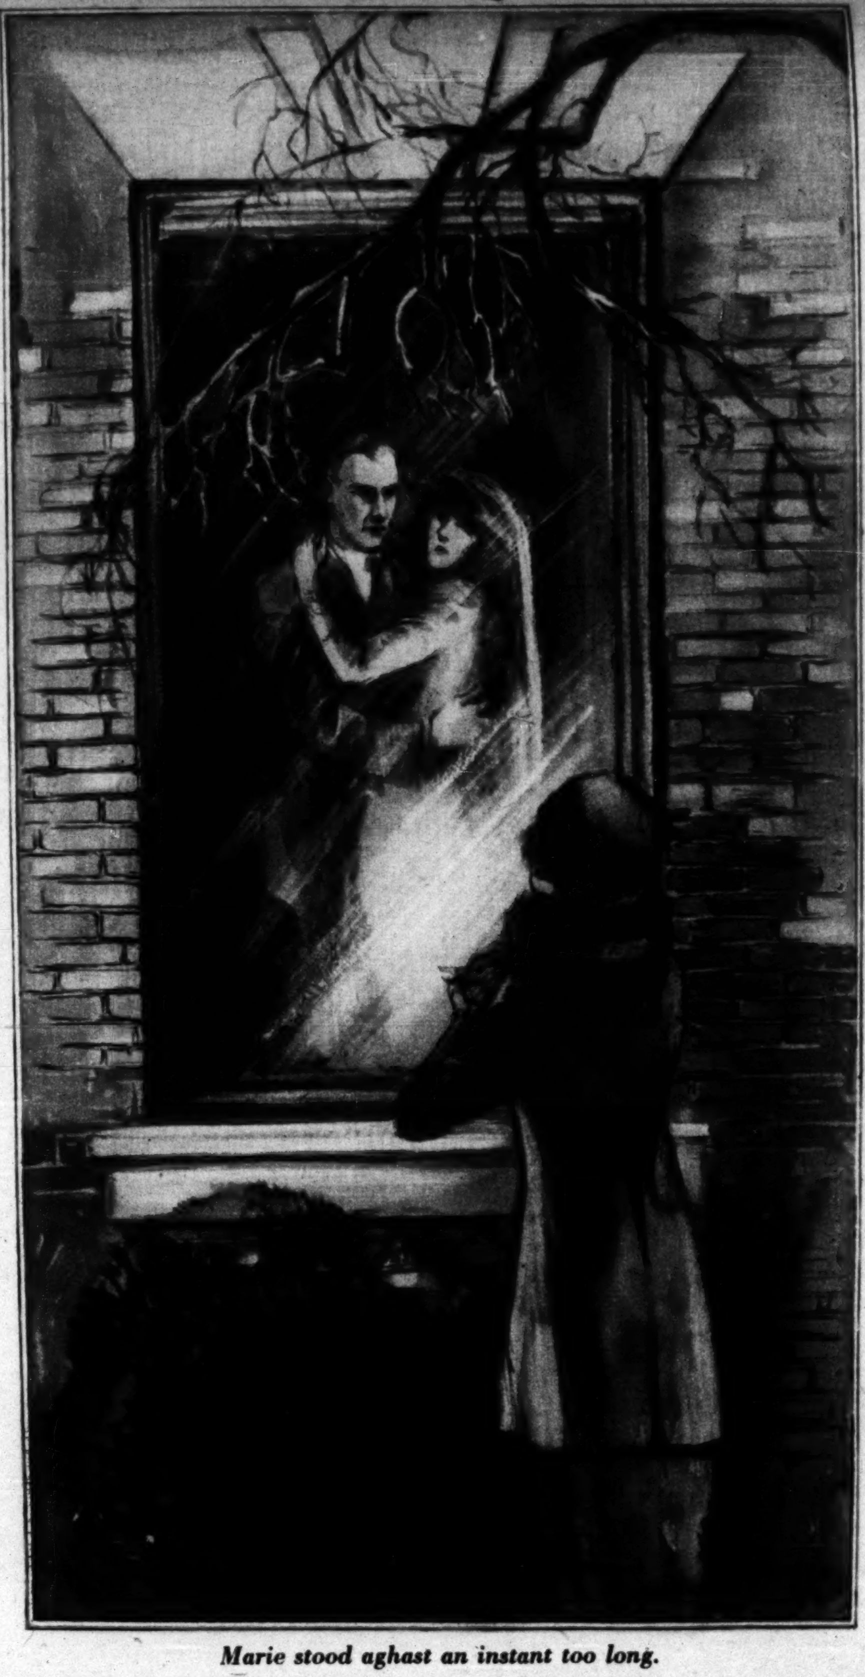
MARIE tiptoed up the steps and across the porch. She seized the spaniel, intent on getting away as rapidly as possible, and she did not think about the window, but as she lifted the dog she glanced in apprehensively, and what she saw held her fast for a brief space of dumb astonishment. She looked into a large and high ceilinged room carpeted in red and furnished in heavy old mahogany. The evening sun streamed into it, so she saw distinctly the two persons in the room, Allen Colfax, standing and facing the window, and, with arms about his neck, a woman, the long lines of whose body were terrifyingly familiar to Marie—the woman of the train, Mrs. Smith.

For a paralyzing instant Marie was certain of it, for the woman wore a hat with a flowing veil which hid her hair, and her face was hidden by Colfax' bent head. They were clasped in each other's arms, cheek to cheek, a passionate embrace. Marie stood aghast an instant too long, for Colfax lifted his head suddenly and the woman turned and looked, revealing not Mrs. Smith's rich hued face but the flaxen fairness of Bella Dunbarton-Kent. In the instant before Marie fled she had the queer impression that Mrs. Smith must have transformed herself into a blond, bleached lashes and brows and hair, for the long, strong, graceful lines of the body were so like Mrs. Smith's and yet the woman was certainly Bella Dunbarton-Kent. Allen Colfax was looking at Marie over Bella's shoulder, brows raised and lips parted in blank amazement which lowered on the instant into a look of rage.

Marie sprang off the porch and ran into the shrubbery and straight up the path which led to the highroad. She heard Colfax on the porch; she knew he was running after her; then she heard him call, "Come back here!" She ran for her very life.

But it was impossible to outdistance him. There was a stile giving on the highroad, and Marie scrambled over it. Colfax cleared it at a bound. He was within a few feet of her then, and Marie whirled and stood at bay.

"I came—only to—get—my dog——" she panted. "If you touch me—I shall scream—I shall scream!" she said wildly. She was holding the spaniel tightly to her heaving breast; her eyes and her voice and her cheeks were afire.



Marie stood aghast an instant too long.

Though he came close, Colfax did not touch her. "Keep quiet! I'm not going to hurt you!" he commanded. He looked at the dog; he was hot, panting, and scarlet. "A likely story!" he said angrily.

"It is—quite true. My dog ran away to your house—and I was afraid your dog would kill her. She ran up on your porch—so I went to get her. I could not help seeing in your window."

"How long were you there? You better tell me the truth."

"I wish to speak only the truth. I was there only a moment."

"What did you see?"

"I saw—the woman who was there."

"What woman?"

"I thought at first it was—some one else—but it was not."

"Indeed! Who was it?"

"It was Mademoiselle Bella—Dunbarton-Kent."

"You're mistaken," Colfax said more quietly. "It wasn't Bella, but some one who looks a good deal like her."

Marie knew she was not mistaken and that he was not telling the truth. If only she could get back safely to Kent House with her dog! She was afraid of Colfax; he was a big, reckless looking creature, as broad shouldered as Breck, but he did not have Breck's clean look. On that first day when she had gone to his house by mistake and he had frightened her, he was so drunk he had been scarcely able to keep his feet. He seemed to be sober now, but flushed and angry. One of his eyes was blackened—Marie remembered his fight with Breck—and it made him look ugly.

Marie was frightened, but she tried to be tactful. "It does not matter to me who the lady was, monsieur. I am sorry, I did not mean to see into your house. It was accidental. All I wish is to take my dog back now to Kent House, so I say good-by," and she backed away from him.

"No you don't!" Colfax said roughly. "They call you 'The Little Detective' at Kent House. I haven't believed it; you look like a little innocent to me; but blamed if I don't believe it now. You'll not go a step until you've given me a promise you'll keep—that you won't tell Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent or any one else about what you saw today."

The Black Sheep.

MARIE flamed first into anger. "I am not a tattle-tale! I would never run to Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent with stories of her niece!" Then, stung by the thought that when Breck had named the spaniel he was making fun of her, she flared almost into tears. "I do not understand why I am insulted! Why am I called a detective? I do my work and am honest! Why 'a little detective'?"

Colfax's expression changed; he looked anxious rather than angry. "You won't carry this to the old lady then?"

"I would certainly not tell Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent that I saw you and her niece embracing," Marie retorted hotly. Of what business of mine is it? If you wish that promise, I give it."

Colfax looked so relieved that Marie was not afraid of him. It occurred to her suddenly that she could make him tell her why she was called a detective. Then it rushed over her, her great opportunity.

"But I ask something in return," she added promptly. "I wish to know what is the trouble in this Dunbarton-Kent family that makes them all so strange. Why do they treat Mr. Breck Dunbarton-Kent as they do, and also why does he act so strangely?"

Colfax looked nonplussed. Then he collected himself. "O, it's just an abominable mess. I tell you, Marie Angouleme, I really haven't a bit of hard feeling because you used your fists on me that first day. I was drunk—I'm a fool when I'm drunk. When I get worried I drink, and then I do fool things. You're not a little detective or any of the rest of it—I take that back. I know you were not spying on us. I think you're a nice little thing; that's why when I heard you scream the other night I went for Breck—there was no telling what he was up to. So I'm giving you good advice: there's going to be a worse state of things at Kent House; it's sure to come, and the less you know about it the better. Don't get mixed up in it—just quietly clear out."

Marie eyed him for a moment. He did not look angry, but he had a dissipated, reckless appearance. He was quite the kind who, when drinking, would not care what wild thing he did, an irresponsible man, as Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had said. Evidently he and Bella were lovers—a secret affair—for when driving Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent and Bella they had passed him often and Bella had looked over his head always, just as Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent did. They were deceiving Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent.

Marie distrusted Colfax utterly. She felt he was trying to be pleasant simply because he was afraid she would tell Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent about his affair with Bella and, naturally, he would want her to leave Kent House as soon as possible. But it was strange that he should say to her almost exactly what Breck had said. Breck had refused to explain, but this man would have to tell her what he meant by such advice. She would make him do it.

Marie's little face was set hard. "I have no intention of leaving this Kent House unless Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent should tell me to go," she said firmly. "I like this family—there are those who have been kind to me. But there is a thing I am determined to know—why is it that even you speak ill of Mr. Breck Dunbarton-Kent?"

Colfax looked down. His hung head reminded Marie painfully of Breck's; he looked so like Breck, all but his slight mustache and the dissipated lines in his face. "Confound it!" he muttered. Then he shrugged. "'Curiosity killed a cat—it never killed a woman.' I bet it's killed many a man, though. Look here, it's dangerous for me to tell you. I'd rather not tell you, Marie Angouleme. Hang it! My mother was a Dunbarton-Kent!" He looked thoroughly disturbed.

But Marie was immovable. "I will tell no one." she promised firmly. "Of it and of your secret I will say nothing to anybody. I promise you, and I keep a promise."

For a moment Colfax looked at her as keenly as Breck might have done. "You will, I guess," he said finally. "Perhaps Breck's the one you like. But you're making a big mistake. West's a gentleman—he's straight. He's been courted all his life, but it hasn't spoiled him. He loves artistic and unusual things—he's clever. He has his own fortune, too, and he doesn't have to wait for his third of the Dunbarton-Kent money. West won't quarrel with any one—he's always treated me like a cousin—I like West. Everybody likes West. West and Breck and Bella, the Dunbarton-Kent money is to go to them; Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent has only the income from it during her life. But there's a proviso in Mr. Dunbarton-Kent's will that, if either of his heirs should commit a crime, come under the law, he, or she, will lose his portion. It's a queer thing—not that you're not a fascinating girl and good enough for anybody—that West has

"You are making progress. What statement did he make?"

"He will have to be more fully examined through an interpreter," replied Wessex. "But he has denied all knowledge of the crime. Nearly eight pounds in paper and silver money was found upon him, and you will remember that Sir Joseph's case was empty."

"Did he explain how he had come to lose the jeweled dagger?"

"Yes." Wessex frowned thoughtfully. "He declared that he had sold it to Sir Joseph for five pounds!"

"Ah!" Harley looked up suddenly. "When and where did the sale take place?"

"Apparently a few minutes after his interview with you on the river bank—or so he declares. He says that Sir Joseph spoke to him in his native tongue," continued Wessex, "and that in this way the deal came about. It's rather a thin tale, however, and very suspicious his coming out pat with the name of the murdered man."

"Why?" asked Harley. "My two pounds and Sir Joseph's five, together with the few shillings already in Ali's possession, would account for the sum found upon him. Evidently Sir Joseph gave the man all his ready money."

"Well, Sir Joseph's reputation in Egypt was a pretty bad one; I've learned that. Here's a native of that country, haunting a lonely part of Norfolk, most mysterious behavior, and the dagger, known to have been his property, is found almost beside the body of the murdered man. Papers or other incriminating evidence had obviously been taken from the drawer of the table above, and, lastly, Egyptian cigarets had been smoked in that room."

"By some one whose lips were painted," murmured Harley tonelessly.

"Yes," agreed Wessex. "It's an awkward point, I admit."

"Very awkward," said Harley. "Then we have the extraordinary circumstance that the knife, admittedly once the property of Ali Mahmoud, exhibits no traces of blood."

"He may have cleaned it."

"Why, having done so, leave it behind? Then you must remember my discovery of the Algerian cigaret stump near the gate opening upon the lane. Have you considered this, Wessex?"

"Yes, and I know it's your idea that Sir Joseph had walked down the path with some one to the gate, had stood there for a moment smoking, and had then dropped the cigaret end. You think he was followed back?"

"Well, mention an alternative."

"He may have been waiting there for some one. And this person may have murdered him as they entered the house."

"Meaning by 'this person' Ali Mahmoud?"

"Who else?"

"Listen, Wessex: the Algerian cigaret was lighted in the room where the dagger was found. Evidence: the burned match and the smell. He smoked there for a few moments and then walked to the gate. He was almost certainly accompanied by the woman who had been to visit him. After she had gone the murderer came! Have you traced the originals of any of the photographs?"

Inspector Wessex shook his head.

"Not so far," he admitted; "but then I've had very little time." He glanced at Harley. "Do you believe the Forders' story that they were unacquainted with the identity of any of Sir Joseph's visitors?"

"Yes," replied Harley promptly; "the man was an artist in intrigue. I don't believe for a moment that he would have taken these people into his confidence."

"But you are convinced that there was a woman with Sir Joseph last night?"

"I am."

"You think she came back and murdered him?"

"O, no, I don't. No woman's hand struck that dreadful blow."

Wessex sighed wearily.

"In other words, Mr. Harley," he said, "your theory leads us nowhere. Mine, shaky in places, at least points to a possible culprit."

"And the motive?" asked Harley. "Do you suggest robbery?"

"Well, he seems to have taken all the ready money which Sir Joseph had upon him."

"And left behind him a piece of property possibly worth two hundred pounds," murmured Harley. "No, Wessex; I prefer your theory of a private vendetta. But even that leaves me very cold. The woman has no place in it—or I cannot fit her into one—and, further, I don't doubt that the Egyptian's statement is absolutely accurate."

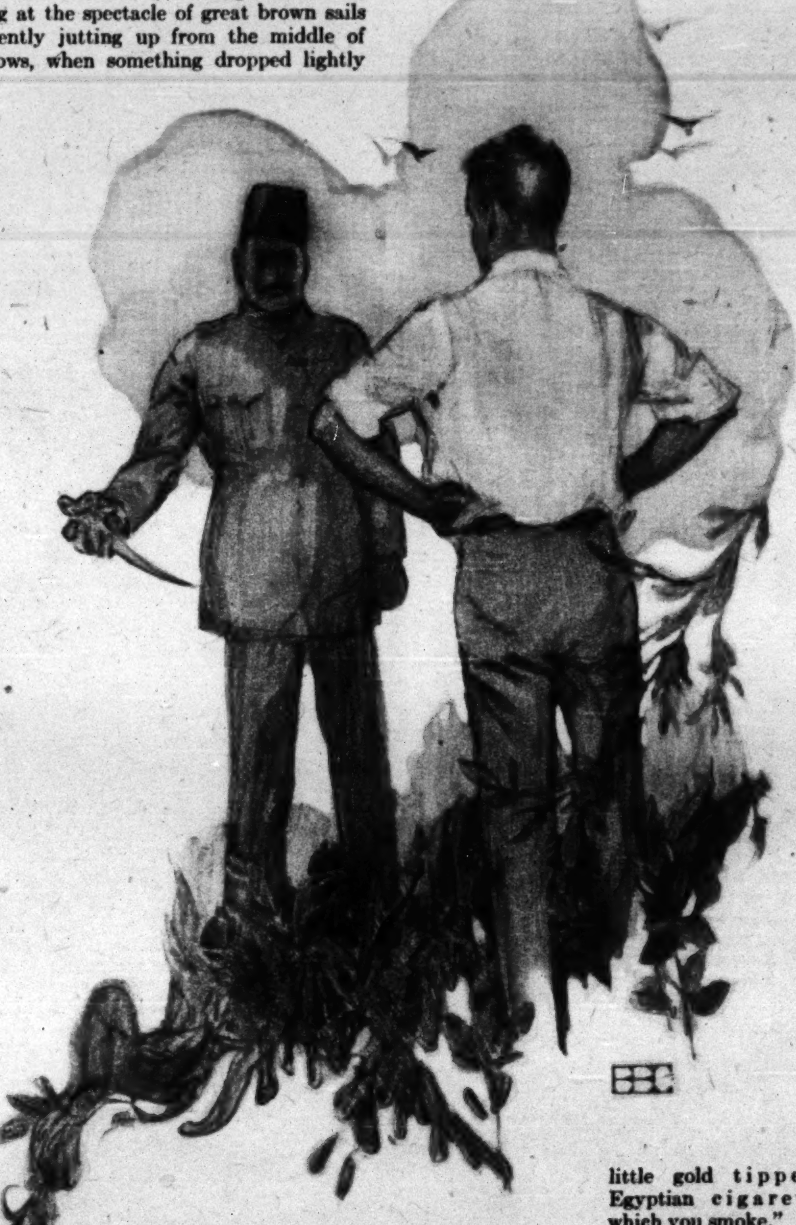
"Do you think this man Ali was not at Dyke Grange last night?"

"I doubt if he knew of the existence of the place."

"Hm!" Wessex scratched his chin perplexedly. "At any rate, he is in custody."

The Net Closes

WE walked downstairs together and out into the porch. The "Cardinal's Hat" seemed to be deserted this morning; no one was about in any of the rooms. We lingered there for a while, in thoughtful silence, staring at the spectacle of great brown sails apparently jutting up from the middle of meadows, when something dropped lightly upon my hat brim and then fell at my feet. I looked down, and:



"As the two conversed I saw the man produce from his pocket a dangerous looking dagger."

"Harley!" I whispered, glancing up at an open window over the porch. "Harley, look!"

I stooped and, raising the object which had dropped from above, held it between finger and thumb for his inspection.

It was the gold tip of a tiny Egyptian cigaret!

"Ah!" He snatched it from my hand and peered at it closely. Then: "Lip salve!" he muttered. "Lip salve!"

There were faint red stains upon the gold!

Harley grasped Wessex and myself each by an arm and drew us back into the inn. Stepping into the little bar parlor, he rang the bell. His eyes were very bright and his face was very grim. Presently Henry, the ancient and melancholy waiter, appeared, and:

"Could I speak to Miss Peggy for a moment?" asked Harley.

"I'm afraid not, sir," was the reply. "She's been lying down all morning, suffering from a very bad headache."

"Is that so? The news of the tragedy in the neighborhood has upset her doubtless?"

"It has upset us all, sir."

"There is something I want to ask Miss Gatten," said Harley after a moment's hesitation. "I should like you to take a little note to her. I will write it now, if you will bring me paper and envelope."

Five minutes later Peggy Gatten came into the sitting room where Harley, Wessex, and I awaited her. Her appearance rather shocked me, although she had obviously attempted, by the employment of devices of the toilette, to conceal the fact that her usually fresh color had deserted her. There were shadows beneath her eyes telling of a sleepless night, and her expression puzzled me.

"Ah, Peggy," said Harley genially, "sit down, won't you? I am sorry to worry you when you are obviously far from well, but I must ask you to tell me where you get those little gold tipped Egyptian cigarets which you smoke."

Peggy had seated herself at his invitation, but, hearing those words, she leaped to her feet, wide eyed, clutching at the back of a chair.

"All right," said Harley gravely. "You need not answer. I know now. Tell me what happened at your interview with Sir Joseph Peek last night."

The girl moistened her lips and seemed to be seeking for words with which to reply, when there came a dramatic interruption. Unheard by us, so intent were we upon this strange scene, Dave Gatten, the landlord, had approached the door. Now it burst open and, a rugged, fierce figure, swarthy and menacing, he strode into the room.

"I'll tell you!" he shouted. "I'll tell you!"

"You!" came in a whisper from Peggy. "You!"

"Yes! Who else!" shouted the man, his eyes lighting up madly. "I'll do no good by trying to conceal what's bound to come out at the trial. I might as well tell the truth now and take my chance."

Harley was standing by the window, his face quite expressionless, but I saw the light of a sudden understanding dawn upon the countenance of Inspector Wessex. Rising from the chair in which he was seated, the inspector came forward, and:

"Dave Gatten," he said, "I arrest you for the murder of Sir Joseph Peek at Dyke Grange. Anything you say will be used as evidence against you."

"Let it be!" cried the man truculently "Let it be!"

He folded his arms, glaring around from face to face.

"I've watched and I've wondered," he continued, addressing himself to the pale faced girl who now crouched back against the wall of the room staring at him glassily. "Fine dresses and silk stockings, aye, and jewels, too! They never came out of your savings, Peggy. I was easy, but it was going too far. And last night I followed you. You talked so loud up in that room above that I heard almost every word, and I can answer the question you have just asked her, sir!

"He told her he was through with it all, that it must finish before things were discovered. Then"—Gatten turned to Harley—"I saw the black faced dog light a cigaret in the room below. I saw him come out, smoking it, and walk down to the gate with my girl. I lay flat behind a bush waiting for him to come back. When he did and walked in through the open window I followed him! He heard my foot on the steps and turned.

"I don't know what he read in my face; I don't know what I had in my heart. But there's something in my blood, as there was in my father's blood before me, that just drives me mad at times. His ugly face seemed to be grinning at me through a red mist. I struck at him and he dodged the blow. I leaped upon him and picked him up in my arms."

Gatten illustrated the act, his movements exhibiting that gigantic strength which I knew him to possess.

"He knew he was outmatched, but he wrenched one arm free and got it into his pocket. I saw the glitter of a long blade, and I threw him off and fell back a step. He came for me, as mad now as I was, and then——" Gatten paused. "Well, then I remembered the big clasp knife which I always carry—always have carried. I can prove it. And the next thing I knew I had it in my hand with the blade open.

"He struck at me. I caught his wrist, twisted it, and his dagger fell. The light was very dim, there in that empty room, but I could see enough of him to know that he had read his death sentence in my face. He turned and ran, and I followed him. Half way across the inside room I caught him and threw one arm around his neck. He twisted about, squealing like a hare, and reached up to my throat. Then I struck at him with all my strength."

He stopped abruptly and brushed his sleeve across his brow, which was streaming with perspiration.

"I dropped the clasp knife, still open, into my pocket," he resumed, "and stood listening for a moment, looking down at him where he lay at my feet. The red madness was gone for the moment, and I could think coolly. I had heard you"—he turned his glaring eyes upon Peggy—"I had heard you ask him for certain things of yours which he had, and I had heard him refuse to give them to you. I found my way upstairs. You had said over and over again: 'Open that drawer; I want my letters.'

"I found the drawer and I opened it, and I found your letters and some photographs. I didn't know if I had everything, and I might have looked further, but just then I heard a door bang somewhere in the house, and I hurried back down the stairs and out through the open window, which I closed behind me. I forgot the dagger, or I might have brought that, too. But what I want to say is this—he attacked me, the black hearted mongrel. And except for that last blow all I did was to defend myself."

He squared his broad shoulders.

"I feel better," he said, "now that I've got the story off my chest. When I heard you'd sent for Peggy I knew it was only a question of time. You can do as you like, gentlemen. What I've done I've done, and I'm not sorry for it."

Uttering a low moan, Peggy sank down, insensible, to the floor. Her father did not even glance aside.

"I've burned what I brought away," he concluded, "and I have cleaned my clasp knife. But the lining of my coat pocket is still stained with blood. I've spoken because I'd rather face the music now in my own time and in my own way than skulk like a rat in a hole waiting to be dragged out. It was sure to come sooner or later."

"It had come," said Harley gravely.

Inspector Wessex was raising the unconscious girl, and I saw my friend's glance fixed upon her face, its pallor throwing into ghastly prominence the unnatural scarlet of her painted lips.

The Romance of a Million Dollars

by ELIZABETH DEJEANS

THE STORY THUS FAR

PRETTY Marie Angouleme, chauffeuse employed by Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, social leader with an income from millions, discovers there is an air of distrust and dread about the household, which includes Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's two nephews, Breck and West, and a niece, Bella. Even Marie is not held above suspicion of being a spy or detective. Finally, although attracted to the somber Breck, she finds a friend in West. Wandering about the estate, she traces music to a "spite house" built by a mysterious "Mrs. Smith," and recognizes the player as a terrible "woman in sables" who had tried to strangle her. She is about to scream when Breck puts his hand over her mouth and is felled by Allen Colfax, a third nephew, who is distrusted by Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent. When Marie awakes, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent is attending her injuries. One of Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's detectives reveals Breck has visited Mrs. Smith and she has fled; he tells how she had lost heavily at gambling. West, repulsed in a proposal of marriage to Marie, names Breck as his rival.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT.

The Truth About Breck.

IT was so correct a guess that Marie caught her breath. She was embarrassed beyond words, and they walked in silence up the driveway to where the lawn touched the park and again they were in sight of the house. Then West came determinedly to her aid.

"Wait a moment, Marie," he said earnestly. "You must listen to me. I'm not dependent in any way on my aunt, I can marry any one I please and whenever I please, and I love you. I think you are the 'unsudden' sort—I'm glad you are. I'm going to make you love me.

"As for Breck—Marie, don't wonder too much about him. There are things I can't tell you, but the girl who lets him take hold on her imagination is in for serious trouble. Don't misunderstand me, Marie—I'm not saying this because I'm jealous. I'm not in the least jealous of your interest in him, for if you knew the truth about Breck—and you will in time—you couldn't even pity him. I understand perfectly why Breck is a tantalizing mystery to you; it's because you are tender hearted. It's a quality I love—you're sweet clear through. But, Marie, if Aunt Bulah suspected for a minute that you have any particular interest in Breck she would be ruthless.

"I'm telling you because I love you. I want you to stay here and win out with everybody. I want you to feel that you have a home and such a woman as my aunt devoted to you; Aunt Bulah is a power, in a way—she can do a great deal, either for you or against you. You know that I'm speaking for your own good, don't you, dear?"

There was forceful earnestness in every word he had uttered.

Marie had grown white. "I must believe that you speak for my good, monsieur."

"I do, Marie. I'm a Dunbarton-Kent; it hurts to have to say what I have about a member of my family, but I love you too much not to warn you. Will you try to love me, Marie?"

Marie looked at the hand he laid on her arm, then up into his earnest face. "I like you very much, and I am grateful, but to love you—I do not know. I—I must think," she said unsteadily.

His brows came together, then suddenly he smiled. "That's somewhat doubtful encouragement, little Marie, but I must abide by it, I suppose. You think, and I'll try to help you to think. We'll leave it that way for the present, but, Marie, I never give up anything I've set my heart on, so think hard, sweetheart."

There was no coquetry in Marie's answer, and she withdrew from his touch gently. "I will, monsieur. At the same time I am proud that you care for me, for I am so unimportant a person. I wish now, please, to go to the garage alone."

"Very well; we'll say au revoir here. But you'll find fresh roses in your room—they'll help you to think kindly, I hope," and, raising his cap gravely, he went off across the lawn to the house.

"Mon Dieu!" Marie whispered to herself as she went on up the driveway. "Mon Dieu! Now I do not know at all what to do."

She was so excited and troubled by her thoughts that even so odd a thing as Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's sending to the garage for the little dress Marie had worn that morning scarcely stirred her into surprise. She gave Gibbs the dress and went on with her thoughts, or, more correctly, her longings. After lunch Willetts came to the garage and took out the limousine. He said he was going to drive Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, but he did not say where she was going.

"How are you feeling?" he asked, evidently desirous of lingering as long as possible. Marie looked flushed and vivid, a tempting vision.

"I feel quite tired," Marie answered. "This afternoon I think I shall lie down because of my head."

"That's right," Willetts said approvingly. "I'll tell Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent you're being sensible. You want to take good care of yourself."

Then West came to take out his roadster, and Marie fled to her room. She was thankful that he did not try to talk to her. She lay down and told herself that she would remain lying down until dinner time, that it was the right thing to do.

But when the sun began to slant through her window the urge was too much for her. She got up and began to dress hurriedly. Why should she not do as she had planned in the morning? What harm could it do? She would be so much happier if she knew.

With nervous haste she arranged her hair so that it fluffed out becomingly beneath her toque, and her furs she left open in front so as to show her pretty blouse. She pinned one of West's roses on her blouse, then quickly removed it; the red color was becoming, but wearing it made her uncomfortable. She compromised by wearing a string of red beads which a French soldier had given her, and when she remembered what he had said her face quivered into a smile, and suddenly she kissed the beads:

"It is the color that draws love, mademoiselle."

Then Marie went down into the garage, but not out by the front way. She went through the storeroom and rapidly across the shrub dotted space behind the garage and into the far end of the park. To reach the road to the farmhouse she must either semicircle through the park or go straight through the park and walk along its outer edge until she came to the road, a considerable walk and two fences to climb. She chose the latter way.

"They all speak ill of him, not one person is his friend. He is not allowed any longer even to come to the garage!" she breathed passionately. "I do not care if I try to discover for myself! I cannot bear it any longer!" and she mastered barbed wire fences without any great difficulty.

First there was a plowed field, then the farmhouse pasture. Marie kept close to the edge of the park, where there was undergrowth, until she came to where the road to the farmhouse emerged from the park. Then she chose the stump of a tree and sat down. From her position she could see the farmhouse and barn, but she was well hidden from the park by the undergrowth behind her and by the big oak tree. Marie knew that feeding time was over; she sat still and waited.

She did not have to wait long; Breck came out of the barn and started down the road to the park. He walked slowly and with observant eyes on the semicircular sweep of park. When half way down the road he bent as if taking something from the ground and his backward glance swept the farmhouse and what could be seen of the high road. Then he came on deliberately as before. It was not until he came quite near that Marie noticed he was carrying something white in the bend of his arm. She saw it only vaguely, for in her excitement everything but his face looked blurred. His face she saw with peculiar distinctness; its almost carven immobility and the shadowed eyes.

From the first moment Marie had seen Breck Dunbarton-Kent she had thought him the handsomest and strongest looking man she had ever seen, and now, throbbing with excitement and scarlet from embarrassment, she felt rather than saw his splendid physical perfection, his well carried head, and wide shoulders.

She felt a quiver of delight oddly commingled with the fear that he would simply lift his cap and pass her by without a word or the slightest change of expression. His eyes were fixed on her, but a marble face would have shown as little recognition. When he came to within a few feet of her, without knowing in the least what she was doing, Marie stood up.

The Little Detective

HE stopped close beside her. "I saw you coming," he said. "I brought you something."

Marie changed from red to white with alarming suddenness, for she was swept by the discovery that he did not smile simply because the muscles of his face were unaccustomed to smiles, and that his eyes were shadowed and watchful because of habit. His voice was gentle.

"Yes—monsieur—" she said with difficulty. She did not know why, but she wanted to cry.

"See?" he said.

Marie's misty eyes followed his glance downward to the curve of his arm in which was cuddled a spaniel pup, a fluff of white with black splotches. From between its long, silky ears it was staring roundly at Marie.

"She's a cocker spaniel," Breck explained, his voice soft, his expression changeless. They're affectionate and little trouble."

"O——" Marie said unsteadily. She was trying to wink the tears out of her eyes. The result was that they hung on her lashes and she crimsoned with confusion.

Breck looked down at the forshortened view of wet lashes and quivering lips, and the muscles in his cheeks twitched, whether with a desire to smile or from some other emotion it would be difficult to tell.

"Suppose you sit down and take her in your lap," he suggested quietly. "She'll soon make friends with you."

Marie was glad of the chance to hide her face. "It is a most beautiful dog," she said with greater composure.

"This baby's weaned; you can feed her almost anything now. She'll be amusement for you."

Marie lifted her wide eyes. "You mean you give her to me?"

"Yes—to take with you when you go away, if you want to." After a keen survey of the park, Breck had backed against the twin tree. Its trunk hid him from any one who might be in the park and he could see any one who might be about the farmhouse or on the High Road. He looked down at Marie. "I've named her, but perhaps you won't like her name."

Marie's mouth began to curl upward at the corners. There was a circle of warmth about her heart. If she could make him smile, she would feel like dancing because of joy. "I think I guess the name," she said, eyes laughing.

"Well?"

"Miss Angora Lamb."

Marie saw the smile dawn in his eyes, then creep slowly over his face, as if struggling with stiff muscles. "Poor Gibbs! No—guess again."

"I think I shall call her Dorothy, which means a gift of God."

"I called her the Little Detective." His face had become immobile again.

"But why such a name, monsieur?" she asked puzzled.

"What do you think the most vicious crime in the calendar?" he demanded abruptly.

"But, monsieur? Why, to murder intentionally—or intentionally to injure a helpless creature——"

"And next?" he asked in the same even way.

"I think—to steal and lie." Marie felt chilled, for his face was like stone; again she felt like crying.

"There is a sin which is like unto it," he said with even bitterness; "to give a child a bad inheritance." He touched her shoulder. "Marie Angouleme, go away from here." He spoke low and yet emphatically. "Go back to Canada. Go at once, and forget Kent House and every one in it."

"Monsieur——?" In her surprise and distress, Marie stood up, the dog clutched close.

"I beg you to go," he said profoundly.

West was right. Breck had taken hold on Marie's imagination and, except to the mere animal, that is the beginning of love. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's stern disapproval of her nephew and West's warning had merely deepened her sympathy and interest.

It was love and sympathy which had brought her to them. The urge in her was too strong to be governed by warnings or fears. She wanted to see him and talk to him. She wanted to win him. She wanted his explanation of why he was treated as he was. His plea was a part of the mystery which surrounded him. He must explain.

But to question him was not easy; she held the dog closer. "Monsieur—why do you make of me so strange a request?"

"Because you are in danger."

Her eyes dilated. "In danger? What do you mean?"

"Will you please believe me, and go? I can't explain. There are those who do not mean well by you. There is real trouble in this family, Marie Angouleme. The storm will break one of these days—don't let it catch you. You walked into it knowing nothing about it—go, and try to forget us."

Marie took her resolution in both hands. "I do not know who could wish me harm, yet I am not afraid. I do not wish to go, for I have learned to care for—for members of your family. I could not forget. I do not know what this trouble is that distresses your family. Monsieur, I wish to be honest, so do not be hurt with me, because I came today purposely to talk with you. Perhaps I am wrong, but it has seemed to me that this family trouble circles about you. But, in my heart, I have felt a great sympathy with you—I have felt that you were unhappy. Is it not so, monsieur?"

The color surged into Breck's face. He looked down, but he said nothing.

In her earnestness, Marie put her hand on his arm. "Monsieur, tell me what this trouble is? Why do they treat you as they do? I ask not at all from curiosity—indeed I do not—but—but because I have such sympathy. Tell me and, if you wish it, I will lock it in my heart—no one shall know."

Breck looked down steadily at the ground. He was silent a long time it seemed to Marie, until the color slowly left his face and the muscles in his cheeks began to twitch, as if he were setting his teeth tightly. He continued to stand with head hung, until Marie began to feel ill; a guilty man would look like that.

Then the little spaniel began to squirm; she was holding it too tightly. Marie drew back from Breck and put the spaniel down. Her throat ached; why did he hang his head like that?

Then, suddenly, he straightened and looked at her in the shadowed way that set her miles apart from him. "It's best to leave things as they are for the present," he said evenly. "Tell me—do you love my cousin, West?"

It was an abrupt question, shot at her from beneath keenly observant eyes, and Marie flamed scarlet. Out of her confusion of feelings, sickness at heart, pain, and surprise, she answered swiftly.

"He at least is kind. I think I shall not leave Kent House immediately, monsieur."

"I judged as much, from what I have observed," he returned as coldly as Marie had ever heard him speak. "I'll wait a little and see," he lifted his cap. "Thank you for coming, Marie Angouleme, and I am sorry you think I'm not kind. I hope you may never think anything worse of me than that," and he replaced his cap and strode off.

Marie looked after him until the welling tears dimmed everything. "I should not have told him that he was not kind," she said in sorrowful regret. "I should not have questioned. It is worse than if I had not come—nothing is plainer to me than it was before."

But Marie was not telling herself the exact truth. What hurt her most was the way in which Breck had hung his head.

It was some time before Marie thought of the spaniel. She was feeling wretched

THE LAND OF MAKE BELIEVE

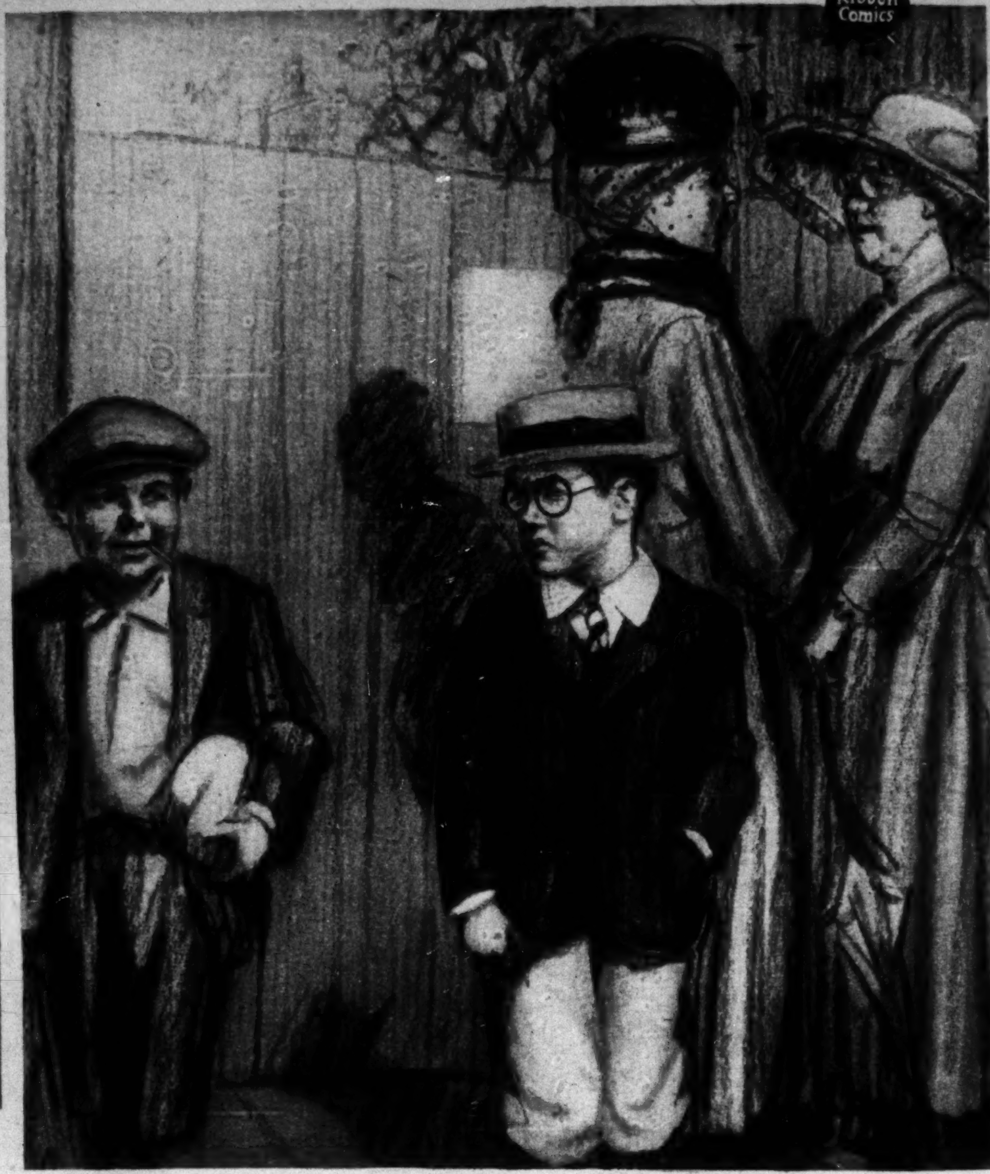
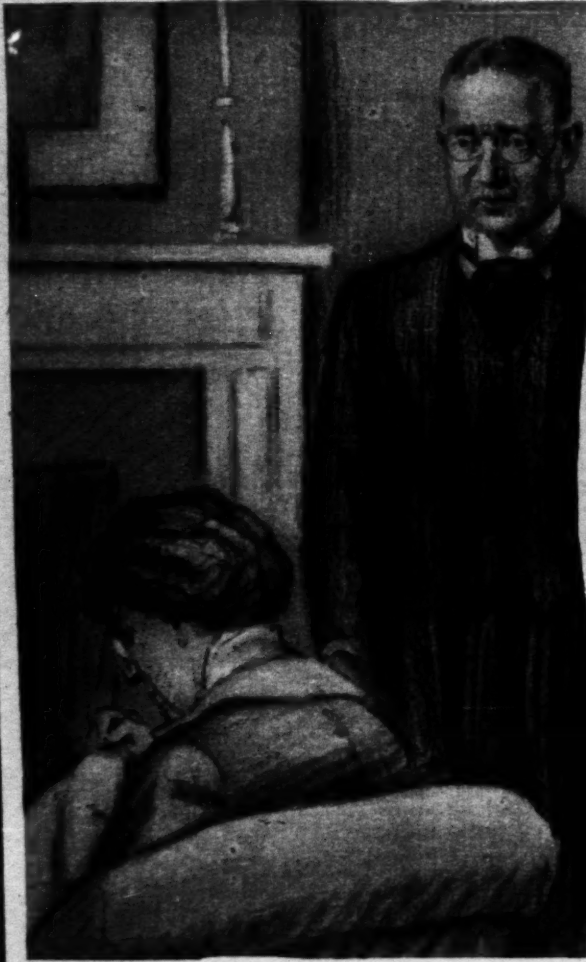
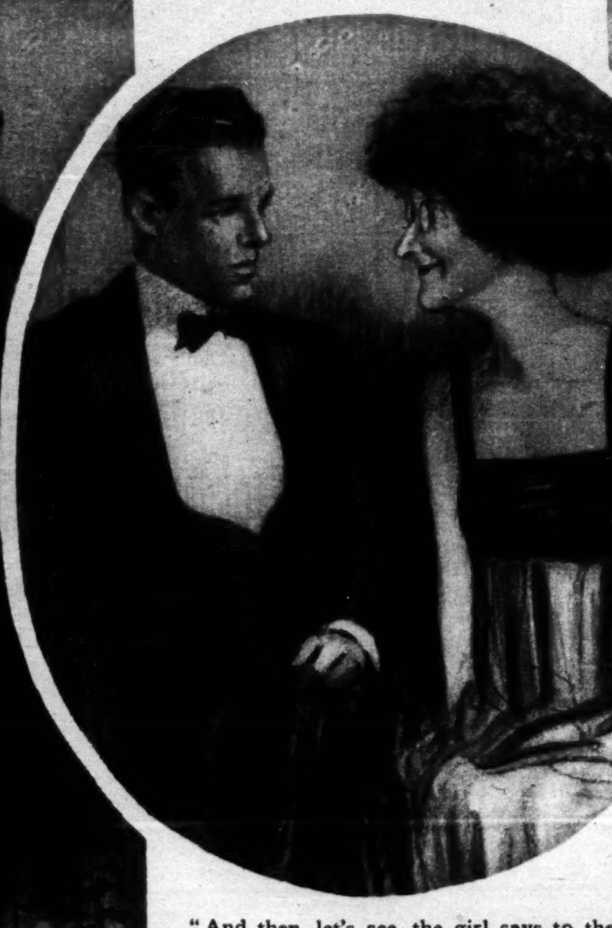
Moving picture star, making believe she's a great, great actress. She's getting away with it, too. See her in the role of a society debutante licking her lips and registering distaste for the hollow social game. How she longs for the wild, free northwest and the mounted police! A great big mounted policeman who will win her respect by choking her. Wait till the next reel and you'll see it all.



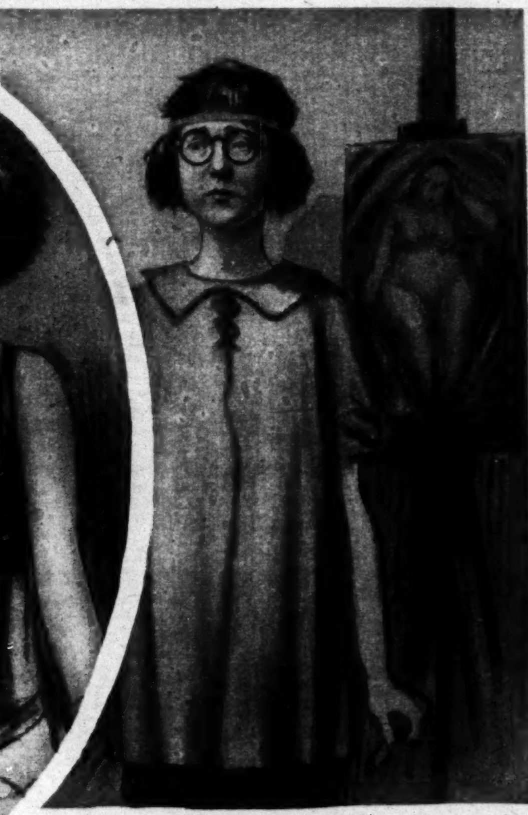
The boy in the center is pretending—not very successfully—that he's a hard guy who slouches and spits, but the unfeeling youth with the dead cigarette in his mouth has just stage whispered, "Oh, Clarence, kiss me, dear." Boy Number One, we fear, will be troubled with an inferiority complex for the rest of the day.



"What you ought to do is to go and say 'Eliza, neither Mr. Rodent nor myself can tolerate such waste in the kitchen!' The trouble with you women is you don't look at the servant problem squarely." So called master of the house making believe rule with a rod of iron. The little woman isn't saying much. She's heard it before and she isn't greatly interested.



"And then, let's see, the girl says to the other guy—no, I guess it wasn't the other guy after all; it was the man she threw over in the first act—she says, 'You can't torture my soul any longer,' or something like that, and then three of the soldiers come in and rescue her. Then in the next act it all turns out to be a dream and the man wakes up in a chair by the fire. You haven't seen it, have you?" At this point in our narrative the beautiful young lady, whose thoughts have been far, far away, will rouse herself and make a brave show of friendly interest and make believe she heard it all. She will probably say, "Yes, indeed, Fennimore, I think she sounds awfully nice. Bring her around some time."



The game of "Let's pretend" starts in childhood, but it's a great game for grownups, too. Take Jennie Belle, for instance. She's having such a good time making believe she's an artist in Greenwich Village.

At every turn we gazed about hopefully, remembering that the Pere Van Hoef, the father superior at the mission, had once suddenly seen and shot a gorilla in the branches of the tree just by his head, but no ape disclosed itself. The path, however, revealed interesting secrets. Here were antelope tracks; here was the sudden spring of a leopard, half dried in the sun. Suddenly it ceased to be a path and became a series of artesian wells. These were elephant tracks, bottomless pits, freshly made, with water still slipping into them.

They were difficult to negotiate if one tried to step across and balance on the mud ridge between, but we clung to the bushes at the side and got on. Finally the tracks crossed off to the left, where we saw tusk marks on a tree trunk.

It made me remember poignantly that the large gun was at the mission. Herbert and I were each carrying a Springfield. We had nothing heavier for a charging elephant. I remembered it again, even more poignantly when a tiny sound held us motionless. It was a snapping and tearing of twigs.

The guide crept closer. His low breathed "Tembo" was almost inaudible in his anxiety not to be overheard. I stared hard at the bamboo screen, but it was impenetrable. I hadn't the faintest idea how far away that elephant was breakfasting, but I had no desire to find out.

We were then entering the bamboos, a forest of tall, slender stalks and delicate leaves, all netted and interwoven with vines. It was colder here, so gray that the sun seemed to be under a cloud. We pressed harder on the trail, trying to catch up with that gorilla, and suddenly came into a little clearing, sun-flooded, filled with delicious young growth, a heavenly place for a picture of a gorilla at breakfast.

No applicant appeared. Instead the spore vanished. We paused to let our guides munch some hard, berry like grain and smoke their black clay pipes, while we ate chocolate and crackers, then we urged them to fresh effort. But the trail was lost.

They led us out at last on one of the innumerable little ways that led out from the morass through the creeping vines, and on we went into ever dimmer and more impenetrable solitudes. Hanging vines hung down like tapestries and a network of them veiled the undergrowth. The guides hacked away with their sickles and we wormed our way along, often forced to crawl on all fours through some bad bits. This went on for hours. The guides had apparently given up all hope of gorilla, but were going to earn their franc by exercising us.

We kept on doggedly till at last, discouraged by our persistence, they united in calling it a day and began to slide down the ravine-like sides. We got back after seven hours, heartily tired, having accomplished nothing of the morning's hopes but the sight of that gorilla trail, yet we had spent a thoroughly fascinating day.

We had intended starting again on Monday, but a runner from Mr. Akeley changed our plans. He wrote that he was ill, that he had "broken something," so on Monday Herbert and Martha Miller, and I and sixty porters started up the mountain to his camp, leaving Alice and Priscilla Hall in the White Sisters' house. It was a great comfort to have them there, where the untiringly kind fathers did everything possible for them.

Mr. Akeley had written that we had better take two days for the trip, as only veterans might make it in one, but we felt decidedly veteranish by now, and his letter made us anxious, determined to get through at all cost. We had not gone more than three hours before we came up with the porters opening their loads with unusual alacrity; the cook was busy, spreading out his magnificent red mattress which constituted an entire porter's load.

This was in a damp glade on the mountainside, and the march we had made was not a day's work, so I—being ahead—told them to go on with all the vehemence and Swahili I possessed. "Pana mazuri hapa"—"Not good here"—was repeated vigorously until they got up and hoisted their loads upon their heads. They hadn't really hoped to "put it over"; the head men had been told at the mission they were to go all the way—but they considered it decidedly worth trying.

Later I was to hear that "Pana mazuri" flung back at me by half a hundred of them as they slipped and sloshed and scrambled up that mountain's sides.

We had thought we could go up in six hours. It took us nine. The last six hours were a steady, interminable climb, up through the forest, into the bamboos, through the bamboos into a higher forest again. The path was the same sort of mud chute that Herbert and I had met before, and we had to cling to the trees at the side for leverage.

I understood then why soldiers at the front threw away rations, water, ammunition. There were times when every step seemed literally the last possible effort. The altitude had its effect, of course, in conjunction with the continual pull. My ears did not ring, but they whistled with my breath. There were times, about the sixth hour, when we found cheer in song, peculiarly suitable song such as "There's a Long, Long Trail a-Winding," and "Smile, Smile, Smile," but after that our breath gave out and we saved it for such valuable speech as: "Rest here—we can take the day to it."

The end of the ninth hour we reached the camp, and found Mr. Akeley looking as if years instead of days had intervened. He was very worn, he had done the work of ten men under particularly trying conditions, he had killed his gorillas—a large male, two large females, and a two year old—all in most inaccessible places where the natives had balked at following; he had skinned and skeletoned and dissected without rest, and now energy and appetite had deserted him. What was broken, he said, was his vigor. We felt troubled when we first saw him, but a good dinner and an incentive toward appetite began to make him feel better.

The camp was high on Mikeno, the mountain's citadel-like crag above, a world of forest and valleys and mountains at its feet, with a blue gleam of Kivu in the distance. White clouds were all about, floating up the chasms and stealing among the trees. There was only a tiny clearing for the tents with the porters' huts of grass tucked in behind; the gorilla skeletons were hanging from poles in grisly sociability, while from the tent of Mr. Akeley hung a small, mummified figure, a skinned and dried two year old gorilla, whom we promptly christened "Clarence."

Beside his specimens Mr. Akeley had fulfilled the hope which had been only a dream of the expedition; he had already got some motion pictures of wild gorillas, a mother and two little ones, something that had never before been done.

The next day we spent quietly in camp. Wednesday we left our boy Kiani in charge of things there and started off to make camp higher up on the ridge between Mikeno and Karissimbi.

It was a two hours' climb and we camped in a glade full of flowers, wild carrot and buttercup, with a marsh before us, and then the forested side of Karissimbi. We were about 10,000 feet up.

Balmy as that glade was in the noonday sun, the night was a revelation of arctic chill. Our preparations for bed were elaborate, but even so, the temperature surprised us, and what it did to our scantily clad porters, huddling blanketless in grass huts about their smoky little fires, we could more than surmise from their conversation during the night and morning.

Actually it did not freeze. It was like northern Wisconsin in late October, when your breath hangs in a cold cloud in the air before you; at breakfast it was 46. We had no campfire, for the wood was wet and smoky, and we had only an iron bucket of wood coals to warm the tents.

Thursday we started out for more gorilla pictures which it was the hope to get before adding any other specimen to the group. The guides led us up the Karissimbi slopes—only slopes is too gentle a word—and we climbed and climbed.

We were in a fairy forest, trees gray with lichen and green with cushinoning moss, trees dripping with ferns and garlanded with vines. When the sun shone through that forest the moss gleamed in golden richness. There were trees with sharp, down-pointed leaves, a russet glow at the leaf stalk that hung like a jeweled filigree against the tropic blue of the sky. There were clouds of pink, orchid seeming flowers, that were not parasites, like orchids, but grew in silver green bushes, and everywhere were snowy reaches of wild carrot and wild parsley, and the familiar pungency of crushed catnip.

There are no words to describe that forest. Pictures can give but faint clues. It was a magic spot. Arthur Rackham has dreamed some of its moods, some of its wizard trees with long, curved arms, its crooked, outspread groves, like magicians in flight; but its color, its delicacy, the infinite fragility of its moods, the seduction of every line, the subtle revelation of its lights, are beyond dreams.

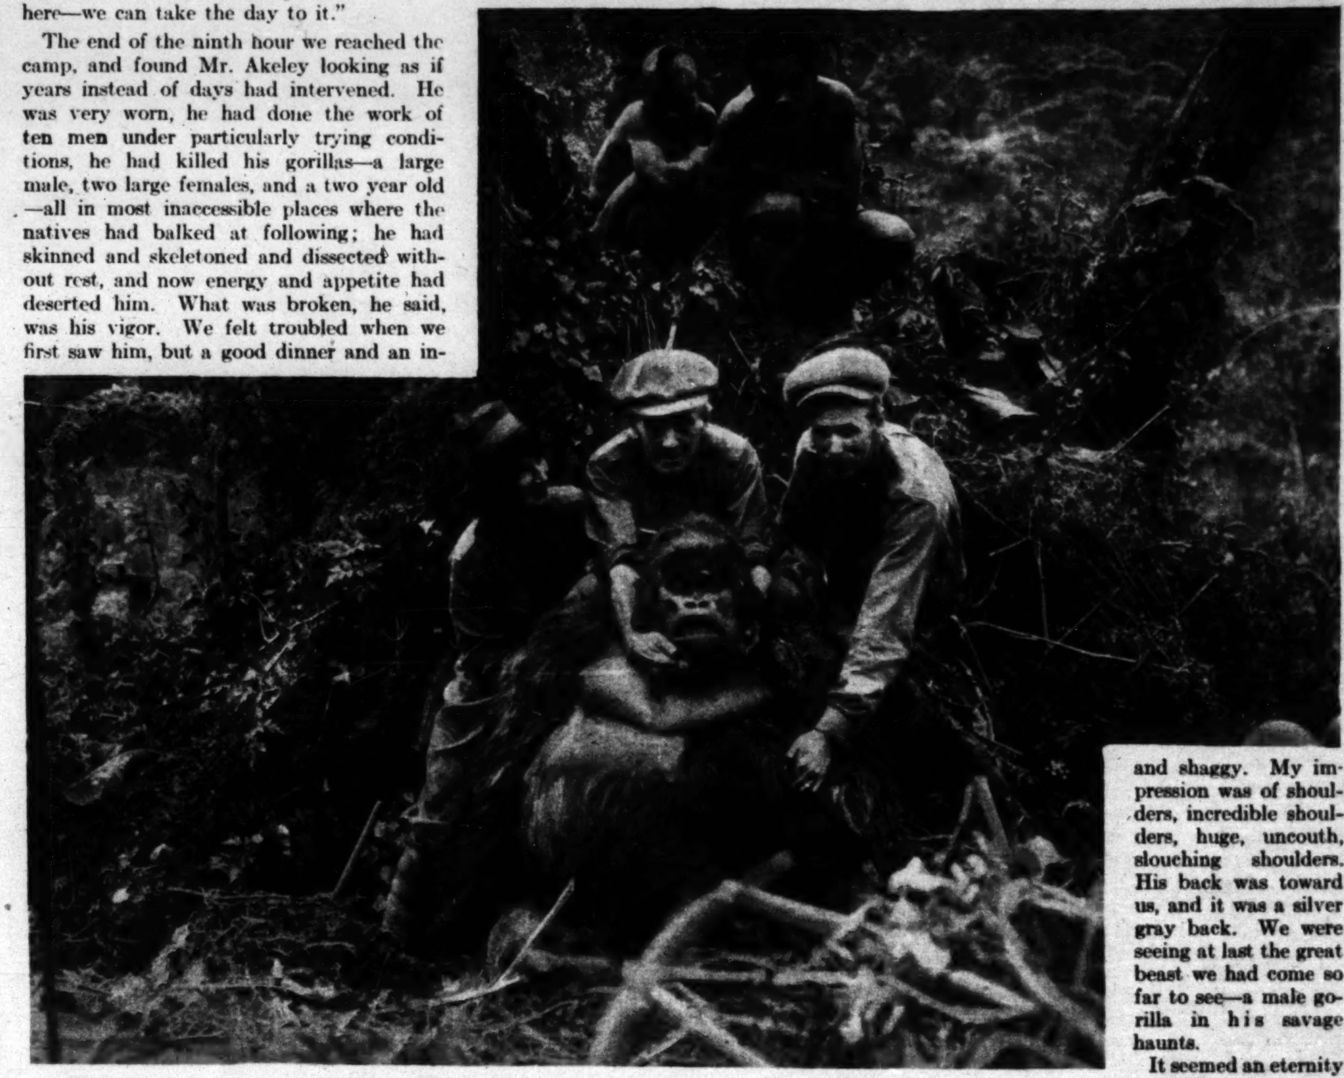
We found no gorilla that day. We found raspberries instead, enormously large and extremely green; and we found fresh traces of buffalo. The guides were eager about both.

Friday opened with glorious sunshine and an ultimatum from the guides. They were going. The cold nights prevailed over the passion for francs. They had enough now, anyway, for several wives and a long lifetime of ease. However, they were prevailed to wait one more day and we started forth in haste before they changed their minds.

This time we took another trail up the Karissimbi heights, with ever more and more glorious views as we climbed. At last Mr. Akeley halted. "This is the most beautiful place in the world and I am going to photograph it," he announced with a certain defiance, knowing the guides viewed any dallying with the cameras with distaste. They understood a gun; the camera was, to them, resultless.

But he did not. As he poised his machine the men pointed. On the slopes to the left the bushes were waving, giving a glimpse of something like a black bear.

Hurriedly we marshaled in line, and scrambled up the trail, then in and out the trees and bushes, Herbert and Mr. Akeley first, then Martha and I, our gun boys, though relieved of our guns, scrambling excitedly after us. We went under a hollow tree-feet first and emerged on the other side with a clear view of the slopes before us. There, on a low, slowly rising branch of a tree, like a log, was a gigantic creature, black and shaggy. My impression was of shoulders, incredible shoulders, huge, uncouth, slouching shoulders. His back was toward us, and it was a silver gray back. We were seeing at last the great beast we had come so far to see—a male gorilla in his savage haunts.



"He had been indeed the king of the African forests," this huge gorilla of Karissimbi. Left to right, Mary Hastings Bradley, Carl E. Akeley, and Herbert Bradley.

It seemed an eternity before my husband fired. I suppose it was only an instant or two. The crash of the gun sounded as unreal in the silence as the sight of the gorilla. Immediately the gorilla went crashing down into the welter of vegetation. We thought him dead and raced down towards him after Herbert, but in a few moments we found he had made off, leaving a trail of crushed greenery and blood. For a few moments the waving bushes gave us the only clue, then he emerged on the slopes above and looked back over his shaggy shoulder, as the gun crashed again, as if trying to comprehend this sudden assault upon his solitudes. I shall never forget the humanness of that black, backturned face.

Then he went plunging down the slope, passing near Herbert, who put in his finishing shot. The great body struck against a tree and lay still. There had been no sound from him, no bark, no roar. He had shown no instinct of fight; nothing but the rush of a wounded beast to escape.

We found him dead against the tree, face down, a huge, shaggy, primeval thing, like something summoned out of the vanished ages. And the scene in which he lay had a beauty like nothing earthly.

From that high place, whose forested slopes swept down, down, in a green flood, to the distant valleys and the blue sheen of Kivu, we looked out on the purple heights of Chaninagongo and Nyamlagira, crested with clouds that were golden with sun and rose with volcanic fires, and sharply silhouetted against that distant azure and amethyst stretched the superb slope of Mikeno,

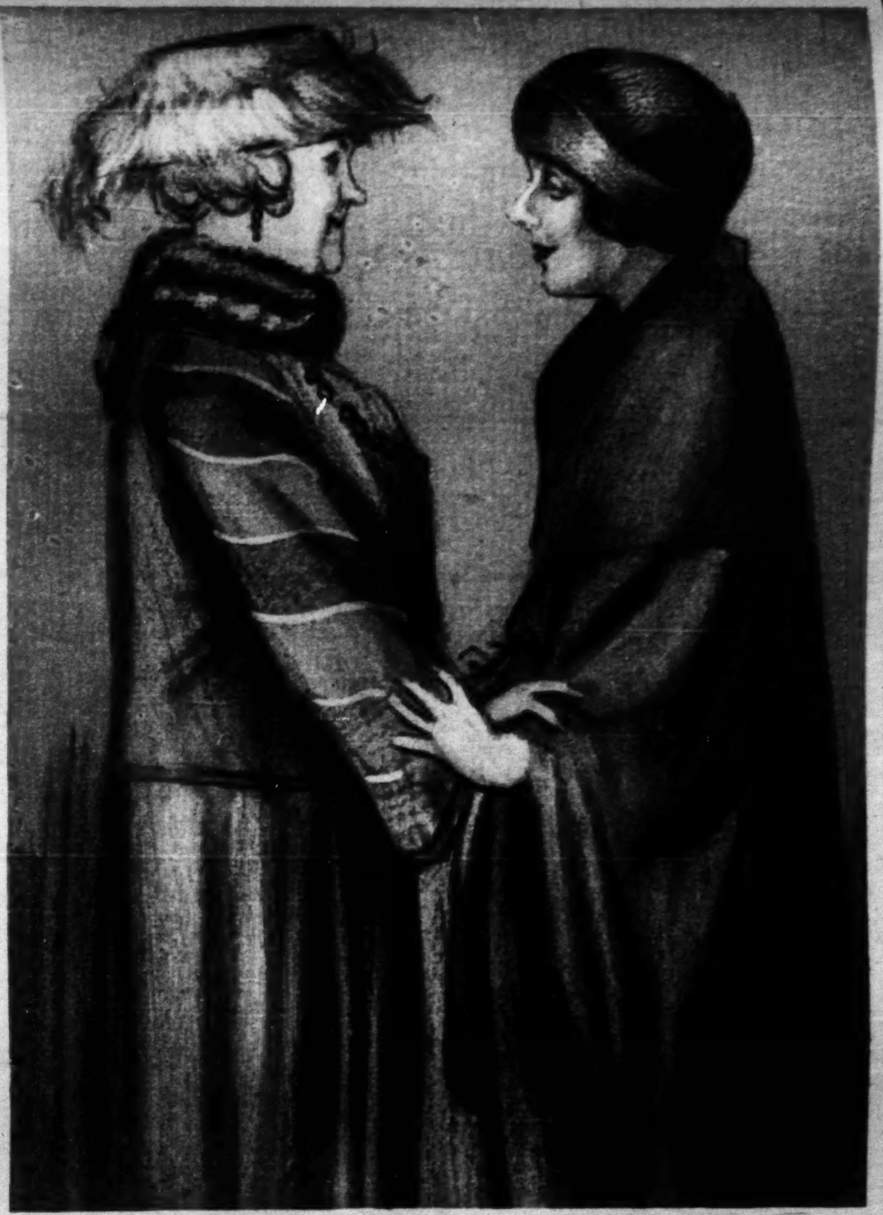
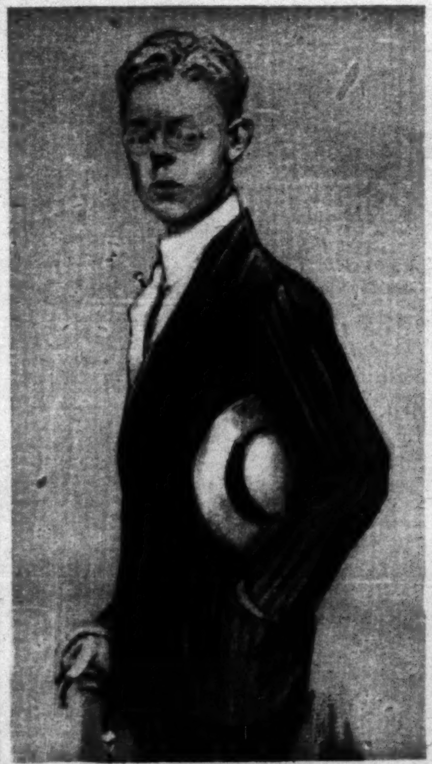
This is one of those apartment house interiors that pretends to be a lot of things it isn't. The imitation stone mantel would have you believe you are in a medieval chateau instead of Apartment 6B in the "Chatelaine Hall" apartment house.



"My dear, you've been in my mind all winter long, and I've been meaning to return your call, but you know how it is—first there was the Christmas shopping, and then Christmas and New Year with the children home, and then there was Lent, and it just does seem as though one never gets a chance to do the things one really wants to do!" Just two lovely, lovely women, making believe they are mad about each other.



"Say, you oughta been along! Art and I got seats in a box, and gee! I got one of the chorus girls so fussed she couldn't dance! Two other girls got winkin' and makin' signs at us to meet 'em after the show—good lookin' girls, too! Believe me, fella, before that show was over we had the whole comp'ny playin' to us!" Art, the chronic Y. M. C. A. hound, pretends he's an awful devil with the ladies. A regular young rascal, that's what he is! And maybe he isn't hard to please. Wasn't a single girl in last year's Ziegfeld "Follies," not a single girl Art would be seen with. No siree!

Gorillas at Last!

IT was Nov. 9 that my husband and I and Martha Miller and Priscilla Hall and little Alice and a string of 180 porters left our camp at Kissenyi and started on the three day march to the mission of the White Fathers on the slopes of Mikeno, from which Herbert and Martha and I expected to make our ascent after gorillas.

Mr. Akeley had left ten days before and was now encamped on the heights, from which he sent down reports and requests by runner. His descriptions of the conditions under which he had been able to see his gorillas were full of disheartening difficulties, but Martha and I refused to be discouraged. The fact remained that he had been able to see them and obtain some desired specimens for his group, so we were not going to be turned back by any tale of hardship now. And the reports which we obtained from Mr. Barns, who came down the eastern side of the mountains as Mr. Akeley went up the west, were more heartening. Mr. Barns passed within a day's journey of Kissenyi and Mr. Bradley and I went out to see him.

He had shot three gorillas for his group, a male, a female, and a young one. They were beautiful skins, the female and youngster black and shaggy like bears and the male with the distinguishing silver haired back. The male stood five feet, five and a half inches high, measuring seven feet, six and a half inches from the ground to the finger tip. From finger to finger he measured seven feet, five and a half inches and the chest was fifty-seven inches.

Mr. Barns had come up to this old male in an open space on a ravine edge, and the gorilla had started toward him, roaring and beating his breast. I asked Mr. Barns if he considered this a charge and he said he couldn't say—the beast might have been acting from surprise or alarm and trying to intimidate him. But he certainly started toward him.

Then he stumbled, for his progress on his hind legs was unstable in his excitement, and fell down the cliff-like ravine. The fall knocked the fight out of him. Mr. Barns went down the ravine after him and followed through the jungle for an hour and a half before coming up with him. Then he killed him with a single shot.

The perfection of the modern weapon does not give the gorilla the chance he had in the old muzzle loading days. In almost every story I had been able to hear of recent hunting, the gorilla had been taken by surprise and shot at once. If wounded he would naturally turn on his attacker; whether he would charge on sight, if unattacked, was something we did not know.

Mr. Akeley had believed he would not. My husband and I had no pretensions to a conviction of any sort, but we were going to try for enlightening experience. If we could possibly achieve it we meant to meet a gorilla on his native heath and give him a chance to see what he would do about it.

The morning of the third day our safari reached Lulenga mission, where the White Fathers received us most hospitably, and installed us in a house waiting the advent of the White Sisters; a long mud house, whitewashed, with thatched roof, among roses on the mountain slopes, a short distance from the mission.

Before us stretched a marvelous view of the Rift valley—green hills reaching down to wide spreading lava fields from which rose the small craters and cones of the valley floor, and across from us the shadowy slopes of the mountains that guarded the west. South of them rose the beautiful outlines of Nyamlagira and Chaninagongo, above whose craters hung a ruddy smoke. Chaninagongo smokes rather lazily, but Nyamlagira has been steadily active since its last eruption seven years ago, and at night the glow from that crater was a flame in the sky.

The Mission of the White Fathers at Lulenga, at the Foot of Mt. Mikeno.

Lulenga mission has been the lodestar of gorilla seekers ever since the discovery of true gorillas in the heart of equatorial Africa. Gorillas had always been associated with low west coast jungles of the Gaboon, but twenty years ago an Englishman, Quentin Grogan, on his famous two year walk from the cape to Cairo, found the skeleton of a true gorilla in the equatorial mountains.

Later, occasional rumors of great apes up in the bamboos were carried by the natives to the white men, but the apes were supposed to be the chimpanzees, whose presence was already known.

Then about thirteen years ago a German, Grauer, passed through Nairobi with some gorilla skins he had obtained in the mountains of what was then the western edge of German East Africa. The first gorilla of which the mission had any record was that shot by Count Pauwels in the commencement of 1913. At the end of 1913 the Count Arhenius made a successful hunt in the bamboos and he returned with Prince William of Sweden on an expedition which was just leaving the Congo as we came into it. When we were in London in August we had heard that the prince was dangerously ill with fever.

He had made his camp at the mission and shot his first gorilla here in the forest just an hour from the camp. The other members of his party, even the soldiers, had killed others, so altogether fourteen were slaughtered.

There were moments when we wondered anxiously if there were any gorillas left for us, anything but lone widows and undergrown youths! Of course a gorilla was a gorilla, but it was the grown male who has given the legend of ferocity to his race. I had brought with me Du Chaillu's description of his first sight of one:

"The underbrush swayed slightly just ahead, and presently before us stood an immense male gorilla. He had gone through the jungle on all fours; but when he saw our party he erected himself and looked us boldly in the face. He stood about a dozen yards from us and was a sight I think never to forget. Nearly six feet high (he proved two inches shorter), with immense body, huge chest, and great muscular arms, with fiercely glaring, large, deep gray eyes, and a hellish expression of face, which seemed to me like some nightmare vision; thus stood before us the king of the African forests. . . . .

"His eyes began to flash a fiercer fire as we stood motionless on the defensive, and the crest of short hair which stands on his forehead began to twitch rapidly up and down, while his powerful fangs were shown as he again sent forth a thunderous roar. And now, truly, he reminded me of nothing but some hellish dream creature—a being of that hideous order, half man, half beast, which we find pictured by old artists in some representations of the infernal regions.'

In the hope of meeting the gentleman of this description Herbert and I started off up the mountain at 6 o'clock the morning after our arrival at the mission. It was a lovely morning, sweet and fresh with that feeling of spring that mornings have in Africa. We were mounted on a mule and donkey belonging to the White Fathers, with guides running ahead and boys coming after with guns and water bottle and camera. We rode nearly an hour up the steep foot hills of Mikeno.

Back of us the brown roofs of the mission grew smaller and smaller, the waving fronds of the banana plantations merged into a sea of green darker and more glistening than the tender green of the fresh grass about them. The great plain of lava on the valley floor stretched wider and wider as we mounted higher, and across it the miles and miles of mountain peaks were blue against the sky. Ahead of us the sharp, craggy summit of Mikeno stood out in bold relief, with glistening clouds floating below it, shining in the first sunlight. It was a stiff climb and our hearts ached for the puffing mules struggling up the slippery narrow path of mud, but we let our hearts ache and conserved our legs.

At 7 we were in the edge of the forest, and started on foot up a narrow path, tilted at a violent incline, a path like a greased chute of mud. It may have been a rush of water after a heavy rain, but now the mud was a smooth spread, sometimes a slippery smear over rocks, sometimes a slough of incredible depth.

The trees shut us in, the vines netted us like basket work. The guides climbed ahead, my husband after, his gunbearer behind, then I followed with my gun boy behind me. We kept our eyes sharply on the path and suddenly I saw in it a print, perfect in the soft mud.

It was a hand print, the fingers doubled under, showing the marks of four knuckles and a thumb. A little ahead were the outspread toe prints where Herbert and the guides were pausing as I saw the hand marks.

They were gorilla prints, freshly made. The guide declared them "kubwa, kubwa"—"big, big!" which was stirring. The gorilla had been walking along the path, helping himself by his low hanging fists. He avoided the deep mud, keeping to one side of the chute where the ground was what I should call mushy, but mere mush had no terrors for him.

We followed with a feeling of tremendous exhilaration. It was the actual mark of the great beast we had come so far to see; he was there somewhere ahead of us, hid in a turning of the green thicket—any moment a parting of the leaves might show us that black, twitching face and sparkling eyes.

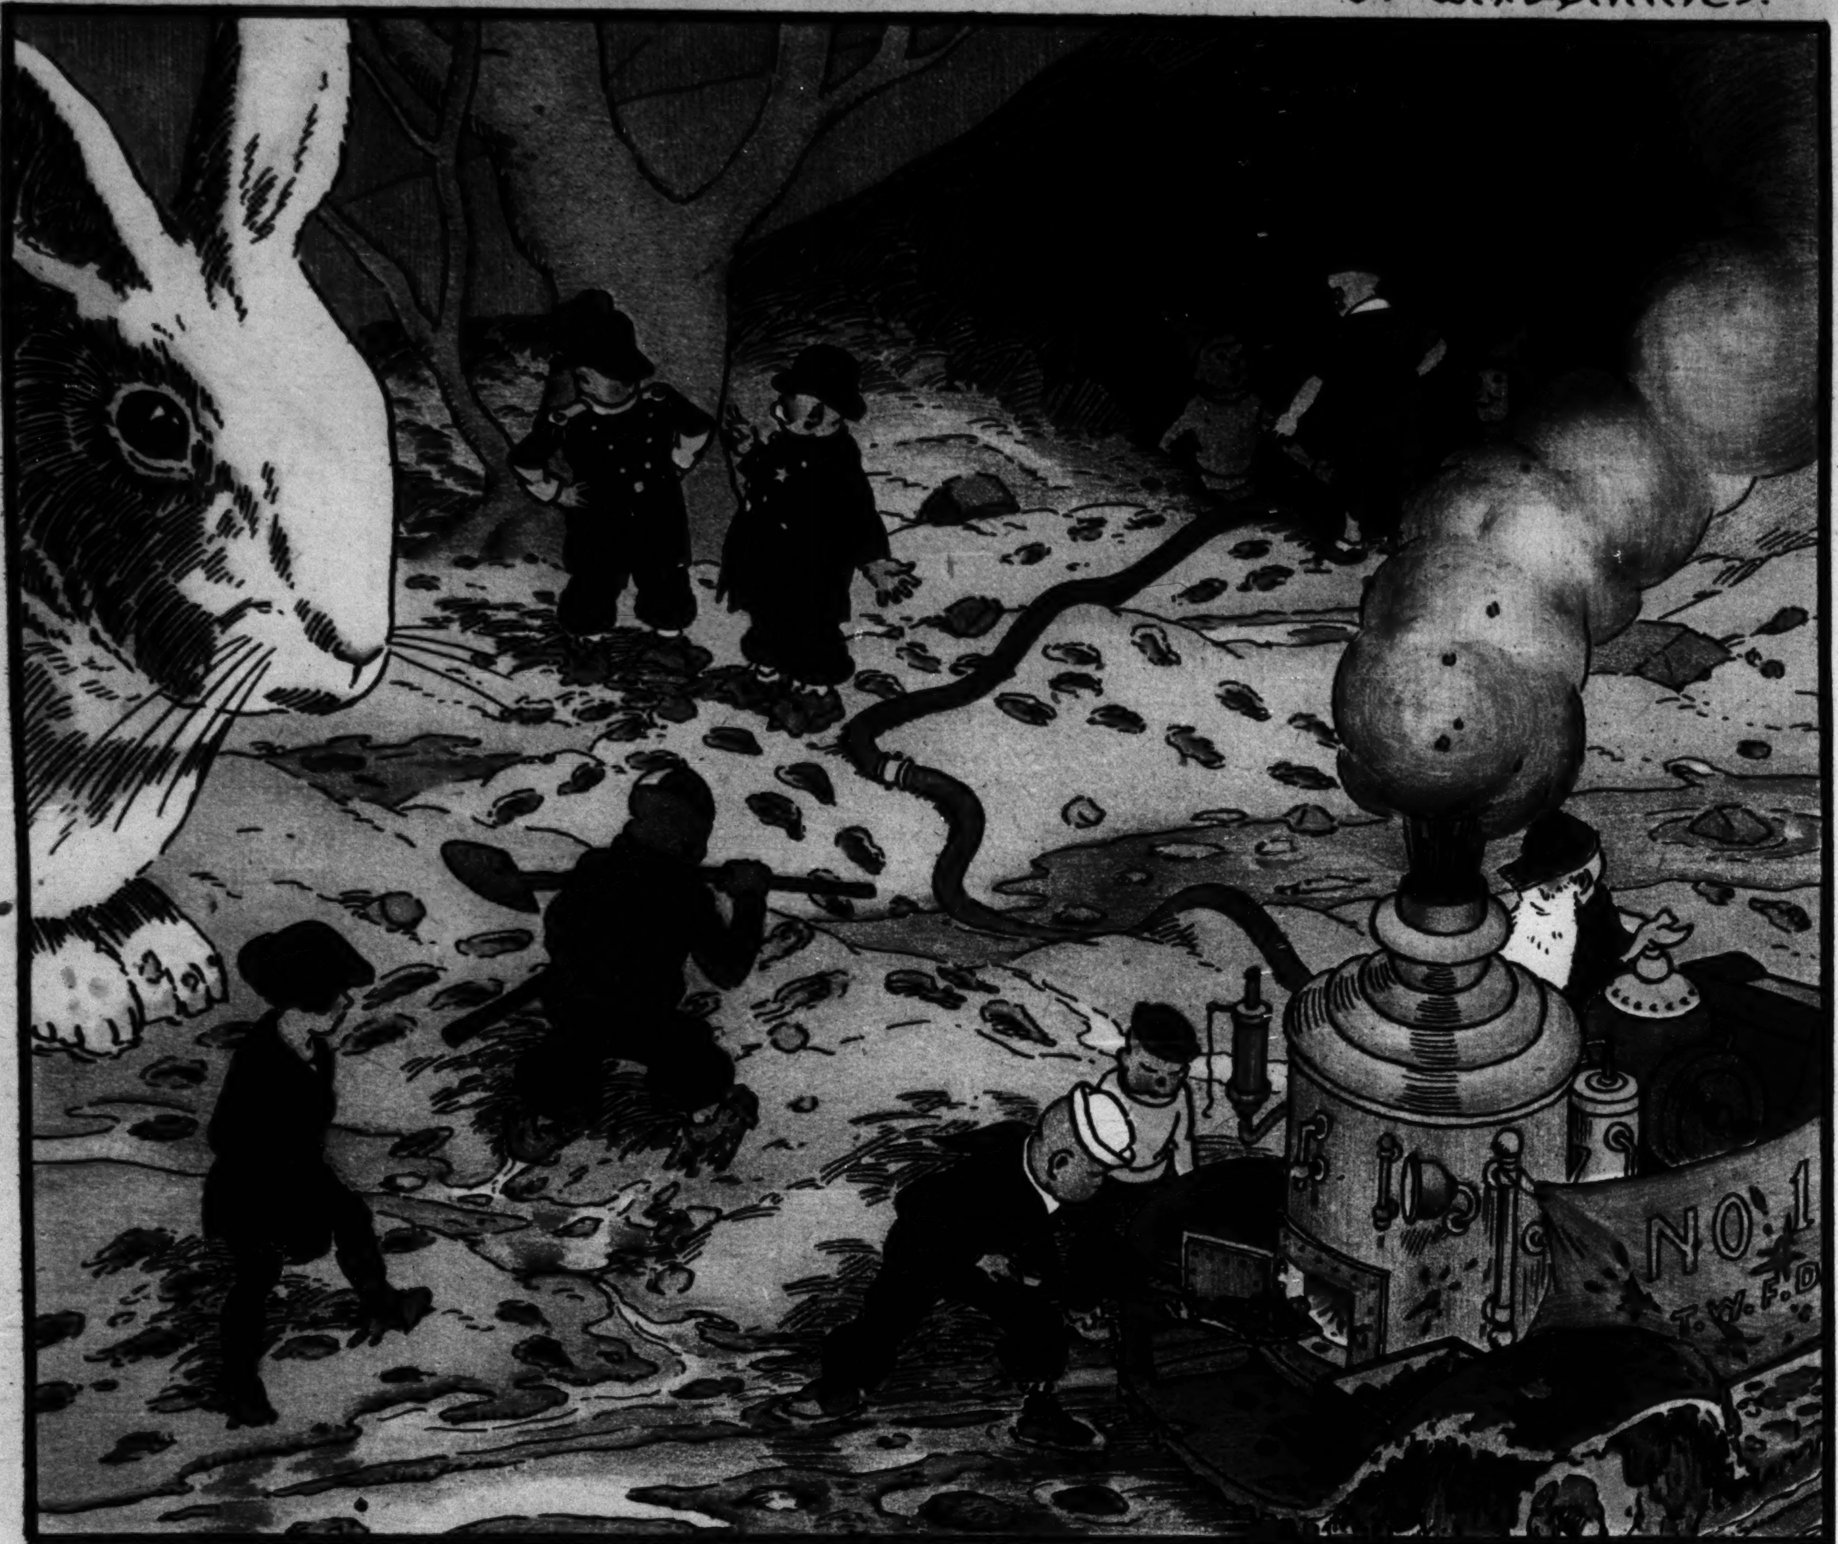
We ordered the camera boy to keep close and we kept the gun boys extremely close. We had been cautioned not to trust our guns to carriers who were not gun boys in any sense of the word, and were quite likely to cast the guns away and run at a critical moment. However, the climbing was much too hard to do with a gun in your hands, and we took our chances.

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

IT RAINED AND RAINED AND RAINED.

BY WM. DONAHEY.



FOR two days it had rained and rained. The big drops splashed upon the roofs of the tiny houses under the rose bush with a continuous roar. The little folks were forced to stay indoors, for no Teenie Weenie could keep his footing under the force of the great raindrops. The little people were most cheerful, under the circumstances, and they spent their time playing games, sleeping, and eating.

"It doesn't do a bit of good to complain about the weather," said the General when the Dunce growled because the rain kept him in the house. "When the rain comes there is nothing to do but make the best of it, for all the complaining in the world wouldn't make it stop."

"Yes, sir, that's right," put in Grandpa. "There's no use complaining 'bout anything except maybe the rheumatism—seems as though it helped a little to complain over that."

"Or the toothache," suggested the Clown.

"No, don't do any good to complain over the toothache," answered the old gentleman, looking over the top of his tiny glasses.

"Why not?" asked the Clown.

"Well, you can have the tooth pulled and stop the achin', but you can't have the rheumatism pulled; if you could I'd have had my rheumatism yanked out a long time ago."

All night the rain came down, but early the next morning it stopped and soon the sun came out. Great puddles, or rather lakes, of water stood all about the ground, and the little folks splashed around in them with much pleasure. Presently Tilly Titter, the English sparrow, flew down in front of the shoehouse and the little folks gathered around to hear the news, for Tilly was as good as a newspaper.

"'Eard about the Rhymin' Rabbit?" asked Tilly, looking about at the Teenie Weenies.

"No. What has happened to him? Is he sick?" asked the Old Soldier.

"No, 'e's drownded out of 'is 'ome. 'Is 'ole is all flooded with water and 'e's mighty blue about it," answered Tilly.

The Rhyming Rabbit only lived a little ways from the shoehouse, and, being a neighbor, the Teenie Weenies thought it their duty to call on the old fellow and offer their help. Several of the little folks made their way through the thick mud to the rabbit's hole, where they found the poor old chap sitting by his flooded home.

"We've come over to see if we could help you," said the General, kindly, sweeping off his plumed hat and making a beautiful bow.

"My friends, your kindness touches me,
But what you'll do I cannot see,
For quarts of water fill my hole
And many tears have drenched my soul"— said the rabbit, who always spoke in rhyme.

"My word," thought the Dunce, "that's the wettest rabbit I ever saw!"

"I think we could pump the water out with the fire engine," said the Old Soldier, who had been looking into the hole.

"After much discussion it was decided to bring up the Teenie Weenie fire engine and pump out the flooded hole. It was quite a task to get the tiny fire engine near enough, for the rabbit's hole was on the side of a steep bank and the slippery mud made the little engine skid dangerously.

The little men put a line of hose into the hole and when it had been attached to the engine they began to pump. The Teenie Weenies worked almost all day, and when the hole had been pumped dry the Old Soldier figured that they had removed nearly a gallon of water from the flooded hole.

"Maybe we had better pump out Mr. Rabbit's soul," said the Dunce when the hole had been finished. "He said that his soul was drenched."

"Sh!" whispered the General. "Do you want to make the rabbit angry?"

But the rabbit was much too happy to be angry, now that his home was free of water, and he thanked the Teenie Weenies in his very prettiest rabbit manner.

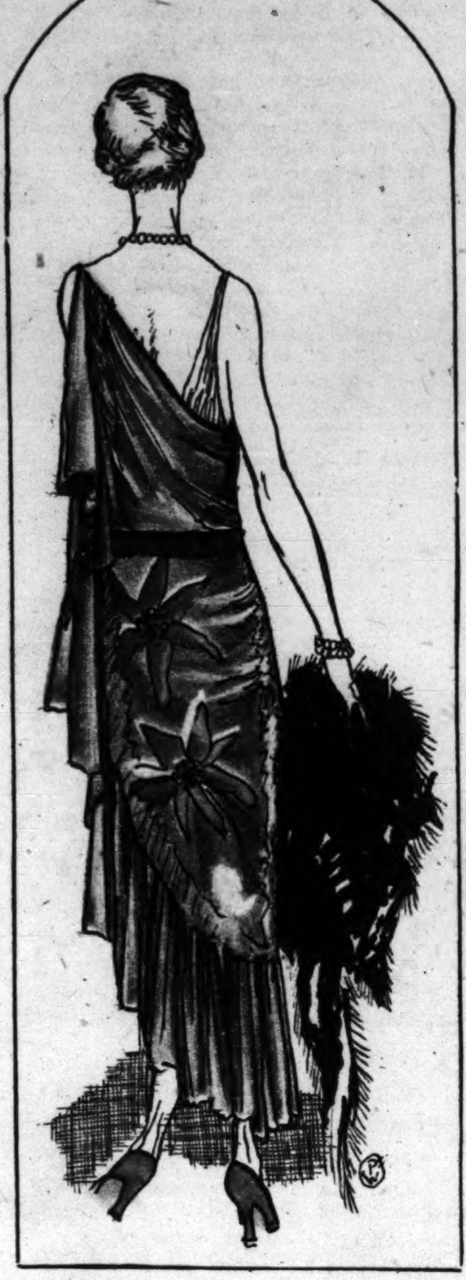
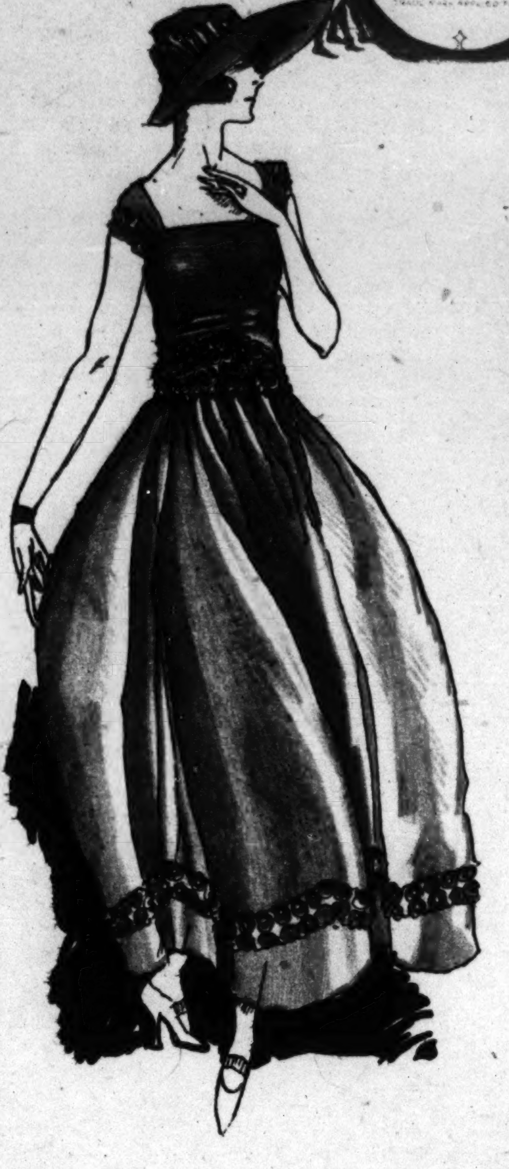
The Last Word in Paris Fashions

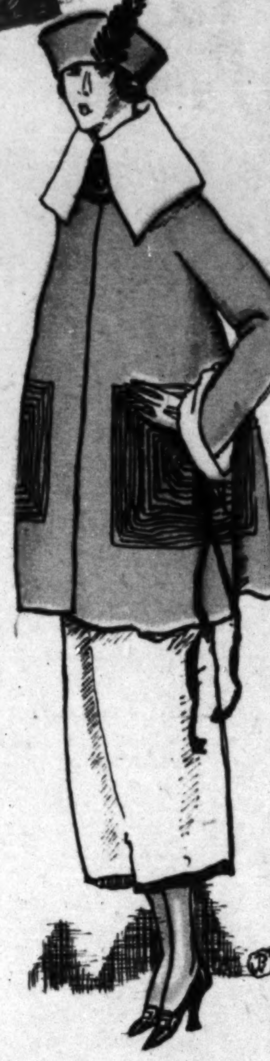
BLUE RIBBON FASHIONS



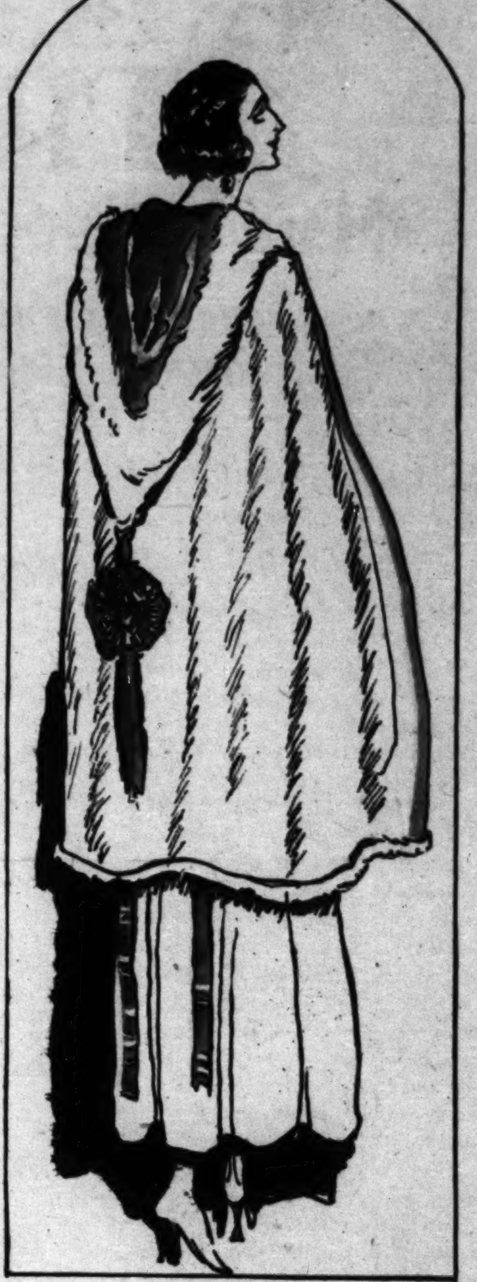
Gown of green tulle embroidery in ruby red flowers.



Pink organdie frock over pink satin; worn with poke bonnet.



Mustard colored coat with squares of satin cire ribbon.



Wrap of white satin with pink lined hood.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—Lady Ribblesdale, who was Mrs. Astor, came down the steps of the Ritz coffee room looking pale and frail and lovely, with just two spots of rouge burning high on her cheeks. She wore bright green, and carried a stole of zibeline over her arm, and her daughter, Miss Astor, walked beside her, dressed in bright red. Lady Ribblesdale looked dignified and frail.

Standing demurely over in another part of the room was Peggy Joyce, a delicate little piece of bric-a-brac with her soft hair arranged simply with puffs over the ears. She wore a white satin gown cut into the conventional deep V shape, and then beneath the apex of that V was another little round spot cut out—a wicked little spot, that. White satin isn't enough to say in description of that material. It was the heaviest of wedding satin, made heavier still with embroidery of diamonds. It looked as if it would weigh that little body to the earth. The famous pearls, worth a ransom, hung round her neck.

Two representatives, these, of our American commonwealth, taken, you might say, at random and from spheres far removed from each other. I thought as I looked at them that we could certainly get up an aristocracy of our own, for there were none more patrician to look at.

"But who," I found myself questioning, "would constitute our commoners?" Judging from examples shown in Europe, our women would all be in the class of the aristocracy.

Lady Ribblesdale's dress was of green tulle over crepe de chine. This latter is extremely chic material for foundations. The dress was much in the silhouette of those that used to consist of yards of satin wrapped round you. At least it was as slinky as they, and curved in below the knees. The dress was held on one shoulder by a point of tulle passing over it. On the other the material mounted into a point. From this height a green frill of the material fell down the left side, following the outline of the gown round the bottom, making a ruffle in place of a hem. Flowers in ruby red, like the rouged spots in her cheeks, garnished the dress fore and aft. They were embroidered in beads.

The Spanish movement is still strong, and many manifestations of it appeared at the Ritz dinner. She whom we used to call Mrs. Alphabet Pratt in New York—the name in full being Mrs. Alexander Dallon Bache Pratt—wore a dress consisting of a series of fringes, with a trick shawl movement, embroidered in brilliant colors, and looping like a jumping rope down the back of her skirt. Rather than shawls as such, I think it is more the thing now to have imitations of them incorporated as a part of the garnishment of the dress.

Hair arrangements still incline to the Spanish. She wore a black lace headdress, which fell over one eye, and mounted over a high backed Spanish comb. The back of her coiffure was banked in flowers in the crude colors of a village garden. She looked much in style.

One of the signs of the time is disclosed in the second model. We are headed toward fitted basques if the makers of fashions have their way. This dress is in organdie, the material for this summer, and it is over pink satin, depending in part for its chic on the precise rows of little pink flowers, that would appear to be embroidered over buttons, and stand with military precision in rows of two round the border of the skirt and the little bands of sleeves. Sleeves, by the way, have recovered entirely from their strange malady, and have shrunk from their fevered, swollen state into something subnormal. These little rows of button flowers run four deep round the ceinture, which ascends in a point in front. Kindly note, also, that the belt is at the waistline, and make your own deductions. The poke bonnet is in the manner of the day. Lanvin is the author of both, and it is appearing in the successful production of La Bouche.

The third offering is a jaunty little coat of mustard colored cloth with collar and cuffs of white linen, held in place—or not held in place, as you ought to put it when describing most French clothes—with one huge black button at the throat. The outline isn't what you would call exactly new; that is to say, it is one of the accepted silhouettes for coats. But the thing that proclaims it to be of a recent vintage is the square of trimming, like a Greek design, and made all of narrow, shimmery satin cire ribbon, that glistens like sunlight on water, when the body moves.

The hat is of mustard color, too, and is garnished with a little trick feather. That is to say, it is not a feather at all, but merely an imitation one made of the same satin cire ribbon as the squares, and it stands up in front like Macaroni's. The ribbons that hang from the sleeves are the ends of the black ribbon that ties the cuffs of the black crêpe blouse.

The wrap shown in the fourth sketch is beautiful. It is of white satin—again, heavy wedding dress satin, like Peggy Joyce's dinner dress—edged with a band of ermine (or rabbit—but what do you care, so it is good looking and approximately clean?). The cape is trimmed with a capuchon, or hood, like a monk's, except that he does not carry the Japanese tassel at the end of his, and it, suspended from that round figure like an American dollar, is the feature of this mantle. I am seeing it on less pretentious wraps than this one, and I think it originated with the Chinese. It has appeared in scarlet on black capes.

The cape up for observation is lined with cyclamen pink—the fashionable summer color. So is the hood, and the circle as well as the tassel are of the same shade. When I saw this cape it was being worn with a white crepe dress, but it is to throw on of hot summer evenings.

Of all the offerings, I should not be surprised if the second carried the surest message of the styles to come. The fitted basque and that hat going back to the directoire period seem to carry a significance which I should call not much less than ominous, for they presage a future style which, to my mind, is far less pretty than the one we now enjoy.

Fashions Beauty Contests

Simplicity the Keynote of Children's Fashion

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—If the Pied Piper of Hamelin won his chief recruits among Central Park East, what should we see? What kind of clothes would be worn by the tiny heiresses who mingled with the children of the less prosperous in the long procession summoned by those magic notes of the flute? The answer to this reflects once and for all upon the difference in sentiment between those who design for the children of Central Park and those who design for the children of the Paris Bois.

Simplicity. This is the abstract word covering the juvenile fashions which reign in our metropolis. By and by little Miss Van Muffet may be brought out in society at a cost of $50,000 or $60,000. But no hint of this later extravagance is allowed to intrude upon her game of ball or of hide and seek. You will find her now wearing the plainest of little wash frocks, accompanied by a cape or coat of serge or tweed. With this she is likely to show a blue Milan straw encircled by field flowers. If she were rolling her hoop down Main street instead of there at the hallowed 76th street entrance of the park she would probably be dressed more fussily.

A sight of the children of the New York wealthy overthrows, in fact, once and for all the idea that we have borrowed from the French any ideas of the French designer. Perhaps at a party or a matinee little Miss Van Muffet may come out of her chrysalis of wash frock and tweed cape. Then she may wear a little crepe or net frock with some charming touch of originality in handwork. She may accompany this garb with a taffeta coat matched by its bonnet, but even here the overelaboration distinguishing little Madamoiselle de Crumpet, her sister of the Paris park, is carefully avoided.

Yet, in spite of the simplicity controlling the choice of the small girl's wardrobe, we have progressed far from those old days when every child was a serf to navy blue and plaids. Look at the wraps, for example, worn by the children in Central park, and you can see how broad are the excursions in color. Lavender, a tint which no nice child used to wear back in the eighties and nineties, makes some of the most delightful of the hooded tweed capes now so fashionable. Green is another favored tint for juvenile wrap and frock. And, as for yellow, a volume might be written on the "greenery, yallery" child of today. Aside, too, from color we encounter in the variety of handwork and trimming many avenues of retreat from the stereotyped modes of several decades ago.

One of the outstanding features of spring fashions for the small girl is the prevalence of the sleeveless frock. This is found chiefly in those charming little models for the girl of from 2 to 8 which hang straight from shoulder to hem without a belt. These unbelted frocks we borrowed from the French designer, and they are now almost universally accepted for the girl between these ages. Last year we made these dresses with sleeves, but just now the sleeveless frock is the cry of the hour. Sometimes you find the sleeve understudied by a deep ruffle following the neck line and dipping down over the small arm. But even this is not regarded with as enthusiastic a favor as that which envelops the model with no hint of arm covering.

Right here, however, let me say that these berthas are utilized on many of the most charming juvenile creations. This pertains not only to frocks but to the more elaborate models of coats. Thus the two small daughters of Mrs. Jay Gould made their appearance on the avenue on Easter Sunday in pink taffeta coats with cape collars of real lace accompanied by poke bonnets of the same material trimmed also in lace.

A frock of the type which I have just mentioned is found on the page second from the left. Although here we present it with a tiny sleeve, the same dress is preferably carried out without this addendum. In either case the material is a porcelain blue organdy with sprigs of embroidered flowers in yellow and pink. The collar and cuffs are of plaited white organdy.

Still another illustration of the sleeveless mode is illustrated at the left in a suit which may be worn either by the small boy or his sister. This is constructed of buff linen with gay cherry colored linen outlining tunic and bloomers and doing further service in the form of cherry design appliqued with a buttonhole stitch. Such appliques of contrasting material are found again and again, and among their most charming exemplifications is one borrowed from the French designer. This consists of appliques of vivid cretonne flowers on the white net party frock, and it is shown by several of the most fashionable of children's shops.

Speaking of materials, it is interesting to note that many of the wash frocks which peep out from the tweed or serge wraps of the tiny heiresses in Central park are of dimity. These dresses occur in the pastel shades, and they are usually as plain as you are justified in expecting from the profound study dedicated to the subject, "How Not to Trim." When a contrasting material is used, white organdy is the first choice, and one charming bloomer type of dress noted recently on a small girl who can look forward to a yacht and Newport future was finished with plaited vestee of white organdy combined with cuffs and Peter Pan collar of the same fabric unplaited.

"LOOK at the birdie!" How can we follow this venerable command when she who feeds the birdie is wearing a buff linen costume trimmed with bands and cherries of red linen accompanied by hat to match? Nor can the little dress of porcelain blue, with its embroidered sprigs of yellow and pink, which is encountered next, do much to lessen the concentration. This model is trimmed with plaited collar and cuffs of white organdy, a trimming which appears also in the picoted points on the following frock, one of blue and white checked gingham. Next, an orange cotton crepe is combined with cream color crepe hand embroidered in orange. Following this, old blue dotted Swiss is buttonholed with rose tint and tied at the sides with rose ribbons. Next, a novelty striped material in yellow and orange is combined with yellow, plain, and, following this, another striped material consorts with another plain material. The last is a party frock for the girl of from 12 to 14, carried out in rose taffeta, with self flowers for girdle.

COMFORT AND ECONOMY IN SUMMER SUIT.

By A. T. Gallico.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The time is rapidly approaching when the comfort of the ordinary business man becomes dependent upon his own esthetic sense and the temper of the women in his office. That is to say, the average uninformed man will either resort to shirt sleeves in the hot weather and view with alarm his growing laundry bill or he will keep on his coat and suffer. But there is really no call for either, and especially not in this advanced clothing era.

Formerly, to suggest to a man that he invest in a lightweight summer suit invariably, if he were conservative, brought forth the criticism that it was difficult to find in stores patronized by average pocketbooks lightweight suits in the style and cut of their regular heavyweight clothes. Today this is no longer the case. More men than ever are wearing tropical suits because they have found that models practically identical to their winter and spring wear, but in lightweight materials, may be submitted in the hot summer months.

One of the reasons for recommending the investment in one or more of these tropical suits, although not as potent as the comfort derived, is the economy. For any kind of lightweight suit is cheaper than the average heavier worsteds of sack suits, and although one would have to buy two, at least, in order to have one always fresh, the saving on the heavy suits, the elimination of two or three months' wear and tear, more than makes up for the extra expense in the long run. And, besides, a tropical suit should last for several seasons, as all the materials used wear extremely well if they are of good quality.

There are many cloths used in making up summer suits—gabardines, cashmeres, tropical worsteds, mohairs, Palm Beach, linen, shantung, etc. They are all cool because of their light weight and because the heat of the body more easily passes through them than through heavier materials.

Although gabardine is extremely smart, it is correspondingly expensive in the better qualities. And the inferior grades do not hold their shape well. In fact, no gabardine is practical for trousers, because it does not keep the press at all well and becomes too quickly shiny. Gabardine is best used for separate coats to be worn with white flannels or knickers in the country and for sport wear. Otherwise it is a luxury.

Probably the most popular summer suit with the carefully dressed and conservative business men is the tropical worsted, which is an extremely light weight worsted coming in colors and patterns just like the heavy worsteds. Light colors predominate, as they seem more summery, but dark blue and gray are also extremely popular. A good tropical worsted wears indefinitely and holds the press excellently. They have the advantage of being cool and yet keeping their shape and avoiding too negligee an appearance which many business men dislike. Many are sold in two piece suits, but it is possible to get either three pieces—coat, trousers and knickers—or three pieces with a vest. A vest with a summer suit is not necessary if the coat is kept buttoned, but the well dressed man always wears a waistcoat, although he often substitutes for the same material as the coat a natural linen vest, which is proper to be worn with any suit.

The worsted suits are preferred as a rule by young men of conservative tastes to the Palm Beach and mohair suits. The mohair is distinctly a comfort suit, and is seen more on older men, with the exception of certain rather jazzy models with high and tight waist lines. Mohairs come in all colors, the most popular, perhaps, being dark blue or black, many with a small stripe. They come mostly in two pieces and, like all summer suits, are just skeleton lined, the sleeves sometimes having a silk lining.

The tendency of tropical suits for city wear is towards the plain sack coats similar to cool weather clothes. The lines are fuller, however, as a loose coat is much cooler than one which conforms too closely to the shape of the body. There are but few double breasted models, as they are less cool, due to the extra material over the chest, and besides they do not fit well in these light weight goods.

The least expensive summer suit is that of Palm Beach cloth. Such come in all shades of grays and tans—tobacco color, natural, sand, brown, etc. The Palm Beach suits are usually made in fancier, sportier models. The most conservative dressers do not wear them for business, but many young men and even middle aged ones who seek a little freedom from conventionality in the summer take favorably to them. They are made with belted backs, plaits, some with yolks, patch pockets, and are mostly two buttoned. In spite of the fancy backs there is no extreme effect to these suits, for the lines are not tight or high waisted. They are merely a copy of the sport coats worn in the country for golf, etc., and are not inappropriate for hot weather in the city.

Style Keynote for Children Is Simplicity

Gingham, of course, has renounced none of its previous authority, and it makes some of the most delightful play frocks for the small girl. A model of this material is shown third from the left in a blue and white checked pattern with small picoted points of white organdy finishing the roll collar, sleeves, pockets, and hem. Points and scallops are, by the way, details not to be overlooked in the development of your daughter's wardrobe, for they occur in both the play and party models. For example, a delightful little frock of pale rose organdy designed for the flower girl of seven or eight has a skirt embellished by row after row of pointed ruffles repeated on the short sleeves and at the neck line. Picoted ribbon makes the sash, and this is punctuated by a cluster of ribbon roses.

Organdy is an excellent choice now as ever for the small belle's party dress, and it is particularly lovely when hand embroidered in white dots. Another trimming favored for this material is in the form of tiny puffings. Still another is the pointed or scalloped ruffles of self material just mentioned.

However, although my own preference inclines toward organdy, it must be admitted that it is not now so fashionable a choice for the party dress as are either white net or voile. The former is often finished by bands of Irish lace—now extremely popular for the juvenile model—or by the appliques of cretonne to which I have referred. The latter, developed in white or in one of the pastel tints, frequently makes use of a great deal of drawn work and hemstitching. And sometimes, too, these little dressup models of voile are plaited as enthusiastically as are the grownup frocks.

It may be said in general, of trimmings that folks are turning more and more to hand work to obtain that distinction possible even with our stern creed of simplicity. Tiny hand made tucks, faggoting, exquisite embroidery—all these appear in the exclusive linens and voiles and organdies. And, before leaving the subject of embroidery, one must not forget the bands of vivid Russian embroidery which some of the designers are placing on girls' dresses of shantung or linen.

The coat which she of from 2 to 8 needs this summer for travel and for those inevitable cool days at seashore or mountain is cut similarly to the most fashionable type of frock. It flares from top to hem without any belt, and often it is cut with the raglan sleeve. Tweed, camel's hair, and covert cloth are all used for this garment, and it will be remembered that the tan and brown shades are now particularly good. Aside from this, we always have as a representative of perfect taste the blue serge coat cut on reefer lines.

SULPHUR CLEARS ROUGH, RED SKIN

Face, Neck and Arms Easily Made Smooth, Says Specialist

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

With Eyes for One Alone.

PARISSIMA: Most beloved—yes, everywhere, at all times! The world can never be so wide but that my thoughts are with you. My dearest, my darlingest, be patient and brave, trustful and reliant. The days shall pass and in time the heartaches of our present parting will be forgotten and we shall only recall the magic of our dreams. The yearning year will soon pass, will it not, dearest? And the forces that take me away from my only one will later but hold us stronger together.

Asleep or awake, in darkness or broad day, I dream of you. I am thrilled by your voice, my wonder goddess. I shall read no romance hereafter; I have you—all the romance man could wish.

Your telegram came to me yesterday morning. It was lovely of you to remember me so. I am sure your angel spirit shall not fail me in any trial, with your soul so intertwined in mine as it is! O, to make myself ever worthier and worthier of your love!

The ship sails steadily, and none has as yet missed answering the bugle call to refreshment. There are good books in the library, dancing in the lounge room, et cetera. I still promenade alone or with my table companion, Mr. Wells. This to the astonishment of the steward, who reminded me there are many young women aboard—"tons of them, tons of them," as he says. But when I walk alone you are with me ever.

Daughter of the angels! My darling love, how I yearn for thee! When time at last brings us together it shall hold us so closely—her recompense for the days of waiting. Yet I am not now without recompense. My faith in my dearest, sweetest love inspires and guides me, though she is miles away. And miles away though she is, I am nearer to her than to the myriads of beings about me.

A hundred hugs and a thousand kisses to my dearest love. Adoringly,

DONALD.

HOW TO MAKE STRAWBERRY JAM IN TEN MINUTES

By Ann Proctor

The finest strawberry jam you ever tasted—chock full of the natural color and flavor—can be made at home within ten minutes after the berries are washed and crushed. I use the "Certo Process" because it takes only 1 minute's boiling, thus saving flavor and color; never fails; and is cheaper because I get 60% more jam from the same amount of berries.

To make ten half-pound glasses of Strawberry Jam:

Crush well in single layers about two quarts of ripe berries, using wooden masher and discarding all green parts. Measure 4 cups crushed berries, add the juice of one lemon and 7½ leveled cups (3¼ pounds) sugar into good sized preserving kettle. Mix well; stir hard and constantly. Bring to vigorous boil and boil hard 1 full minute, continually stirring. Take from fire and add ½ bottle (scant ½ cup) Certo, stirring it in well. Let stand 5 minutes only, by the clock, stirring occasionally; skim and pour quickly into sterilized glasses.

By this short "Certo Process" you save all the color and flavor that is boiled away by the old method. Time and worry are saved and you have 5 lbs. of jam from 2 lbs. of berries as against 3 lbs. by the old method; and the cost with 30c berries and 6c sugar is only about 9c per half-pound glass.

The above recipe and many others for making delicious jellies and jams by the "Certo Process" is found in the Certo Book of Recipes, a copy of which will be given to you by your grocer when you get Certo. Extra copies will be sent free if you write to the Pectin Sales Company, Inc., 108 East Avenue, Rochester, N. Y.

Use Certo this year in making all your jams and jellies. It saves time, worry and boiling. The "Certo Process" never fails and saves money, because you make half as much more jam from the same amount of fruit; it is endorsed by national authorities and cooking experts. Jelly and jams made with Certo keep splendidly.

If your grocer or druggist does not have Certo, please call Leeds Brokerage Co., State 4549, to learn where to obtain it.

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — [Special Correspondence.] — The most beautiful woman in the world, Miss Katherine MacDonald, is superstitious about precious stones. She believes in luck and the wearing of her birthstone, which is a turquoise, the luck fancy for December.

If cold December gives you birth—
The month of snow and ice and mirth—
Place on your hand a turquoise blue;
Success will crown whate'er you do.

When she particularly feels the need of courting fortune, she dons an interesting looking strand of graduated round turquoise beads which extends below her waist line.

Loves Gem Lore.

"Prosperity," she confided, "is coupled with the turquoise in all gem lore. Wear a turquoise, and you will never fail. The wearer of a turquoise will always have friends. In the times of the Medici the turquoise cameo carved on matrix was a potent charm. Another fanciful illusion was the belief in olden days that wearing this stone would protect one from falls or accidents of any kind."

"I love gem lore," she added. "I have every book on the subject I can get. There is more sheer romance in them than in the modern fiction one reads. Shakespeare had Leah give a turquoise ring to Shylock when he was a bachelor in order to win his love.

"I do not care for stones, no matter how costly. I like them only when there is something personal in their meaning, as a memory, an ambition gratified, or attached sentiment.

First Burst of Extravagance.

"Everything I own means something. My bracelet, for instance, was my first burst of extravagance when I felt I could afford it. I had always wanted a bracelet, and a good one, so to me this means success, in a way."

The bracelet to which she referred is a narrow band of diamonds flanked on one side with a black French onyx band. When another extravagant mood seizes her, Miss MacDonald intends to add a sapphire circle above the onyx.

On the little finger of her left hand she wears two rings almost identical in design, one tight upon the other. The first was her father's ring, a gold band with two diamonds and a sapphire. She had a duplicate made to wear it, except it has two sapphires and a diamond. The two rings make a rather unusual display for the small finger, and she wears them always. A beautifully designed solitaire on the engagement ring finger indicates a romance not got out of gem lore books.

That Barbaric Instinct.

As a rule, Miss MacDonald prefers to go unadorned with jewels. Only for formal dress does she resort to a fine rope of pearls and a large platinum brooch, which must be worn for reasons of sentiment, as, somehow it does not look like her. Or perhaps the platinum brooch is just one of my particular aversions, since the cheap imitations have provided them a commonness that sits none too becomingly upon a beauty. The rope of pearls, the rings, and the bracelet seem sufficient to me for a well jeweled woman.

But I suppose "them as has 'em must sometimes feel impelled to wear 'em." I hope for sentimental reasons! None of us women, no matter how humble, seem to survive the barbaric instinct to hang things around our necks. The desire for a string of pearls is as elemental in the fair feminine breast as is the desire for a husband. No life is complete without them.

Sometimes I wonder why beautiful women are not more original in the matter of pearl necklaces; as original, say, as they are in the choice of husbands. One might indulge in a treatise here on the difference in loyalty to the pearl instinct and the husband, but that is getting away from Miss MacDonald's jewel box, which contains some interesting pieces about which no such criticisms may be made.

Treasures from Thibet.

Miss MacDonald admits favorite stones besides her birthstone—sapphire and diamond combinations and pearls, a discrimination indulged in by many of our best jeweled women. She does not like the reds and greens of rubies and emeralds, believing they were intended to be worn by brunettes—not by her blonde type.

The turquoise strand to which I referred was bought in Thibet, and is a rare antique. They are of the real turquoise blue without that taint of green to which some turquoise antiques turn. Some modern turquoise stones, Miss MacDonald tells me, turn green upon the wearer, but it is the opposite with her. When she foregoes the wearing of hers for a time they have a greenish cast which disappears when she wears them again.

Another Thibetan purchase of which Miss MacDonald is fond is a pendant about two inches long in the immortal peach pattern, so much used in oriental jewelry, to which superstition adds the promise of longevity. She has, too, a strand of graduated blue agate beads with a pendant carved in the same immortal peach pattern, strung on black Chinese cord, with a knot between each bead. It is that lovely shade, a combination of lavender and cornflower blue. A bracelet to match makes an interesting set.

Attached to another Chinese cord braided in an intricate design is a pendant about four inches long and two inches wide of hand carved antique amber. It is of luscious golden brown, carved into a twig with three tiny pieces of fruit. Its beautiful owner had it a long time before discovering two tiny humming birds and a queer little bug in its design.

Owns Black Jade.

"Perhaps the rarest thing I own," Miss MacDonald said, "is a strand of black jade, square cut, strung with alternating square cut crystal beads. It is claimed to be the only one of its kind in America."

A lovely amethyst drop, about two inches long and an inch wide and pear shaped, is in her possession. It is set in Chinese gold and is held by a ring of seed pearls knotted on with a fine ivory colored cord held by one translucent white jade bead in a ring of Chinese gold.

Still another unusual bit of jewelry is a strand of aquamarine beads graduating in size, with an octagonal pendant about an inch in diameter and two inches long. This is strung on an antique Chinese gold chain.

"These odd pieces," said Miss MacDonald, "I wear rarely, but I love to own them, just as some people love first editions and others fine old laces. Thier designs fascinate me, and I read history and romance into them. I like them."

No earrings were in her collection, upon which I commented. The gentlemen of the solitaire does not like them, so romance may be read into their absence, may it not?

BEAUTY ANSWERS

TWO BROKEN HEARTS: YOU will have to be patient for a couple of months now and just let the hair grow naturally. That's the penalty of shearing the locks. There's an unruly length on the return growth which is unmanageable. I would not advise anything but brushing it night and morning for five minutes. That will help its growth and give it a nice gloss. Of course if you use a net you will find it much more tractable, and you may even be able to arrange it quite fetchingly, short as it is.

EMILY M.: IF YOUR HAIR IS oily you should wash it every two weeks at least. In fact, you may shampoo it every week if necessary and be sure there will be no harm done. I have a pamphlet on the care of the hair which contains a tonic for oily hair and also a salt treatment which I would recommend your taking. Send s. a. e.

EXETER: SOME SAY THEY ARE and some say they are not bobbing the hair with the same scissor business of six months or a year back. I note many of those who did it a year ago are now returning to their former love, the full grown ringlets. Again, I note heads that have been laid on the block quite recently, and shorn of their golden crowns. So, it reduces itself again to the personal 'becomingness' of the deed once done, it would seem. All I would urge is that you be the type for bobbed hair, the chief characteristic of which is a long slender neck and some degree of youth and beauty. There have been some sad mistakes among those who are not of the chosen few who have the right to trim 'em short and snappy. It's sad!

M. A. P.: WHAT ARE THE Youth Preservers I referred to the other day? They comprise a set of twelve exercises to be done the first thing every a. m. Simple of execution, but powerfully effective in keeping the figure right, the body in excellent condition, and in retaining that most cherished of all possessions—youth. They take in every muscle of the body, and are in my opinion the best worked out daily setting up exercises you can find. Yes, you may have them absolutely and totally free, except for a stamped, addressed envelope. I know they are wonderful because hardly a day goes by now but I get a letter of thanks from women who have adopted them and found them everything I claim for them. They are a morning habit I wish every woman would get.

H. H. R.: A CURE FOR NERVOUSness and constant headaches above the eyes? The best and only reliable cure is to put yourself into the hands of a good doctor. The trouble may be eye strain, which causes the nervousness. Anyway, see an oculist to be sure that if eye trouble is there in aggravated form it is treated at once with specs. One can cure nervousness by building up the general health, by walks, by swimming, by good, nourishing food, and by making up the mind not to worry even if the world comes to an end.

M. S.: THOSE BLUE AND BLACK shadows under the eyes cannot be remedied by local treatment. The cause is from within, and there the remedy must be applied. Yours is a problem for a physician to decide—whether it is kidney trouble or what—and advise.

JEAN: YOU NEED A HAIR TONIC for that excessive dryness of hair and scalp. I have one for you. Please send stamped, addressed envelope, won't you?

MOIST CAKES.

IN many a home you will find the preferences in cake for the moist ones. Quite likely the lord and master says that moist cake has more gerbread with a topping of whip cream; moist spongy cake with the same topping to make it seem moister yet, the sour cream cakes with and without flavor, more taste, more quality, and he is right. For this reason he likes ginspices; the mock angel cake and, in general, the sour milk and cream cakes with soda instead of the baking powder cakes, especially when a cake is to be eaten on the day it is made.

The home cook is more than willing to try to make the moister confections if she has been treated now and then to cake as dry as sand and as flavorless as dry tapioca. There is much cake inexplicably sold that is as little like moist cake as a dry as bone sponge is like a wet one. On the other hand, there are cakes to be purchased which are unwholesomely moist because underdone. Perhaps this securing of moist texture in a thoroughly cooked cake has been lost sight of in our modern day, to a large extent. It seems that way to me, wherefore I am writing about it.

Sticky Sponge Cake.

Comments or any but the barest directions are mostly wanting in the older recipes, although in time quite far back we find many little illuminating touches. Apropos of moist cakes, there is in one old book of recipes a title that may seem surprising. It is this: "Deliciously Sticky Sponge Cake." The recipe calls for six eggs, their weight in powdered sugar, half their weight in flour, etc. The usual measure of flour and sugar is cup for cup in sponge cake. But in this recipe it is even advised that not all the flour of the formula be used, if it is likely to make the sponge solid. Two-thirds of the egg whites are folded in next to last and then the other third is stirred in lightly on top to get a light crust.

The unusual direction in this recipe is: "Grease the pans thickly with butter, as it makes the crust crisp." The contrary direction is given in many sponge cake recipes, but the soft sponge surface we are likely to get when the pans are not greased, and the cake must stand until it sweats in the pan, in order that it may come out well, is no argument for not greasing the pan. And it is also better to grease the pan in making angel cake and mock angel cake as well, and for the same reason, although you will find the recipes saying, "Bake in an ungreased pan" A crisp crust on a mock angel cake is what makes it seem most like the real thing.

The final directions for the making of this sticky sponge cake are expressed as follows: "If the oven is too hot, the cake will puff up, and become dry and brown, and the crust will not form. The success depends upon the mixing and baking." Probably the word "both" has been omitted here.

Three Egg Sponge Cake.

Common three egg sponge cake, with its six tablespoons of cold water, can be made into a sticky sponge cake if it is mixed and baked properly. It is more likely to be sticky if orange juice is used instead of the water, and it is most likely to be if we use four eggs and proceed as in the recipe given below.

Perhaps it is more difficult to bake an angel cake so that it will have a sticky crust and yet be thoroughly cooked. The happy medium in baking is that it shall not be stiffly overdone nor stickily underdone, but be stickily done.

If there is too much flour, even by two tablespoons, in a cake it is not likely to have both a light texture and a sticky surface—not too sticky even, for that comes with undercooking. The cake which will positively shrink away from the pan when it is well cooked is most likely to be the one in which the flour has been scanted, to the improvement of its quality or, preferably, added in exactly the right proportions, and this is a long story, for with an incompletely prepared base of sweetened wetness we are most likely to add too much flour. When butter and sugar and egg yolks will ribbon as they fall from the spoon, and when the batter after the flour has been added will do the same, we usually have ideal conditions.

Cake That Keeps.

A fruit cake heavy with additions is one of the moist cakes, yet it must be too dense to shrink much if it is of the wedding cake type. Some inquiries about a cake of this type that will keep a year have been addressed to me of late, probably because of the dearth of brandy, since the recipes for all these old cakes recommended as "keepers" call for this ingredient. But as I consider these cakes but slightly valuable as provender and wickedly expensive if poorly made, I have not thought it worth while to put time and money into testing out the old recipes to see which would give the best results without brandy. They differ endlessly in particulars. I had, however, thought brandy rather necessary for pound cake until I made six or eight in rapid succession. Now I do not. Pound cake keeps just as well without brandy as with, and may be moist and agreeable of flavor at the end if it is thoroughly iced. The royal or uncooked icing keeps moisture from escaping. You know, the old artists used raw egg white for a somewhat similar reason on painted walls.

In the book of recipes mentioned there is this formula, with the title "Black Cake That Will Keep One Year": "One pound of brown sugar, one pound of butter, one pound of flour, ten eggs, one-half pint of French brandy, two pounds of raisins, two pounds of currants, one tablespoon mace, two nutmegs grated, one tablespoon of cloves."

Lady Washington Wedding Cake.

Another recipe of much the same sort from this source has the title "Lady Washington Wedding Cake" and reads: "This recipe was taken from an old family recipe book, tattered but still legible in spite of century old ink. The old fashioned recipe contained directions for baking before an open fire, for putting embers under the oven and letting the batter rise three hours, then baking for three hours and drawing the oven away from the fire, letting the cake soak at least two hours. If it was exceedingly large, it was to be left in the chimney corner all night.

"Two pounds of raisins, two pounds of currants, one pound of citron, one pound of almonds chopped fine, one pound of sugar, one pound of butter, one pound of flour, one dozen eggs, one tablespoon of mace, one tablespoon of cinnamon, two nutmegs grated, one teacup of wine and brandy mixed. The raisins and citron are both cut up and rolled in flour. Beat butter and sugar to a cream, add eggs beaten very light, then fruit, then flour, and last the wine."

Requiring a Giant to Mix.

The wine in these old recipes was a leavener. The spirit in it rose through the batter and evaporated, leaving nothing of it but the flavor. That is why it was difficult, or why it required long work to make an old fashioned pound cake. The wine rising made funnels in the cake, and so ruined the appearance of the texture, especially if the oven was too hot.

Bride's Cake.

One-half cup of sweet butter, and one and one-half cups of sifted sugar, one-half cup of sour or butter milk, one and three-fourths to two cups of pastry flour, three-fourths of a teaspoon of cream of tartar sifted in the flour, one-fourth teaspoon of soda carefully dissolved and added at the last, five egg whites and flavor to suit. Vanilla is nowadays the universal flavor. Rose is more conventional for this cake, or use part vanilla, part lemon, and a bit almond or all almond.

Cream butter, then cream in sugar, and then add the milk, getting the mixture perfectly smooth. Sift the flour several times, and fold in half of it slowly, then add the rest a little at a time alternately with the egg white which has been beaten until completely dry—the test is the point. To beat flour into a cake is to get a possible toughness, and this can be avoided by carefully folding it in. If half is alternated with the egg whites—perhaps dividing each into three portions in the adding—a certain type of lightness is secured which is near perfection. Finally put the soda and the flavoring into a measuring cup and dip over them a large tablespoon of the batter. Stir these together as thoroughly as possible, and then add to batter and fold in completely. Bake for one hour in a large round tin in an oven which may be a trifle over 300 degrees and may be a little hotter at the start. If baked too slowly we taste the flour. If it is baked too rapidly, it is too damp at the center. The oven should at no time be hot enough to burn paper.

The expert cake maker does not need to take all this care but the inexperienced can afford to be cautiously painstaking.

Of course, this cake needs a white icing beautifully put on. That is an exact piece of work, too. It has been said that this icing or frosting is to the cake what her snowy gown and veil are to the bride. In this cake may be the thimble and ring, the button and money and the wish bone.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This Is New to Us.

"Dear Miss Blake: Please let me know if it is an insult to receive a box of handkerchiefs from a fellow for a present; and if it breaks friendship when a fellow takes a silk handkerchief from a girl. S. H."

Never heard of any such superstition, but I suppose if the pattern or color were badly chosen it might have a distressing result. I thought silk handkerchiefs for men had rather gone out. Flowers and candy would be in better taste as a gift for a girl, but I would not mind being insulted by a box of the ravishing 'kerchiefs one sees displayed these days. I would not even read an insult into it at all.

Start Running Now.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a boy of 18 and am keeping close friendship with a girl two years my junior. The other day she asked me whether I would like to continue our friendship. The only way to continue it, she told me, was to stop speaking to other girls. Since I know that she shows a great deal of liking towards me, I was not able to make a hasty reply. I told her I would ask you for an answer.

"HIRAM."

Well, Hiram, you are in for a life of something with that young lady, and I would not call it exactly bliss. She is not going to stand for any trifling, is she? Next time she catches you in a fickle moment you would better have your runners on and make haste while the girls are between you and your avenging angel. That girl means business. I think you'd better start running from her right now.

She Won't Mind.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a girl for two weeks and she invited me to her home. I want to know if it is proper to bring a box of candy or flowers the first time I go to her home. A. M."

It is an awfully nice attention, A. M. No girl ever got peeved at a young man for such a compliment. I'd try it.

Same Old Story.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl 16 years of age, and hold quite a responsible position. Since I commute daily I became acquainted with a young man three years my senior, whom I like. This young man has taken me out frequently and has always been a gentleman. The last time we were out together he insisted upon kissing me good night. I let him, as I like him immensely. Since then he has neither called me up nor come to the house. What can be the trouble?

"DISCOURAGED."

I hate to say: "I told you so," but I do not know what else to say, dear! That's what happens so often, only I cannot seem to be able to make you children understand how indifferent the male can become, once he sees how easily you may be made to bestow your kisses. Nor do I want to say, "You've had your lesson now." But, dear, if it will prove a lesson to you, your future will be free of many disappointments.

Room for Two.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl of 18 and am in love with two young men of 19, and don't know how to find out which one loves me. Will you kindly advise me what to do?

"BLUE EYES."

That is a problem for Blue Eyes or for Brown! Kind of an open hearted child, you are, with room for two deep affections? Well, I guess you will have to leave your query to time to answer.

'TIZ' FOR TENDER, SORE, TIRED FEET

Happiness in Every Step

if you wear Cantilever Shoes.

Have you said, "Every step is torture," when you walked in ordinary shoes that bind the foot and fail to provide the support which the arch needs?

A change to Cantilever Shoes will relieve your foot troubles.

There is room for the toes, and the natural inner sole line permits them to point straight ahead in their natural position. In a shoe that twists the foot to turn the toes outward all the weight falls on the weakest part of the arch and pain soon results. But in the Cantilever Shoe the weight is shared by the heel, the ball of the big toe and the outside of the foot, thus taking the usual unnatural strain off the arch.

The flexible shank of Cantilever Shoes bends with the movement of the muscles. The foot is not restrained by a metal appliance nor by a rigid sole, but is free to exercise and strengthen in walking. Using the muscles which surround the small bones of the arch prevents and corrects flat foot.

Cantilever Shoes are good looking, too.

Genuine Cantilever Shoes have the name "CANTILEVER" stamped on the shank. Avoid substitutes.

1258—Woman's redingote dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, and 56 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards of 36 inch or 2 yards of 54 inch material, with 2⅜ yards of dark material, 6 yards of binding, and ⅞ yard of 36 inch lining.

How to Use the Patterns

SO LITTLE material is required for these dresses for the small girl one should not have to consider the expense in choosing. And pattern No. 1381 will make up charmingly in any of the sheer white wash materials, or a fine quality of dotted muslin would be lovely for the 6 year old size.

The pattern is in one piece, which means, of course, that the short sleeves are cut in one with the balance of the dress kimono fashion. There is a tiny opening in the neck in the front which makes it possible to get into and out of the dress—and if a full length sleeve is desired there is one included in the pattern; but probably the short length will be used for the coming season.

Children's clothes are never more attractive than when simply made. Materials should always be as good of their kind as can be afforded, and the work should be perfect; but no elaborate trimming is needed. For the 2 and 4 year sizes white batiste or some other sheer material is lovely. In cutting allow for a deep hem at the bottom and if you have time put in a line of single feather stitching to outline the hem, taking care to use the right weight floss for the goods. Of course, the hem is first done by hand, and the feather stitching put over it on the right side. The neck opening and sleeve ends may be finished with a half inch binding of the dress material, these bands being decorated with feather stitching also. Or if you don't care for a decorative stitch, finish the neck and sleeves with a narrow lace edge.

Chambrays in the delicate pinks, blues, or buff shade are most attractive for tots for wear in the early part of the day. On some of these small dresses one sees bits of peasant embroidery in gay, contrasting colors.

Pattern No. 1391 is one of those one piece, slip-on designs that make up attractively for afternoon wear at home. The pattern is cut in two pieces—front and back—and the waist part of the front section is marked for narrow lengthwise tucks that run from top to bottom each side of the middle. A slash in the front at the neck makes it possible to do away with any other kind of an opening. There should be no difficulties in cutting or making, but before laying the pieces on the dress material hold the front up to you to see that the length will be all right. You can verify width measures by comparing with some of your garments.

The tucks should be put in before the seams are sewed together. Organdie would be pretty; brown with small white dots would be serviceable and cool and could be kept fresh for quite a time by frequent pressing and airing. Of course, laundering will not hurt it, but one likes the newness to last as long as may be.

Collar and cuffs may be of the same material or plain white, and no contrasting color or trimming is necessary to make a smart and most attractive dresses.

The redingote style of dress, with its long lines, is one that is becoming to slender and full figures alike and pattern No. 1258 is one of the best of the kind.

The skirt is cut in two pieces, and there is a separate waist lining, to which the skirt is attached; the sleeves are also set into this lining. The front of the skirt through the center extends up over the front of the underwaist, and is fastened to the right side of the underwaist along the edge, while the left side is left free and finished with snaps for fastening to the left side of the underwaist. The underwaist fastens down the middle front. The overdress has small darts at the front of the armholes, which help to give the right fullness over the bust.

Black Canton crêpe, with a little cream lace showing at the neck, would be attractive. Two shades of batiste or voile—one of them embroidered—would make an ideal dress for warm days. If crêpe is used, the sleeves may be of georgette chiffon, figured crêpe, or plain material embroidered or decorated.

The pattern of the overdress allows for hems to be turned across the bottom and up the front. This is work that must be well done or the dress will never look right. On materials that won't crease the first narrow turning must be basted, and after the second turning will come another basting. In woolen or silk the slip or blind stitch should be used for hemming, taking the stitches so they will not come through to the right side. In removing the bastings, cut the threads at intervals, and then use a stiletto to pull the threads away, taking care not to catch a thread of the material.

My Nicest Compliment

What was the nicest compliment you ever got? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Approbation.

The nicest compliment I ever received was from a boy 14 years old.

My husband and I took this boy into our home while his parents went on a business trip, which lasted about four weeks.

Upon their return the father said, "Well, son, how did you and Mrs. White get along?"

He replied, "Fine, and when I get married I'm going to marry some one just like her." L. W.

After Three Years.

Three years after the war a letter comes to me from a mountain doughboy whom I met in war work overseas, and whose lonely expression caused me to single him out for a little chat during an entertainment arranged for the men by a few American girls.

He writes, "I have wanted to write to you ever since that night you were so kind as to talk to me. I have always been too bashful to meet strangers, but you made it easy for me to talk. When I told you I had not heard from my girl for months and I thought I had lost her, you said she would wait for me. We have been married a year and have a baby girl. We would like to name her after you if you have no objections." C. P. M.

"Mirth Is Medicine."

I had given at a settlement a program of readings entirely humorous. There had been one continuous round of laughter and applause, and I felt I should have given something more serious and uplifting. But at the close of the evening an old man came up to grasp my hand and say earnestly, "I thank you for that. We don't laugh enough around here. That will sweeten life for me tomorrow!" M. D.

The Real Test.

At a dinner party I received what I consider my nicest compliment.

The guests were seated with place cards, but instead of having the name only, the card contained a sentiment appropriate for each person.

Mine read: "Clare—a friend who comes in when the whole world goes out." C. S.

That First Love Affair of Mine

What was your "puppy love" affair? Can you tell it now without a wrench of the heart—with a laugh, say? If so—The Tribune will pay $5 for each story published on "My 'Puppy Love' Story." Write on one side of the paper and make your story brief. Address Puppy Love Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

And Then They Parted.

LOOKING backward through the mist of years my puppy love story appears to me in a series of disconnected pictures. I see a little, shy, pink and white miss of 15, dining for the first time at the house of an old friend of her mother's—blue dress, ladylike manners, an' everything. I behold her introduction to a superbly tall, dark young athlete—their desperate attempt at conversation.

His mother laughs and says: "Why you children used to play together as babies. Don't you remember, Jane, how you bit Arthur when he tried to take your puppy away from you?"

This remark, although horribly tactless, breaks the ice. I can hardly bear to allude to the next scene when little Jane was—er—seasick, immediately following that gorgeous dinner—frankly Jane, though flowerlike, was a bit too fond of food. I still burn with mortification at the memory, for of course, I am Jane, and I thought my whole life was blasted by the misbehavior of my little tummy. I found the next day that it was not, for young Arthur telephoned and asked me to go swimming.

And that was the beginning of a three years' romance of exquisite bliss, violent quarrels, and general agony—a drastic course in pool, swimming, hiking, target practice, and the cultivation of enormous patience on my part as I watched practice games of all sorts, held a stop watch, and made myself generally useful.

Arthur gave me countless pounds of candy—my favorite food—a bull pup, and a .22 rifle with an ivory sight. For my sake he danced and went to the theater, but always with the air of an unwilling slave. He was fiendishly jealous and loved to read Sherlock Holmes and George Ade aloud to me, in spite of my rude protest. He read like the dickens—jerky, you know—and mispronounced every other word. But I cried for three days and nights after our most serious battle, which occurred after I said he looked foolish in his new derby hat. Then, all at once, I found myself engaged to another man.

We meet at times, Arthur and I, and we smile and sigh sentimentally over the old days, but we both, in our hearts, rejoice at our escape, for I have turned into one of those thin little things, mad about dogs and good literature, and he is fat and has a waxed mustache and reads nothing but the sporting page. I've had two spouses and he's had three, and nothing could induce us to marry each other, but he loves to look into my eyes and hint, "O, Jane, if only——" and then he rolls his own. L. L.

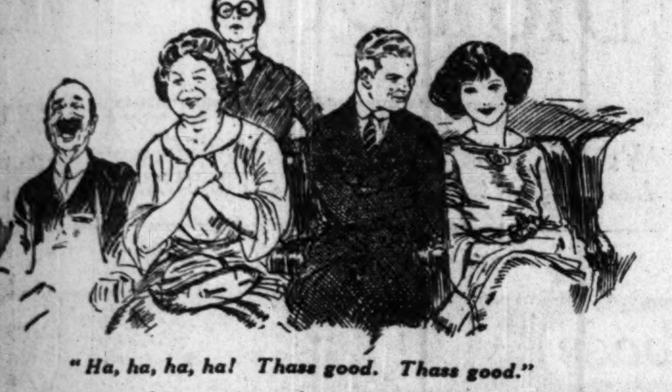
PROLOGUE.

Life is vaudeville—continuous vaudeville . . . some work up to the big time, some never get off the bowl and pitcher circuit, the sitting on the suitcase time . . . we are all trying to get over, and the audience is hard, and the manager is even harder . . . and when the curtain rings down to us, what then? . . . another audience in another house, under the same management? . . . a new act with better scenery and an orchestra composed entirely of harps? . . . you tell 'em, Conan Doyle . . . meanwhile, we would remind you of the sign on the call board of a little vaudeville theater down state: "Don't Send Out Your Laundry Until We've Seen Your Act."

Scene I—At the Vaudeville Show.

(Red Miller and Mamie Potter, his fiancée, chaperoned by Pa and Ma, are attending the current vaudeville show, which Gilbert might have described as "a source of innocent merriment, of innocent merriment" . . . we, too, will attend in spirit and see how well the Muses Nine do their stuff on the three a day . . .)



"Ha, ha, ha, ha! Thass good. Thass good."

A—The Pathetic Weekly.

MA (who didn't quite catch the purpose of the parade):
What's the parading all about?
They go so fast I can't find out . . . .

PA (who, since Ma doesn't know, can speak freely):
You see, they're marching down Broadway
For General . . . let me see . . . Jofray.

MAMIE (an unregenerate scoffer):
Don't you mean for General Joffer?

MA (as another oil well goes up in "gigantic holocaust"):
Just like the one last week we saw . . .
(Suddenly):
Are you sure the gas is turned off, Pa?

B—Turnem and Twistem.

(Who appear, as the curtain goes up, in severe evening dress, reading last week's paper, upside down . . . after a few friendly waves of the hand to each other—both are deaf and dumb, it seems—they suddenly cast aside their savoir faire and become prodigiously active, swinging from the chandeliers by their toes and tossing each other about with the utmost carelessness.)

MA (surprised by the magical transformation);
Why, who'da thought they'd do such things,
You'd think that they were full of springs.

RED (applauding a particularly difficult feat—he seems to be the only one to appreciate it):
Now, that's a stunt . . . now, that's a stunt;
Who'd ever think it of the runt . . .

(The "runt" and his partner now tear off a little trick that makes a perfect case for the Darwinian theory . . . Bryan will never really get anywhere with his attack on the origin of the species until he explains away all acrobatic acts . . .)

PA (admiringly):
I was active when I was young . . .

MA (fearful of disturbing audience):
Shhh . . . shhh . . . hold your tongue . . .

(The partners now toss the community handwipe back and forth to each other . . . the next theatrical benefit should be to raise a fund for a Perpetual Endowment to Provide Individual Handwipes for Acrobats . . . also to retire those now in service . . .)

C—Flapper and Snapper.

SNAPPER:
Excuse me, but haven't I met you before?
FLAPPER:
Before what?
S.: Before the Chicago fire . . . Ha, ha!
F.: I don't see anything to laugh at.
S.: Well, if you were standing where I am you would.
F.: Don't you know that beauty is only skin deep?
S.: That's deep enough for me; I'm not a cannibal. Say, do you know Jupiter?
F. (innocently):
No. Jupiter what?
S.: Jupiter knife in your pocket? Ha! ha!
PA: Ha ha, ha ha . . . Thass good, thass good.
RED: That's a peach. I gotta remember that.
SNAPPER:
I feel a song coming on . . . let's sing.

(Light goes out and moonlight, with slightly gangrene effect, shines on enamored couple, who immediately go into clinch on bench.)

I often think of other girls,
But there is none like you,
With golden hair beyond compare
And eyes of baby blue.
But I have missed you, O, so much,
Since I left Cincinnati,
To travel on the Gay White Way,
I wonder are you happy.

CHO. (Duet).
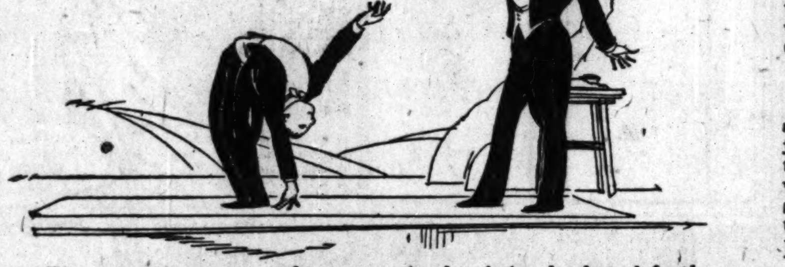
S.: I've got the blues, the Broadway blues.
F.: He's got the blues, I said the blues,
S.: For dear old Cincinnati
F.: On the O-hi-O so dear,
S.: And my dream of you in a little house
With roses round the door,
I know I'll never dream that pretty dream I dreamt of yore.
S.: I've
F.: He's got those sappy, most unhappy,
Cincinnati
Blu-hoo-hooes.



The partners now toss the community handwipe back and forth.

D—The Country Postmaster.

(Scene opens, showing country postmaster industriously reading all the postcards.)

1ST RUBE (chewing enormous quid of tobacco):
I say, Hank, by heck, were yu-all over to th' ice cream soshabul last night, by cracky (spit)?

POSTMASTER:
Sez which?

1ST RUBE (wiping honest hand of toil on silk handkerchief):
Yer orta seen that thar city flapper gal, Hank . . . by gosh, she wuz cuter than a brindle pup, by cracky (spit).

MA (by way of elucidation):
That's supposed to be a small town, Pa.

PA (who was raised in one—so was Ma):
I thought it was the postoffice in New York City.

RED (to Mamie):
Gee, do they talk like that in the sticks?

MAMIE (absently):
Did you ever see such awful teeth as that girl has?

(The stage meanwhile fills with honest farmers, costumed according to the latest advices from 42d and Broadway . . . a stage presentation of the Dail Eireann inspired from the same source would show a collection of Harps with bright red grogans sitting around smoking clay pipes upside down and every now and then taking off their hats to spit on them and wipe them reflectively with their sleeves . . . the meeting would close with a barber shop harmony entitulled: "If You Give Us the Sham We'll Give You the Rock, for We Say It with Shamrocks, Acushla Machree.")

E—Fifteen Minutes of Grand Opera.

(The little orchestra attacks the Valkyries with commendable bravery, after which the coloratura sheers off into the Mad Scene, keeping just three jumps ahead of the piccolo . . . the piccolo finally catches her between the second and third staff lines and chases her down into the middle register, where she plays hide and seek with him a while and then in one mad bound gets away from him, leaps for high C, swings herself up to F, and hangs there by her toes until the curtain comes down with merciful swiftness.)

MA (thrilled):
Wasn't that simply wonderful, Pa?

PA (bored):
Gosh, I thought it was awful, Ma.

MA (clapping enthusiastically):
Look, she's coming again to sing.

PA (resigned):
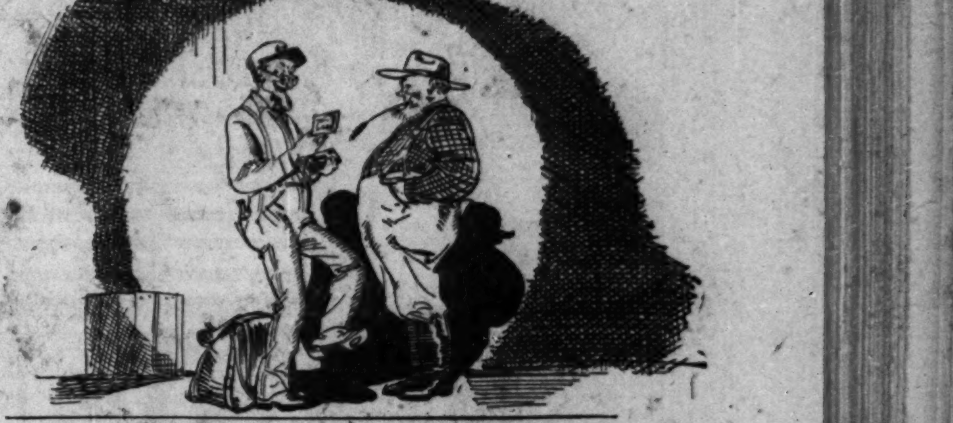
Gosh, that voice is a terrible thing.

(The coloratura folds her hands and sings "Annie Laurie," simply, sweetly, beautifully . . . the house goes mad; even Pa gets soft . . . as for Mamie and Red, well, darn the arms on these seats anyway . . .)



"She wuz cuter than a brindle pup, by cracky."

F—Bozo, the Monologist.

(Who comes second to last on the bill, just before what is technically known as the "chaser" . . . since nobody ever stays to see the last act, why not save money and not have a last act? . . . idea contributed gratis for the benefit of vaudeville.)

. . . and she says to me what do I think of love? I've got just one thing to say, and that is t'hel with the first man that took me out for a moonlight ride, and then I says to her, say, do you know Hiawatha, and she says Hiawatha, Hiawatha who? and I says: Hiawatha good girl till I met you . . . (Exit, laughingly.)

RED (guffawing):
That's the pussy cat's whiskers, all right, all right.

PA (a bit slow):
I don't get it, yet.

MA (indignantly):
I don't see any sense to it.

RED (choking):
Say it fast: Hiawatha Good Girl . . . I watha good girl . . . I was a good girl . . . see? Hiawatha good girl till I met you . . . Ha! ha!

PA (getting it):
Ho! ho! Thass good. I gotta remember that one. I'll tell it to 'em at lunch tomorrow . . . (reaching under seat for hat):
C'mon, let's go; c'mon, let's go . . .

(And they go, to the utter disgust of the Seven Scintillating Cyclists Who Have Ridden Before All the Crowned Heads of Europe—and now look at the durn things, the Crowned Heads, I mean . . .)

(And that's that—until next Sunday.

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Pieces to Give.

"We have several sample books of drapery materials which some one might be glad to use for fancy or patch work. If you will send us the name of some one we will be glad to send them on." MISS K."

Thank you. Some shut-in will be grateful for your donation.

They Crave Music.

"Do you suppose one of your kind readers has an old phonograph and records to give to a boys' club? We cannot afford to buy one. We will be glad to pay freight or express charges. "A. C. L."

To bring pleasure to many boys at once will doubtless appeal to some reader who has a small phonograph and is willing to part with it.

Asks for Seeds.

"I want some vegetable and flower seeds to make a garden—some dwarf peas and beans and pole beans especially—and am not able to buy them. If it is not convenient to send these, any garden seeds you may have would be accepted with gratitude. "MRS. C. K."

Request for Book.

"Has some one 'The Making of an America,' by Jacob Riis, or a book of similar nature which he or she would be willing to pass on? D."

Of Every Description.

"In my spring cleaning I find many articles I am tired of and will willingly pass on. I have school books, girls' series, a guitar and books, postcards, music of all grades, framed pictures and an old typewriter. C. B. W."

Probably there are several who will be pleased to avail themselves of C. B. W.'s generosity, since the articles in the list are so varied.

Companion for Mother.

"My mother is old and has had an illness which caused her to lose the power of her left leg, temporarily, the attacks coming on periodically, without warning. It has also slightly affected her mind, making her forgetful, and I am afraid she will wander out of the house. I am her only support, and as I am employed downtown, mother is left alone. I must get some one to stay with her. I want a middle aged woman who would be glad of a home where all that would be required of her is to see that nothing happens to mother. E. C."

I present your petition, Miss E. C., and hope for its success.

Pat. Process Lloyd LOOM PRODUCTS

Character

Character must be built into a baby carriage from its very beginning, by the flawless weaving of endless wickers into a graceful, sweeping, perfect whole.

Lloyd Loom Woven Baby Carriages have this character, easily distinguished in the exclusive "shell" design of the bodies—a graceful bowl shape, with sweeping unbroken curves from side to front.

It was Marshall B. Lloyd who invented the method and loom which, weaving thirty times faster and finer than the old hand weaving, have so cut labor costs that we can weave the finest wickers, add the latest refinements and still sell our wicker products at very moderate prices.

Cut fresh pineapple into cubes about half inch square. Allow to stand in own juice until time to serve. Arrange diced fruit on crisped lettuce and cover with whipped cream salad dressing. Serve with cream cheese balls rolled in chopped nuts.

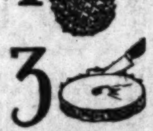
PINES

There is something essentially luxurious in this glorious tropical fruit. A few years ago the rich paid as high as $5 apiece for pineapples. Now they are within everybody's reach. One pineapple will serve six to eight people.

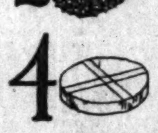
Fresh pineapple is delicious in salads, in desserts, in fruit cocktails, with cereals, as topping for ice cream and cakes, for pies, tarts and puddings. You will find it easy and economical to can your own pineapples. Our book tells how.

All grocers sell fresh pineapples. Don't forget to order one today when you make up your list.

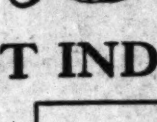
How the Cuban Women Prepare Pineapple



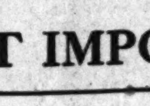
1 Grasp the pineapple firmly in one hand, then take hold of foliage with the other hand and twist it off.



2 Now slice the fruit across in thick slices not less than three-quarters of an inch thick.



3 Put a slice on a plate. Then run a sharp knife around the edge of the slice, inside the peel. It then comes off, with eyes, easily.



4 Cut across the slice as shown in diagram, four cuts, one on each side of the core. The core will be out without any waste.

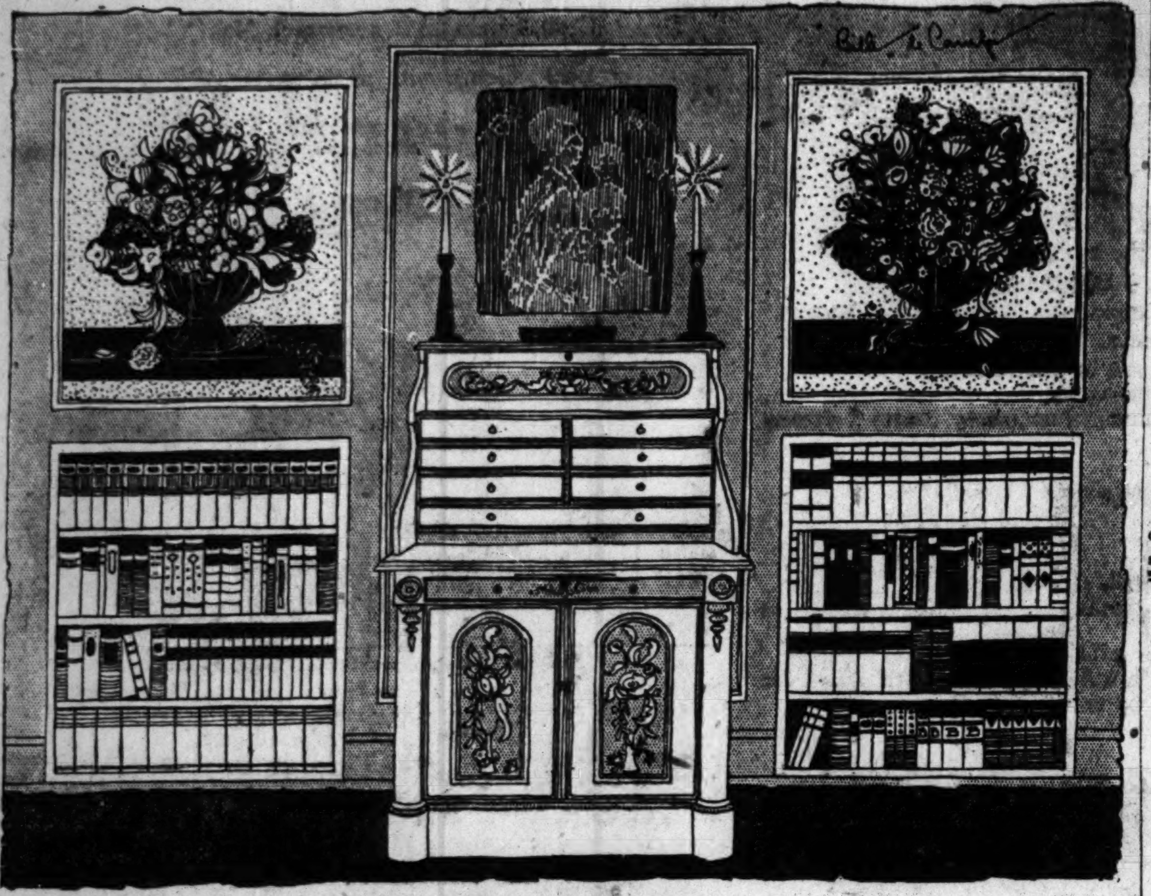
Hanging Pictures with Respect to Surroundings and Space



Proportion paintings to spaces allotted them.

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

WE looked around a friend's house the other day, and, O! the pictures! The furnishings were of the best—hardly to be criticized, but—O, the pictures! There were two of pink roses, by Aunt Julia. They were hand painted in oils! Between these was a large tinted photograph of the son of the family in his army uniform.

There were several water colors, of various sizes, that daughter had painted at school. Among them was a head of a gypsy girl and one of a sad looking dog. These all were placed about the room regardless of symmetry or any sort of arrangement, and the result was really terrible. If the walls could only have been cleared of those ruinous pictures, the room would have been fascinating.

Please don't think we are crying down pictures. It is a widespread and generally accepted idea that the interior decorator advocates their complete abolishment. This view is wholly erroneous. There is hardly anything more decorative and charming for a room than good pictures. But they must be few and suitable to the type of room in which they are to be placed.

To allow too many pictures is an indiscretion. The Japanese, it seems to me, have a good idea, with regard to the hanging of their pictures. They may have a great many in their possession, but they permit only one at a time to be presented to view. They hang this one in a prominent place, where its size is well suited, and after a time they put it away, replacing it with another one. In this way they have enjoyable changes, without confusion.

Heavily carved, protruding gilded frames are overdecorative. They bear no relation to the wall itself, and seem out of place when hung upon it. The frame is supposed to be a minor factor (whose purpose it is to hold the picture in place, or to distinguish its outlines, slightly, from the wall), and it should be treated as such. A lovely arrangement for pictures is to have them hung in panels, or in some places which correspond proportionately to their sizes and shapes. Pictures which are framed with narrow molding, flat against the wall, are remarkably effective.

It is a great pity that many of the best paintings are not of suitable proportions for the rooms in which they are hung. They are of miscellaneous sizes that look well in gallery collections, but often, when separated for use as central units, they are so incongruous to the dimensions and arrangement as to depreciate considerably, both in value and beauty.

It would be a great thing if, instead of going out and buying pictures at random, people would determine the spaces in which they wish to have them placed, and then would engage a good artist to make paintings of sizes that would be pleasingly proportionate to the spaces. This plan would be advantageous, both to the artist and to the purchaser. The pictures would show to their best advantage, and the result would be wholly admirable.

The Association of Women Interior Decorators of Chicago is especially interested in the consideration of pictures and their correlation to all of the objects in the rooms in which they are placed.

In an exquisite living room which I had the pleasure of seeing lately, the pictures were fitted, and were made to order. The wall is French gray; the draperies Du Barry rose, edged with sage green. There is a window at one end of the room, with a door at the opposite end, and there are two windows on another side. In the center of the fourth side there is a lovely old walnut desk, with dulled flowers painted on the panels of its doors. Above this there hangs a bas-relief of the Madonna and Child. At either side, set into panels by means of strips of pearl gray molding, with a hairline of sage green, are two mellowed floral paintings, above low, open bookcases. There is no other wall decoration in the room, and the effect is striking.

In the dining room of the same house there is a beautiful lacquered cabinet. Several Japanese prints, in narrow, flat, black wood frames, are hung on the walls. This repetition of the Japanese touch gives the room a feeling of coherence. The china consists of a complete set of medallion Canton. Instead of the regulation white table linen, tablecloths and napkins are of ecru pongee, hemstitched with henna silk.

A pretty arrangement for a young girl's room would be to have a set of six English prints, framed in narrow dulled gilt frames. The English idea could be completed by using a Queen Anne suite, with window and bed draperies of quaint, flowered chintz.

Many people make the mistake of hanging their pictures in zigzag heights about the room. This arrangement is especially bad. It give a topsy-turvy appearance which is most annoying. A general rule for the hanging of pictures is to have all of the upper, or else all of the lower edges of the frames on the same level. If the pictures must be hung from the molding, they should be hung with two parallel wires, or, better still, with two parallel reinforced silk picture cords of the same color as that of the wall. Wires forming an angle where they are attached to the molding are distinctly at fault, for they carry the eye away from the picture up to the point where, it is readily conceded, there is no object of interest. It is preferable, especially with small pictures, to have them fastened to the wall invisibly, by mean of short wires attached to small nails which are driven into the wall directly behind the pictures. They should be as flat against the wall as possible.

It is usually best not to hang pictures on a figured wall paper, especially if the figures are large and in striking pattern or color. Pictures placed on a figured paper, which has no sense of solidity, have a detached air. They always seem to be on the verge of taking wing, and that is an extremely uncomfortable suggestion, especially for a bedroom, where, above all places, we demand a feeling of repose.

In the composition of a room, all of the parts should bear relation to the whole. The pictures are as much a part of the room as the furniture which is used in it, and consequently they should be given equal consideration.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

THE LAW OF COMPENSATION.

ONE of the strangest love stories I ever knew came as a result of another story which was given columns of newspaper space, years ago.

The people of a little western town were shocked and surprised when one of their most influential girls ran off and married a former fiancé just before the day of her marriage. The elopement created a scandal which lasted for weeks. The girl's family was prominent, the man to whom she had been engaged for so long was one of the finest young men in the community—well to do, attractive and of good social and business standing. He was completely crushed by the loss. He sold the house he had just built, and resigned his position. Friends said that in two weeks he seemed to have aged years.

Then he received a letter from his former sweetheart in which she said she had admired and respected him always, and begged his forgiveness for what she had done, but said she had never loved any one but the man she married.

Blair said afterward that he never quite knew why he went to Montana except that he wanted to go anywhere to get away from his own town and he had heard that was where the girl lived. He was drawn there in his misery by a longing to know what sort the other man was. Afraid to go directly to the town for fear he would be recognized because of the newspaper stories which had been printed, he got work on a ranch several miles away. He took an assumed name, and occasionally he heard bits of news about the man who was taking the place which he had intended to take in the life of the girl he loved.

Once a school teacher stayed all night at the ranch house. Learning where she was from, he asked her rather hesitatingly if she knew the Smith family who lived in her town. She said she did. After that he found himself going occasionally to the nearby schoolhouse to talk to the little teacher. Gradually he grew less bitter, and slowly he found his new friend taking the empty place in his heart. In the spring, just before school was over, he felt he must tell the girl what she had come to mean to him, but he dreaded telling her the reason for his assumed name. One night he found courage to do it, however. He had barely started when she said quietly that she knew all about it—had known it all along. She had seen his picture in an eastern paper months before and had cut it out and saved it because—she was the other girl. She had been engaged for months to the other man. He had gone on a business trip—and then later, he, too, had written her a letter explaining. She had been spared, at least, the pity of her friends, for the engagement had not been announced.

The little school teacher and Blair are exquisitely happy together.

"Cut this Summer's Ice Bills with Alaska 'Cubed Cork' Insulation"

THE size of your ice bills this year depends upon the efficiency of your refrigerator. An Alaska Refrigerator, with its seven insulating walls and "cubed cork" insulation, will make every pound of ice do extra duty.

Alaska "cubed cork" is the most efficient refrigerator insulating material known. Heat passes very slowly through confined air, and "cubed cork" is composed of myriads of air-filled cells. Heat striking Alaska "cubed cork" insulation is deflected. The interior remains cool in hottest weather. Ice consumption is very low. Foods keep perfectly. Waste is lessened. Don't waste money on a less efficient refrigerator. Insist on an Alaska. It will pay for itself over and over again.

You can tell an Alaska by these features:

Alaska "cubed cork" insulation with its myriads of confined air cells which act as a barrier to the passage of heat and cold. "Cubed cork" insulation, specified by the Government for its refrigerators, has long been a distinctive feature of Alaska Refrigerators, the main insulating material of its seven insulating walls.

Alaska patented circulation system by which the warm air rises from food compartment to ice chamber, where it is chilled and the moisture condensed. The dry, cold air drops back into food compartment to circulate about the food and thoroughly chill it.

Linings of seamless porcelain with rounded corners; or of white enamel; easily cleaned.

Shelves of heavily tinned, non-rusting woven wire, easily removable for cleaning.

Ice rack of galvanized steel, heavily coated, removable.

Special drain pipe with patent trap to keep warm air from entering refrigerator; easily cleaned.

Tight-fitting doors. Handsome finish of several coats of finest white enamel or varnish.

Insist on seeing the name Alaska on the front of the refrigerator before you buy. Don't accept a substitute.

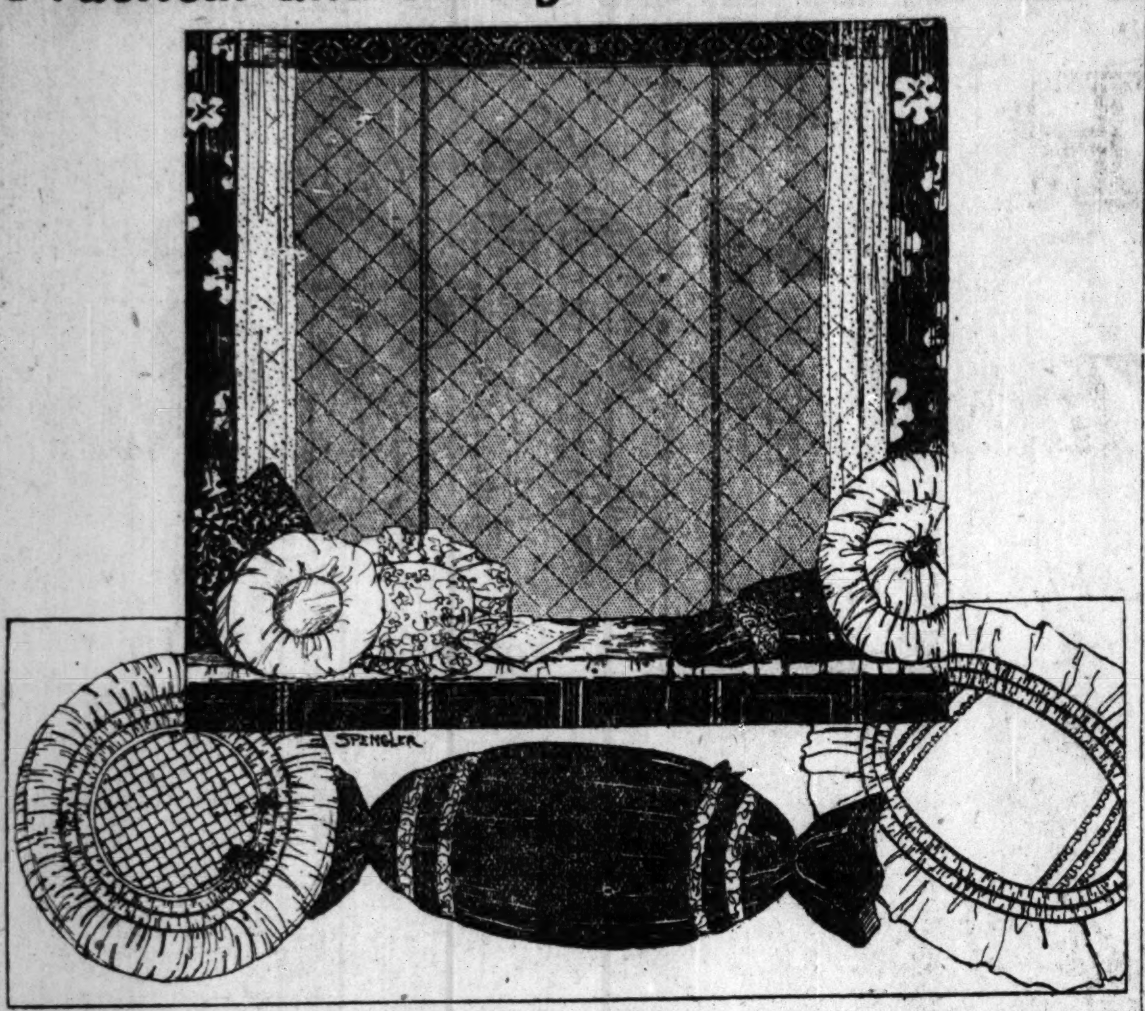
Practical and Fancy Needlework

BY CLOTILDE



ATTRACTIVE NEW PILLOWS.

SOFA pillows are made in a more fascinating variety of shapes and materials than ever before. One sees them made of every sort of material, from velvet and gold lace to gingham and batiste.

Perhaps one of the most attractive of the new ones is that made of a changeable taffeta in blue. It is a round pillow with the edge finished with a double bias puffing. This puffing is four inches wide. The center of the outside of the pillow, about eighteen inches in diameter, is formed of doubled one-half inch wide bias strips of the taffeta, laced in and out, close together. The edge of this latticework is covered with a one-half inch wide bias fold, and between this and the edge there is a shirred piece of the silk with two covered cords, one inch apart.

To make this, one would cut a strip of the taffeta three times the measure of the outside edge of the pillow. Shirring lines are marked off evenly on this strip, having the tucks through which the cords are run an even distance from each other and from each edge. The fold that covers the latticed edge covers the inside edge of this shirred piece as well. The under side of the pillow is plain.

Another stunning pillow is oblong in shape and is made of taffeta. Without the four inch wide puffing which finishes the edge, the pillow measures 27x 15 inches. Around the edge are three corded tucks, one inch apart. The silk is measured for this the same as for the shirring on the other pillow. Then the space inside these shirred tucks is made of the taffeta—two clusters of shirred one-quarter inch tucks set in across each end, leaving an equal distance between the clusters in the center and at the ends. These fancy outsides should be made on a thin cambric foundation cut the exact size of the finished pillow. Put the shirred tucks in the center piece first, and adjust and sew to the cambric; then put the shirred corded strip on, letting the inside cord cover the edge of the centerpiece. The under side of these fancy cushions is usually made plain.

Tailored bows, bunches of flowers, and even little designs are sometimes embroidered somewhere on these tops.

A long, melon shaped pillow is made of black satin. Each end of the pillow has a deep gathered hem faced with rose colored satin. Two bands of gold braid are sewed around the pillow, near each end, and a tailored bow in black is perched near one end, just inside of the gold braid.

Some pillows are cut crescent shaped —indeed, every shape one can imagine is used—and if one is possessed of pieces of brocades, tapestry, silk, satins, ribbons, heavy lace, or something similar, most wonderful pillows may be made.

Lamps of Unusual Charm

NO woman who has seen the rich, restrained colorings of Almco Lamps, the warm, subdued glow of their silken-shaded light, can content herself with any other lamp. There is a charm about them that is quite irresistible. Base and shade are designed together; every detail of trimming and finish is carefully planned to secure a perfect harmony of line and color. The sale of Almco Lamps is restricted to the better stores, where they can easily be identified by the Almco tag or label on the base or shade.

MY MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Young, but Observant.

A friend of mine served an elaborate dinner to a few guests, including the new minister.

Near the close of the meal the minister asked the small son what he was going to be when he grew up.

"O," said the boy, "I'm going to be a preacher. There are always such good dinners when the preachers come. M. K.

Comparisons Are Odious.

Last Christmas when my brother was in the hospital I sent him a poinsettia. The next time I went to see him he had two visitors. I noticed a small but pretty poinsettia with a single blossom on the table near his bed, and assumed this was the plant I had ordered.

Before the visitors left a messenger came with another plant. It was a poinsettia and much larger than the first one.

Thoughtlessly I remarked as I unwrapped it, "O, doesn't it make the other one look ill?"

There was a strained and ominous silence as it gradually dawned on me that the small plant had been the gift of the two guests. O. M.

Pricking Her Bubble.

I am a small girl with red hair. One day, thinking to improve my appearance, I devoted much time, thought, and cosmetics to an elaborate makeup.

As I was riding downtown in the car and pondering on what a wonderful effect I must be making, I heard a small boy say loudly to his mother: "O, mother, look at the cute little clown over there." C. M. L.

Then It Dawned on Them.

It was an amateur performance. There had been much preparation and much rehearsing. The players had remembered their lines—or most of them. The hitches had been few and far between and every one was congratulating himself on the success of the performance when the time came for the final curtain.

Rejoicing turned to despair, however, with that fatal curtain. It was an intense and serious play, and the audience had listened intently. The last lines were: "Did you ever see such a dawn on the snow?" spoken by the husband with great fervor.

"Never in all my life," his wife answered. It was a scene of deep emotion, a reconciliation between husband and wife. The curtain fell, or rather it did not fall. With the closing words the treacherous drops parted further and further, till at last came to view the uncle of the performance, clothed in a bathrobe and whiskers, energetically making the dawn with the aid of numerous colored bulbs. J. C. C.

The End of the Comedy.

I was visiting a friend whose husband was the pastor of a local church, and during my visit they entertained a returned missionary who had been working in a foreign field.

Arthur, the small son, had been much interested in the call of the census taker. Since that time he had been going to each member of the family with pencil and paper in hand asking nationality, age, and numerous other questions. We took it as a huge joke and thought the little fellow quite bright to remember so many of the questions.

Imagine our feelings when he marched up to our distinguished guest and, pad in hand, addressed her thus: "Mrs. Jones, how old are you?"

A gasp from the others in the room. Then, "How many children have you? What is their nationality?" R. F. W.

HONOR BRIGHT

Boys' Blouses and Shirts

BOYS!
Ask your dealer about the dandy 100-page Boys' Handbook given free to buyers of Honor Bright Shirts and Blouses.

192 measurements for perfect fit

There's a smart, clean-cut style to Honor Bright Shirts and Blouses — a roominess for active, growing boys — a "fullness" without "bagginess" that decidedly pleases mothers of neatly dressed boys. It's due not only to stylish design, but to most accurate proportions for perfect fit.

For each of the sixteen sizes, test measurements were taken from twelve boys—192 measurements in all—and carefully averaged for accurate proportions, Honor Brights are economical. They're made of staunch, sturdy fabrics, specially selected to stand hardest wear and frequent washing — strongly stitched — and most reasonably priced.

Honor Brights are absolutely guaranteed by the Reliance Manufacturing Company — America's largest maker of boys' shirts and blouses. You'll be delighted with the attractive assortment of latest percales — plain blue and fancy striped cheviots — khaki drill — and black sateen.

IS MARRIAGE A FAILURE?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything, with marriage, the institution?

W. L. George, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says, were "apparently successful." "Marriage," he adds, "is on its trial before a hesitating jury."

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question: Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor, The Sunday Tribune.

Give and Take.

When my husband and I were sweethearts we agreed to be honest with each other, always no matter how hard it might be. We also promised to be true blue unless we met someone else whom we really loved more; then, we agreed, it would be best to be honest about it and make the best of it.

Nothing was said about money—a mistake many couples make—but which, in our case made little, if any difference, as my husband gave me the first pay check which he received and always has, reserving enough for his own spending money, but never reserving too much.

I think honesty or dishonesty and the money problem are the two main causes of unhappy marriages. Of course jealousy is another cause, also nagging. My husband has seldom given me cause to be jealous or nagging and whenever I have had the inclination to feel jealous, or to do any scolding I have tried hard to tell myself how foolish it all was, and I always think, "Life is too short to spend it quarreling and worrying." It is better to accustom ourselves to our wives and husbands and if there are faults to try to help each other overcome them—in other words, be patient with each other.

When we started out together we had but little—now we are paying for a home, have a cheap car of our own, two fine, healthy children; while we are not members of any church, we are trying to bring up our children to be kind to other people and to animals, and to do as much good in the world as possible.

All in all, we feel we've been fortunate and that God is kind to us. And my husband and I have yet to have our first quarrel! We have disagreements, of course, but neither of us ever allow them to become quarrels.

And to the wives, I should like to say, when hubby comes home tired and a little cross, don't try to drag him out to a show or a band concert. Let him go to bed in peace! And don't sit around and pout about it either—aren't you ever tired yourself?

C. J.

When the Honeymoon Is Over.

I am afraid modern marriages are somewhat of a failure, and this is why I have come to that conclusion.

Two years ago today a diamond was placed up my finger and I was supremely happy and much in love, with visions of blissful married life with Jack as my companion and partner. He had always been so thoughtful and courteous.

The following August we were married, and today I am sitting alone in our cozy little home, that was made for two, while he is out riding with his bachelor friends in the same jolly little roadster that once had plenty of room for me.

I have lunched alone in my little dining room, read a little, and looked out of the window a whole lot for the car that does not seem to be coming.

When he gets home tonight he will say: "I intended to get home tonight for dinner and take you out to the theater, but we were having such a great time."

This has happened not once but many times, and my life is getting to be one long dreary existence of loneliness and longing for the consideration and deference that I certainly deserve as much now as I did before marriage.

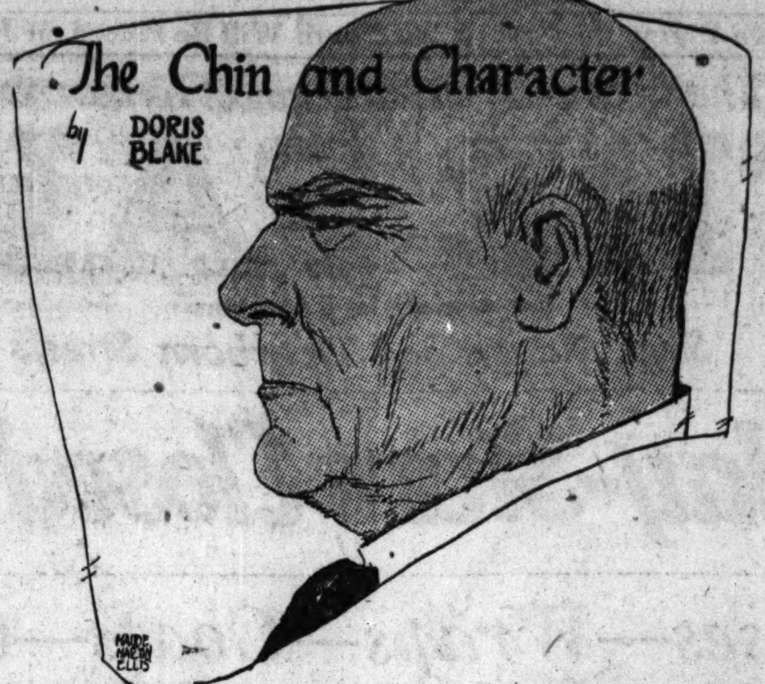
This is a condition which exists quite generally, especially among the younger generation, and I think the young husbands are to blame in most cases. Why do they cease to care for the companionship of their wives as soon as they have won them and the honeymoon is over? I do not think it is because the wives do not try to make themselves as attractive and agreeable as ever, for in most cases they do.

Boys, come, wake up, and put yourselves in the little wife's place! She holds her marriage vows as the most sacred and wonderful thing in the world, and her husband comes first in all her thoughts and plans. It is nice to have her meet you with a smile after you are through with your pleasure trips and stag parties, but how long do you think she will meet you with that smile if things continue as they are?

DOROTHY.

The Chin and Character

by DORIS BLAKE



"WHAT else could you expect from a man with a chin like that?" (This was said of one with a receding chin, whose weakness had just displayed itself in a moment of temptation.

You have heard about the woman with a dimple in her chin being "as fickle as sin." The indented chin is found frequently in the woman of many love affairs. It does not of necessity imply inconstancy, however, but it indicates a hunger and thirst for affection from the opposite sex which is often associated with lack of fidelity.

The narrow square chin also signifies a strong love nature. A woman with this kind of chin will marry into poverty for love in the face of suitors of great wealth and social position. When you see a beautiful woman rejecting a man of money, high social position, and good presence to marry a humble and unknown aspirant, you may look for the solution of the riddle in her narrow, square chin and find it.

The broad square chin shows tremendous strength of feeling. The woman with this chin is capable of the most devoted love and the greatest kind of sacrifice. She is sometimes jealous, so strong is the nature of her affection that if the object of it spurns her she is apt to do violence to whomever comes between.

In a man this broad square chin indicates the spirit of a courageous, dauntless fighter, and woe betide any one who stands in the way. He is relentless as an enemy. For his principles he will sacrifice all personal comfort. He sets out to win, and rarely fails the accomplishment of his desire. He is impressive and commanding, a fighter and a leader of men. It spells decision.

The broad, round chin also accompanies a capacity for ardent love and for great steadfastness of purpose. The broad chinned woman is faithful. You will rarely find her seeking a divorce. Breadth in physiognomy always accompanies endurance and stability.

The cleft chin is found in a face which is rather square than round. It denotes a love of art and reverence for beauty. Many of the great poets, painters, and actors have either a round or cleft dimple, and usually where there is a dimple the person is possessed of artistic talent, an agreeable and kindly disposition, and a great desire for admiration from the other sex.

A sharp chin indicates craft and acuteness.

A protruding, conspicuous chin indicates ambition.

A sharp pointed chin accompanied by a long, thin nose indicates unfavorable characteristics, a mean disposition.

A flat chin, particularly with thin lips and small ears, indicates coldness.

A prominence of the middle of the chin indicates a congenial nature.

An angular chin indicates discretion.

A full, heavy chin indicates dullness.

A projecting chin with a perpendicular forehead and arched nose means enthusiasm.

A long chin measuring downward from the center and pointed indicates egotism.

A flat chin, with an aperture in the center of the mouth which shows the teeth, indicates heartlessness.

A lower jaw full at the side of the neck indicates perseverance.

Look as Young as Your Daughters

Grandma used Sage Tea to Darken Hair

GRANDMOTHER kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied, with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through the hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color, and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

The Tribune will pay $1 for each child-ish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Our little neighbor girl came over the other day with a new gingham dress on, and she was carrying a child's fancy parasol.

I pretended not to know her. I asked her formally to come in, and if she would have a chair, and whom she wanted to see.

"Why, my outside is new, but under I am the same old me," she said.
B. R.

Arline was afraid of dogs. Her family tried in every way to overcome this fear, and before visiting a friend one day it was explained that the dog would not hurt her. The child protested loudly, however, insisting he would bite her, but after many friendly advances on his part she was finally persuaded to go out for a romp.

When she came in her brother said, teasingly:

"Let's see the place where Rover bit you."

"Well," replied Arline, meekly, "I didn't guarantee he'd bite." E. C. A.

Marie had never seen the rings which are put around pigeons' legs. One day dad brought home some new pigeons and she noticed the rings.

As she came in the house she said, "O, mamma, some of those pigeons must be married!"

When I asked what made her think so, she said, "Because they have rings on their fingers." M. K.

William came home and told about a new class at school.

"We all stand and the teacher gives us a word to spell, and if we miss we have to change places with some one."

"Who is the best speller?" his mother asked.

"O, Tommy is. He is at the head and I'm at the other head."
M. R. R.

Beulah was staying with grandmother as her daddy was ill.

One day I was there to lunch and Beulah was sitting off near the corner looking rather blue.

I asked, "Are you homesick?"

She replied, "No, I isn't, but my daddy is." D. H.

At noon we had food left over from dinner the night before. Frederic looked it over thoughtfully and then said, "Mother, is this a review lunch?" M. W.

Taylor visited his grandmother in Washington.

Upon his return, I said, "Taylor did you see the President?"

With an expression of "who cares" he said: "No;" but added with a smile, "but I saw Laddy Boy." F. W.

A little boy had slapped a little girl and the teacher was quick to rebuke him.

"Why, Jack," she said, "no gentleman would strike a lady."

"Well," said he, "no lady would tickle a gentleman." E. M. T.

(How'd she ever think of THAT name?)

By Mae Tinee.

It becomes more and more a pleasure to watch Elaine Hammerstein. She is so cleanly, so wholesome. There is so much charm in her quiet manner and the sudden way her face has of lighting up. I love her wise little smile! And, remembering her first wooden appearances, I can't get over wondering at the actress she has become.

In "Evidence" Miss Hammerstein MIGHT have had a classic. There's an argument and an unexpected twist to the story that lifts it out of the ruts of the ordinary. But, until the argument and the twist are reached, there's an awful lot of piffle to be waded through that not even the exceedingly good work of a most capable cast makes easy going.

The story starts on the old idea of the young man of family and wealth marrying an actress despite the efforts of his family to dissuade him. It continues on the weary round of her sweetness and his relatives' acerbity. Despite her charm and anxiety to please, she is treated with the most inexcusable rudeness by her husband's set, who look her up and down in the most approved snobbish fashion and sneer:

"An actress, pff! We cawn't be expected to accept her!"—all that stuff, you know.

The poor darling takes a lot, but on a certain occasion she turns and speaks her mind. Her husband is annoyed and feels she should have held her temper in leash. Vurr' well, says she, she will embarrass him no longer. She will seek her pleasure among the people she knew while on the stage.

So she steps about a bit, and meets an actor to whom she had once been engaged. He proves a cad, and circumstantial evidence all points to the lady's guilt. Her husband's brother, a judge, believes circumstantial evidence quite as much to the point as the real thing, and is on the verge of arranging a separation when our heroine suddenly swaddles him in his own toils and does not release him until he is a wiser and better man, thus working out her own matrimonial salvation.

Niles Welch and Holmes Herbert give excellent impersonations as the husband and the husband's brother. Constance Bennett, as a catty woman, is fine, and so far as their work is concerned no fault can be found with any of the members of the supporting cast.

At the director's door, it seems to me, lies the reason that "Evidence" is not a big picture.

CLOSEUPS

A report from the Flower Memorial library in Watertown, N. Y., says the movies are spurring the public to read. Of course they are! Who could see "The Three Musketeers" and resist the desire to discover how much like the story was the picture? Or "The Four Horsemen" and not gallop for a copy of Ibanez's novel? Or "Jane Eyre" and wonder what the novel really said about the crazy women?

The producers are on the right track when they delve into good literature for their picture material. A good book once selected for adaptation, their next care should be regarding the director and the casting director. A director may know how to get work out of his people, but if his idea of good writing is to be found in the police gazettes, he's going to do something awful to "Les Miserables."

And a casting director may be a wise owl as to limbs and complexions,

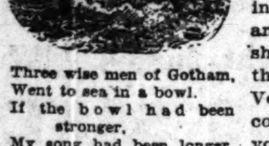
BEST SELLERS OF THE AGES

By Eye Witness.

Twenty-fifth Paper—"Mother Goose's Melodies," and Their Author.

NO American authoress is a better seller or better authenticated than this Boston lady whose collected works form probably the first book you ever looked at or into—not counting, to be sure, the prayer book out of which you were christened. This lady, born Foster, christened Elizabeth, and married on July 5, 1692, at the age of 27, to the widower Isaac Vergoose of Boston, was as actual a figure in the lives of the seven grandchildren to whom she sang her "Mother Goose's Melodies," which her son-in-law got out in book form 203 years ago—as actual a figure, I say, as the doting grandam who, say half a century ago, was chucking you under your then meaningless chin and snuggling her nose in a pink neck that had not known the yoke of care, and peering fondly into eyes that were trustful. As she dandled you on her knee she sang to you of many things which to her had been imparted by Mrs. Isaac Vergoose's book, and, supplementing that lore with copious compliment, she assured you, no doubt, that you were the darlingest baby since babies began.

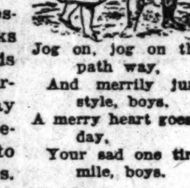


Three wise men of Gotham,
Went to sea in a bowl.
If the bowl had been stronger,
My song had been longer.

Is it not a chastening thought that nobody has ever thought as well of us since? "Mother Goose's Melodies" is the book of the time in our earthly pilgrimage when our pulchritude was an hundred per cent. As such, one regards it in later life with a certain contrition not compatible with the carefree spirit of the things in it.

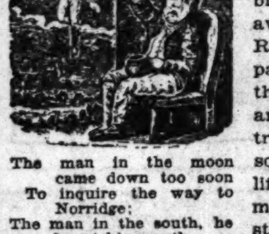
Like Thomas à Kempis, Mrs. Vergoose lived to be ninety-two years old. Her book—roughly—has been a best seller nearly half as long as his has. Both will continue to live—the first, because man begins as a child; the second, because he spends the rest of his days erring, and repenting, and seeking the way back to the innocency of childhood. His name for that destination is heaven.

For 203 years "Mother Goose's Melodies" has been among the premier best sellers. It never was more so than now. It is a staple item in "the trade," and if the Vergooses of seventeenth century Boston had held on to all the land they once owned along Washington street, and and if the descendants of Mrs. Isaac Vergoose could have retained to this day a copyright on her works, they would now be among the richest families in the western world. Son-in-Law Thomas Fleet, the Boston printer of ballads, pamphlets, and small books for children (shop in Pudding lane, which now is Devonshire street), sold his first edition of mother-in-law's rhymes for "two coppers." Today you may buy the book in a form good enough for any republican nursery for a quarter, or, if you want to spoil a child, you can go as high as five dollars.



Jog on, jog on the foot-path way,
And merrily jump the style, boys.
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad one tires in a mile, boys.

Via the patient copyist I asked Miss Oller at Field's to give me data about "Mother Goose" as an item in the trade. As Miss Oller knows books as well as sells them, the copyist came home with a lapfull of facts. For example, that store carries from fifteen to twenty-five editions of "Mother Goose" in stock. It has them with historical and biographical introductions and with Kate Greenaway's exquisite pictures. There is the beautiful Rockham edition, published by the Century company, and the sumptuous Volland edition, and then the Rand-McNally edition, which costs two dollars and is the kind of book that, in the lingo of the trade, "sells at sight," which means that it is so obviously what it pretends to be that it is a lifesaver for distracted uncles doing their Christmas shopping. Then Houghton-Mifflin have an old standby edition which contains pages of antiquarian lore about the Vergooses and the Fleets and their descendants.



The man in the moon came down too soon
To inquire the way to Norridge;
The man in the south, he burnt his mouth
With eating cold plum porridge.

And then the Boyd Smith edition—pictures and text both good—and the Many Plays of Former Enemy Countries Failures in London

By Archibald Haddon.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, May 27.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—As many as five failures were withdrawn from leading London theaters in a single evening recently. They were the French play, "Nuts in May"; the comedy drama, "Card Players"; the revue, "Mayfair and Montmartre"; the drama, "The Prodigal Daughter," and the Viennese operetta, "Love's Awakening."

Each piece betrayed faulty management. "Nuts in May," so named because the original Gallic title was unsuited to British audiences in their present mood—opposed to salacious humor—was an expurgated bedroom farce.

ALICE DELYSIA.
[Copyright: Und. & Und.]

"Card Players," by Haddon Chambers, presented as the leading woman the actress owning the piece. It suffered from miscasting as well as injurious sentimentality. The Chambers play lasted twenty-five days at the Savoy theater.

Cochrane is said to have spent $175,000 producing at the New Oxford theater the revue, "Mayfair and Montmartre." It ran for ten half weeks, which is brief for any west end revue. Additional running expenses on cast and star performers, headed by Alice Delysia (Lady Tree), must have been enormous. Delysia, it is reported, reached $3,000 weekly, consequently when she became ill and was ordered to rest the backbone of the show was broken. Nevertheless, one would have thought an entertainment of such spectacular proportions and crowded with clever artists would have survived the blow; but "Mayfair and Montmartre" had bad press notices, over which the producers quarreled with the critics.

"The Prodigal Daughter" was taken off at the Aldwych after a run of four days. It was a nightmare crook drama, so crudely sensational one marveled how the management could ever be expected to attract west end playgoers.

The fifth failure, "Love's Awakening," lasted four weeks at the Empire. The Viennese operetta was one of eight former enemy musical pieces staged at the principal London theaters since the armistice. The majority of foreign plays did not succeed.

See Vast Changes in Cinema Field.

Visionaries in the British film industry are forecasting incredible developments with the new wireless methods known as broadcasting. One technical authority asserts that the sending of photographs by wireless may in the future enable cinema spectators to watch distant events at the actual moment of their occurrence.

Arrangements are under way for universalizing broadcasting in this country under government auspices, which will shortly have important effects on the entertainment industry.

A woman censor of screen kisses is the latest cinema innovation in London.

The British board of film censors is not a government, but a trade organization. The board decided its masculine composition must be leavened by the infusion of femininity. Women members are expected to assist in solving a knotty sex problem like the length of a screen kiss. Women are supposed to have a better notion than men as to when osculation hugs impropriety. Similarly the advice of a female censor is said to be invaluable on the question of undress.

The choice for the responsible position is not definitely known, but the popular novelist, Edith M. Dell, is mentioned, and the widow of the late film censor, G. A. Radford, is likely to be appointed.

Another movie topic is, "Shall we have German films?" A sensation was caused in a picture house when during the showing of a British film a man arose and cried, "If you can't show better films than this, the sooner you show German films the better."

Like ex-enemy plays, there is no longer any opposition in London to ex-enemy screen displays. The only objection is to their addiction to sexuality.

Proposing a Vote on the Expiring Season's Plays

By Sheppard Butler.

THIS is the time of year when the dramatic editor, if he observes a hallowed tradition, takes his pen in hand to appraise the excellencies and shortcomings of the expiring theatrical season. The arrival of the flowers, the straw hat, and the picnic hound is no more inevitable in May than the coming of that most revered of critical institutions, the List of Best Plays. Something in the zephyrs of approaching summer seems to inoculate the playgoer with an urge to delve into the archives and see what he thinks of them.

MISS FRANCES WHITE
In "The Hotel Mouse," at the Apollo.

Here and there about the country the newspapers and magazines are fostering the amiable custom, and much good white paper has been covered with tabulations, estimates of value, and what not. The Pulitzer prize committee seeks, and finds, the best production of the year. The Ibsen Study class meets for tea and cakes and ponders the comparative merits of Eugene O'Neill and Avery Hopwood. It is a time for reckoning, and the speaking of one's mind.

Shall we, then, like the rest, review our blessings and take stock of the Chicago theatrical season of 1921-'22? It shall be as you say. The opinions of this department have been set forth in detail, from time to time, throughout the year. What of your opinions? If the spirit moves you to make them known, clip the ballot which appears on the next page, fill it in, and mail it to the dramatic editor. All ballots received will be tabulated and the results of the vote will be published as soon as possible.

A correspondent, writing to remind the editor that he has been remiss in this matter of reviewing the season, suggests that he do so by classifying the offerings of the year according to the percentage of entertainment afforded by each, as is done in THE TRIBUNE's cartoon critiques of vaudeville. This would be a perilous and intricate task, since the complete list is a long one, but it may seem diverting to apply the system to the plays of your choice. If so, enter your percentages in the small squares on the ballot, rating a flawless entertainment at 100 per cent, giving 50 per cent to one whose characteristics appear equally divided between good and bad, and so on.

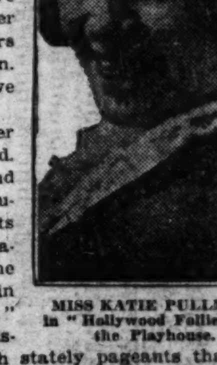
Seventy-eight, Some Old, Some New, to Choose From.

The tabulation for the season indicates that forty-nine plays and twenty-nine musical entertainments have been seen in Chicago since last summer. This, as it happens, is about equal to the number of reasonably successful productions made in the eastern half of the United States during the year, but it does not mean that we have seen all, or nearly all, the current successes. Many of the better plays brought to Chicago this season have been holdovers from the theatrical grist of former years. "Lightnin'," for example, was three years old before it reached the shores of Lake Michigan. We sit at the second table, and sometimes we have long to wait.



MISS KATIE PULLMAN
In "Hollywood Follies," at the Playhouse.

The marked preponderance of dramas over things with tunes is unusual, but easily explained. The times in the theater have been uncertain, and the playgoing public both thrifty and fickle. Musical shows cost money—in some the investments run to enormous figures—and with the comparatively modest productions of tuneless plays the showmen have less to lose. It cost Leo Ditrichstein no great sum to stage "That Homely Henriquez" and find it a failure, but some of our most puissant producers have had a calamitous time with stately pageants that did not attract the throngs necessary to keep them from costing more than they made.

The length of the various entertainments' sojourn in Chicago ranged from "The Bat's" fifty-three weeks, an unbroken record, to the modest

A Stride in Advance in Engine Perfection

National

Exclusive Features of National Efficiency

Gasoline, oil and tire economy proportionately greater than that of any car of similar size and power.

Positive elimination of squeaks, rattles and strains by means of patented vertical sill body design.

Absolutely vibrationless engine operation at all speeds from less than 1 mile to more than 70 m. p. h.

Acceleration from 5 to 30 m. p. h. in 9 seconds.

Greater accessibility through scientific attachment of power-plant accessories and simplicity of chassis design.

Permanent elimination of engine disorders from unburned gasoline and diluted oil.

Unusual road balance through measured distribution of chassis weights. Easier steering; simplified control.

$2750
f. o. b. Factory

Those invisible forces which cause internal wear and tear, reduce car life and lessen operating efficiency all unbeknown to the owner, are revealed when you subject a car to the low-speed test.

Engineers use it as the surest means of determining inherent efficiency. They are not misled by speedy running which evens up operation as momentum bridges over the low spots in engine form.

Proves Perfection of National

The smooth silence of the 1922 National Six when throttled down in high gear is evidence of the uniformity of its gas distribution; evenness of compression; minute balance; and accurate synchronization of all reciprocating parts. There is no vibration at any speed within its full range of from less than a mile to more than 70 miles per hour.

Longer Life—Greater Economy

For the very reason that the 1922 National Six will travel more serenely at slower speeds it is able to outspeed, outpull, and outwear other cars, while affording matchless fuel, oil and tire economy for a car of such commanding size and power.

The 1922 National Six is worth investigating before you determine on your next car. Its efficiency will prove a revelation when you subject it to the low-speed test.

two weeks recorded by each of ten attractions. That the best play stays the longest, however, is by no means necessarily true. "The Detour" achieved no more than a two weeks' stay, but, by any standard other than that of sheer amusement, it was a vastly better play than "The Bat." Some engagements were arbitrarily cut short because of bookings in other cities; in several cases plays departed at the height of their popularity and with long lines of would-be patrons waiting at the box offices.

But statistics have nothing to do with one's taste in the theater. The referendum proposed herewith is for those who know what they like. No rewards are offered other than the satisfaction of a task well performed, but to give a fillip to the proceedings this much is promised: to the one whose vote coincides most nearly with the average of all votes received there will be sent an autographed portrait of any player whom he or she may select.

News of Plays and Players.

Various changes impend in the theaters, the powers that be evidently having changed their minds regarding the prospects of summer business in Chicago.

"Liliom" will move at the end of this week from the Garrick to the Great Northern, to make way at the former playhouse for a musical comedy, long an item of New York's theatrical farce, called "For Goodness Sake." This numbers among its more important players John Hazzard, Miss Marjorie Gateson, Charles Judels, and Fred and Adele Astaire.

"The O'Brien Girl" will depart from the Grand a week from next Saturday, to be followed on June 11 by the comedy which George M. Cohan wrote for his daughter, Georgette, and which was played in New York under the title "Madeleine and the Movies." Miss Cohan having departed from the cast, the piece is now to be known as "Garrison and the Girls," and to serve as a starring vehicle for Donald Brian, employed until recently in the revival of "The Chocolate Soldier." Brian will have the rôle into which Cohan stepped, unannounced, on the second day of the play's engagement in New York.

Miss Florence Reed is still expected at the Woods in Bayard Veiller's new play, "The Divine Crook," but her coming has been delayed by the play's need of revision. Critical observers of its trial performances in the east agreed that it has a capital last act, but that it is slow in getting under way. It may come next week, or the week thereafter.

Other prospective arrivals are Leo Ditrichstein and Miss Marjorie Rambeau. Ditrichstein, now in the far west, is preparing for a journey to Chicago and probably will be installed at the Studebaker when "Irene" has completed its forthcoming engagement. He is playing "The Great Lover" again and may vary it here with some experimental performances of a new play written for him by Ben Hecht, the Chicago novelist and newspaper man. Miss Rambeau, in "The Goldfish," will leave New York soon and may bring the play to the Princess.

Raymond Hitchcock is reported to have withdrawn from the cast of the new "Ziegfeld Follies," now in rehearsal, and to have announced his intention of going into the movies. Nobody seems to know why.

The New Plays

OPENING TONIGHT.

"Hollywood Follies" (Playhouse)—A summer diversion sponsored by Will Morrissey, whose "Overseas Revue" was a lively incident of a season or two back. It runs largely to song, dance, and kindly satire on the picture makers, and will be participated in by many entertainers, including Roscoe Ails, Marguerite Marsh, Josef Swickard, Katie Pullman, Francis Renault, Joseph Regan, Peggy Worth, Alberta Curliss, and Betty Moore. Miss Mae Marsh, originally announced as a member of the cast, will not be present.

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT.

"The Hotel Mouse" (Apollo)—A musical comedy based on a popular French mystery play, with an Americanized book by Guy Bolton, lyrics by Clifford Grey, and music by Ivan Caryll and Armand Vecsey. Miss Frances White and Taylor Holmes are the principal players, and others in the cast will be Fay Marbe, Barnett Parker, Frank Green, Al Sexton, Stewart Baird, Elliott Taylor, and Cynthia Perot.

IMPENDING JOYS.

"For Goodness Sake" (Garrick, June 4)—A musical comedy presented by a variety of good players, including John Hazzard, Marjorie Gateson, Charles Judels, and Fred and Adele Astaire.

"Irene" (Studebaker, June 5)—A familiar acquaintance, coming back for a return engagement, with Miss Patti Harrold, a newcomer on the stage, singing the part of Irene.

"Garrison and the Girls" (Grand, June 11)—George M. Cohan's "Madeleine and the Movies," renamed and recast in its leading rôles. Donald Brian will have the part played in New York by Cohan himself.

"The Divine Crook" (Woods)—Miss Florence Reed in something adapted from the French by Bayard Veiller. Its coming has been delayed, but it is expected soon.

"The Great Lover" (Studebaker)—Leo Ditrichstein in his most popular play of recent years. Tentatively appointed to follow "Irene" in Michigan avenue.

London Snubs Plays of Former Enemies

German films recently brought to London deal with Othello, Hamlet, and great people of history like Dante, Lord Nelson, and Henry VIII.

New Star in Opera.

The operatic revival at Covent Garden is gallantly holding its own. It has scored two bull's-eyes in a week—the promise of a visit by the king and queen and the discovery of a new prima donna, Florence Austral. Royal patronage will benefit incalculably the newly formed British national opera company.

There is doubt whether a more signal success has been made in grand opera since the advent of Tetrazzini than Florence Austral. A week ago her name was unknown, as she had not appeared on any stage. After her first appearance as Brunhilde in "Valkyrie" she awoke to find herself famous as Brunhilde in "Siegfried."

Chicago missed presenting her professionally to the world. Two years ago she left Australia and a friend presented her in Chicago, where she appeared at the Auditorium. The experiment was satisfactory, but she was homesick, declined a contract, and departed for Australia, but stopped off in London, presented her credentials at Covent Garden, and took the town by storm.

Bernhardt May Come Again.

Gilbert Miller of Frohman's is back in London with several American plays. He says that during a visit to Paris to purchase "The Bat" for Baron Rothschild, he hopes to persuade Bernhardt to revisit the United States, probably in the drama "Daniel," which was written for her by her grandson, Louis Verneuil.

Too Hot in Paris to Attend Theater

By Henry Wales.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 27.—[By Special Cable.]—The torrid waves have driven Parisians to fashionable restaurants and dancing. The theaters are mostly empty, though there are many excellent attractions. Tristan Bernard in a new play, "What We Tell Woman," at the Capucines theater, is warmly commended. He plays a very Parisian young gentleman who in spite of being engaged carries on a liaison with a married woman and decides to marry the elder as soon as she gets a divorce. He sees his fiancée again and then decides to marry her, although the passing mistress discovers he has told his fiancée the same tale of love, she does not object. Perhaps Bernard doesn't know that women also always tell all men about the same thing.

Clotilde Skharoff, who is not the daughter of Admiral Tirpitz, the American press to the contrary, and her husband, Alexandre, have just returned from London and are delighting Parisians at the Mogador theater.

Henrietta and Augustin Hamson have an excellent translation of Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma," which is being played at the Maison Oeuvre with the perfection of that remarkable French company. What stands as matchless is the study of medicine and its professors. It is a steel engraving drawn by a most acute and experienced cerebral etcher. The manner in which Shaw builds a character with three sentences and two gestures, remarks one French critic, makes him "it" and makes him alive. It is a mark of the highest art. The piece is wonderfully acted, M. Carmes playing the part of Sir Patrick.

"Un Jeune Menage," by Louis Verneuil, has opened at the Theatre Potiniere and it is intended to amuse the scattered audiences who spend an occasional evening at the theater during the summer. He tried to be thoroughly modern and ultra—chose some fitting actors and found fitting scenery, but something is lacking. The young hero, Robert Handsome, son of an ambassador, wishes to rid himself of his mistress and so decides to marry. The victim is his flirt and before long they haven't a single atom of emotion for each other. They finally divorce and continue to consult each other over their prospective marriages.

"Sunken Bell" Back After Twenty Years

By George Seldes.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, May 27.—[By Special Cable.] — The chief theatrical event this week was the long heralded opening of Hauptmann's "The Sunken Bell," at the Grosses schauspielhaus. The play, which is a youthful work of the Silesian dramatist, received an expressionistic setting, but in general the veteran critics report the production revealed few technical changes since its last appearance in Berlin, almost twenty years ago.

The newspapers' criticisms of the play are at best lukewarm in their praise and reflect the opinion voiced by American producers and critics who are now in Berlin and who constituted the Anglo-Saxon death watch at the opening that the Grosses schauspielhaus, a huge, barnlike structure seating almost 4,000 people, is an unsuitable theater for the presentation of modern dramas or of any theatrical works not relying exclusively for effect upon mob scenes.

Tiding Over the Summer.

The only other opening this week was "Des Schwarze Pierrot," a musical comedy at the Theater Am Kurfuerstendam, Berlin's newest theater, and until recently the home of "Des Grosse Bariton," a German version of "The Great Lover." The new play is a weak offering of the type familiar to America as stopgap summer shows.

During the week the press performance of "Jenseits des Stroms," described as the "first film opera of the world," was held. The film deals with the experiences of a woman who lost her husband and who, before joining him in the great beyond, demands that Charon, the ferryman of the river Styx, let her look into the future. Despite his warnings she insists, and the full measure of the pain and sufferings still in store for the world is revealed to her. Finally she gladly drinks the potion that will wipe out all memory. The music is composed by Ferdinand Hummel. The entire thing will be done in America before long, according to the producers.

Chaplin Films Popular.

Charlie Chaplin continues to grow in popularity from day to day after a late start, due in part to the general German boycott of foreign films up to a year ago and part to the fact that the owners of his films were loath to release pictures for the German market until a suitable publicity background in the shape of Charlie's tour of Europe had been arranged.

Comic Opera Plot from Rossini's Life

By V. Desanto.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, May 27.—[By Special Cable.]—Roman theaters this week presented several new plays and one important opera comique. The latter is called "Rossini," with words by Edmondo Corradi and music adapted from several operas by Maestri Curci and Bellini. The opera, which is a sort of musical biography of the great composer, Gioachino Rossini, turned out to be a masterpiece of humorism. The scenes, laid in Rome and Paris, reproduce faithfully many of the interesting and most amusing episodes of the composer's life.

The author of the libretto needed little use of his imagination to find exhilarating situations, for there are hundreds of stories still related among musical and artistic people concerning Rossini. Most of them have to do with the composer's insatiable gastronomic desires. For him a luscious dish of spaghetti was more important than the success of one of his operas, and a dish of liver and onions was sufficient to relieve him of the sorrows arising from the failure of a new composition. Many comic situations in his love affairs also are embodied in the new opera. All of these are accompanied by musical extracts from "The Barber of Seville," "Italiana in Algeri," "Robert Bruce," etc.

Some critics censured severely the librettist and music adapters for putting on the stage such a great figure as Rossini in an almost ridiculous fashion, but others insist on the seeming lack of respect shown the composer because he lives in the popular mind as a most delightful character, for, despite his comicity, which sometimes resembled stupidity, his nobility of soul won the greatest affection of everybody around him.

but unless he knows and has studied types he's bound to pick a cast for "The Way of All Flesh" that would make you weep.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

B. D. T.: That was an awfully nice, appreciative letter, Mr. T.! Surprises are sure great things—when they are the right KIND of surprises. Yes, Miss Rich's work in "One Clear Call" could not well have been surpassed, to my way of thinking. Funny, though, how differently people look at things. I know a man who said "that picture was the worst thing I ever saw" and that "Beyond the Rocks" was "pure artistry." (And he's bright, too!)

SAMUEL J.: If possible you should take your gifted daughter to a studio manager direct. Otherwise send a stamped and self-addressed envelope for a list of companies, then write the studio manager of any of them, inclosing the child's photograph. If he thinks there is a chance for her he will let you know. But I'd send her to school for a few more years if I were you.

MERE MAN: In the sweet bye and bye we'll try to do that little thing for you.

JOHANNA: Your letters are becoming few and far between. Between home brew and the symphony concerts, you are pretty busy, I'll say! Mr. Griffith paid no attention to your letter? Well, that was careless of him! The "leading men in Washington" may do better. Is "law made for the protection of the fool that bites"? Well —O, Johanna, you DO ask such illygobbly questions!

MISS HORTENSE ALDEN

HERE'S WHERE YOU KICK

Dear Miss Tinée: One of the great outstanding errors of neglect in every movie, where a doctor makes a professional call, is the lack of his receiving pay for same. It has happened so often that it is a shame that the people who get a great deal of their education from movies should think that the doctor doesn't need the money to pay his bills. Couldn't you do a little missionary work among the directors or producers and see whether in some big picture that is seen all over, the doctor gets his pay? I am sure every doctor of every sort and description would remember you as being the greatest benefactor of the age to the profession. H. N. F.

[Editor's Note—Doctors usually send bills, don't they? It is not customary to pay them as they are leaving, is it?]

O, my dear Miss Mae Tinée,
You most surely love to flay
All the pictures that to you seem punk.
Many thousands every day
Are reading what you say,
To protect their eyes from watching what is junk.

You used to seem to me
To be as fair as you could be,
And to play no sort of favorites in your scolding.
But of late you cannot see
Any film which don't agree
With your ideas in the story it is molding.

Such a cynic you have got,
That to you religion's rot
If the tales made into pictures shall portray it.
"Little Eva"—famous tot—
Positively makes you hot,
And you have to write your feeling to allay it.

To your mind "My Wandering Boy"
Gives nobody any joy,
And "Ten Nights" is really rotten as to story.
Though from a time honored play
Cheered by millions in its day,
Into it you plunge your knife until it's gory.

Then for you "Mother Eternal"
Is a burlesque most infernal.
And you sneer in hard-boiled fashion at the tale.
Though most women love to weep
You contend sob stuff is cheap,
Your invectives fall upon it, thick as hail.

Now it's evident that you,
If you'd do what you should do,
Would confine your criticism to the picture,
Even though you hate the story
Over that let others worry.
You're not hired to be a literary fixer.
B. H.

Browsing Backward in Search of Motion Picture Classics

Dear Miss Tinée: Your Browsing Backward idea is interesting to me. There are some pictures that I saw y'ars and y'ars ago, and have never wholly forgotten—and I'd like to tell the world about them.

Back in the old one reel days I recall Vitagraph's "Regeneration," with Helen Gardner; "Indian Romeo and Juliet," with Wallace Reid and Florence Turner, and "The Seventh Son," with dear old Mary Maurice and Jimmie Morrison. Then there was Helen Gardner's "Cleopatra"—one of the first five reel pictures made in America—memorable because of Miss Gardner's idealization of the title rôle. H. J. R.

Dear Mae Tinée: Browsing Backward recalls the old two and three reel Lubin, Kalem, Selig, Gaumont, Majestic, Reliance, American, and others, too numerous to mention. It has always been my contention that a story could well be told in two or three thousand feet of film. Supporting this theory are the many recent drawn out photoplays, the extra reels distracting, instead of increasing or holding interest.

"Graustark," "Remington's Choice," "Red, White, and Blue Blood," "The Prodigal Son," and other earlier Essanay and Metro pictures are, in my opinion, examples of well told, capably directed movies. Carlyle Blackwell, Crane Milan, James Cruze, Robert Harron, Florence Lawrence, Edith Storey, Sidney Drew, Arthur Johnson, Lottie Briscoe, Earle Metcalfe, Edwin August, Gilbert Anderson, Mary Maurice, Maurice Costello, and Florence Tinner are gone, and it is regrettable. It would, doubtless, be futile to hope for their return, but present day producers might learn a lot from earlier pictures, in which these stars appeared. The party of the first part of the Bushman-Bayne combination being one of your old favorites (?), prevents me from detailing his ability. FREDDIE T. M.

[Ed. Note: Don't pay any attention to me—just pit out what YOU think.]

Dear Madam: How many remember Sarah Bernhardt's "La Tosca" and "Queen Elizabeth"? I wonder what we would think today of Lillian Russell's "Firefly" and Fritzi Scheff's "Pretty Mrs. Smith." Most of us have forgotten about "The Great Leap," one of the first pictures in which Mae Marsh was featured. Weren't Miss Marsh and Bob Harron just splendid in that ancient picture "The Battle of Elderbush"? Some of us thought Mary Alden a star back several years ago, and can remember her in "The Double Knot," in which she was featured. I've seen all the Carmens to date, but Marguerite Snow's Carmen of some eight or nine years ago has the others skinned a mile. In the old days Pauline Bush was another of my prime favorites. Ethel Grandin we liked too, in "Jane Eyre," but Ethel is among the missing. J. B. D.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Rome's Perpetual Fountains Fed by Mountain Streams

By Mme. X.

ROME, ITALY.—[Special Correspondenle.]—In Lake Mirhigan Chicago has its water supply at it gates, a never ending source of pleasure and delight. Since the time of the Roman empire, Rome has tapped the springs and streams of the distant Alban mountains and, from that day to this, abundant supplies of water have unceasingly flowed down, across the campagna, and through the hundreds of fountains which are the most striking and distinctive features of the Eternal sity.

From the famous Quattro Fontane [four fountains] on the summit of the Quirinal hill an irrepressible stream escapes and flows down the street car rails. The fountain of Trevi gushes in magnificent torrents so that its roar is heard for blocks around, especially at night. In every courtyard, on almost every street corner from some ornamental spout or practical pipe the unceasing streams flow, pouring down from the seemingly inexhaustible mountain springs and lakes. At night the sound, which has a distinct rhythmic beat in it, grows louder and more insistent until it seems, not like gushing water, but more like the wind in a forest of pine trees, or the waves breaking on a sandy beach. Those old Romans did many amazing things, but nothing more extraordinary than the carrying of the mountain springs, across the intervening miles, in those solemnly stalking aqueducts to their beloved city.

Spirit of New Italy.

Before leaving Rome a word is due the Italians in regard to the great "Monumento Trionfale" at Rome, of which I spoke somewhat slightingly a few weeks ago. As a work of art perhaps it leaves something to be desired. Why, in a city where for 2,000 years warm, cream colored travertine had been successfully used, the designers of this omnipresent, overpowering creation should have used the glaring, imperishably white Carrara marble which they did, is hard to understand.

Copying the old Romans and Greeks they furthermore gilded the statues with which the pile is adorned so that the effect is dazzling and inescapable. It dominates almost every street of the city and is the most striking object in all the countryside. Even St. Peter's dome has to take a back seat.

But when it is more closely examined, the spirit of the whole comes out and takes hold of the imagination. It is the expression of the spirit of new Italy. While the statue of Victor Emmanuel II. is the principal figure and smites the eye rather ferociously at first, second thought shows it is only a symbol of that victory over the past which was achieved under him and which led to that unity of Italy which had been the dream of every thoughtful Italian from the time of Dante down to Mazzini.

The real passion of the monument is found in the grave of the unknown soldier which lies at the foot of the towering equestrian statue of the first of the kings of modern Italy. There is the pride of soul of the Italians today. To that they point with solemn fervor. Fresh wreaths always lie piled high on it. The feeling is that grave justifies the millions spent on the glittering pile.

In the Van of Progress.

The golden herald angels blowing their long trumpets from the side pedestals are crying out to the world of today that Italy is awake and is as much a part of this strange new era as is the rest of the civilized world. More so than some it would seem, as one watches the Genoa conference. In electrical development she is in the van of progress. The process of creating and transmitting "white coal," as it is called, has made more progress here than in our own country, according to our greatest local expert, Samuel Insull, if he was rightly quoted. Not having an ounce of coal of her own, Italy will have to use the water power which lies in her mountain streams.

To return for a moment to the national monument: An interesting course was pursued when the designs for the bronze intablatures which adorn the bases of the pedestals were under discussion. These designs were exposed on the monument, and the population of Rome was asked to vote on them. They flocked to the voting place. Three times they vetoed the submitted plans. New ones were offered. The fourth set met with their favor and was accepted.

It might be worth while to give the people of Chicago some such opportunity to express their views with regard to the proposed adornments of the city. The designs for the facade of the Duomo at Florence were submitted to the Florentine in the fifteenth century, and those followed were the ones accepted by the people of that time. This course of procedure tends to educate the community and to plant and develop in the citizens of a town a sentiment of proprietorship and responsibility most useful to both citizens and city.

The Tree Dante Liked.

Florence for centuries has been the goal and shrine of poets and artists. Ever since Dante, gloomy and introspective, trod these narrow, winding, twilit streets, ever since Giotto designed towers and painted chapel walls, their spiritual heirs have found this spot inspiring and satisfying. Both these long dead celebrities are living presences to a far greater degree than any of the famous dead in America seem to be.

Up in Miss Mary Nixon's garden on the slopes of Fiesole is a somber, stern looking little myrtle tree under which it seems to be a well authenticated fact that Dante Alighieré used to sit and meditate, probably on the failings of the typesetters or proofreaders of his time. That he sat there is attested by an ancient tablet set in the wall by a long deceased owner of the villa and garden.

I am sure that he did. That tree would account for a great deal of the sorrow and bitterness of Dante's self-expression in his poetry. It is not the kind of tree that a cheerful man, a dry goods dealer or a pork packer, would choose to sit under. I never heard of a myrtle tree before; only of the gentle little creeping thing that bears shy blue blossoms and was used by the Greeks to crown heroes or muses, I forgot which. But this myrtle tree is not a negligible piece of vegetation. It takes hold on the fancy and will not be denied, it is so more than vegetable. It has an almost human look to it and it is so easy to imagine Dante as sitting under it after a hot climb up the hillside. It's a tree that would cool off anybody in a short time, and was probably largely responsible for the "Inferno," though probably not "Il Paradiso." Such a cheerful piece as "Lochinvar" never could have been written in the shade of so austere and fateful a tree.

Oakley Villa Charming.

Not far away is the charming villa of Horace Oakley, Chicago's well known lawyer and scholar. It is called "Villa Badia" and is situated in a friendly garden. It is being transformed by its new owner into a most habitable dwelling. Modern American plumbing does give an air of comfort not always to be found in a house which was old in the fourteenth century. There is a stately drawing room with gray stone columns separating one end from the rest of the room. It is most attractively furnishd. There are some old Italian chairs and tables and a table and desk of the Jacobean period in England. There are also a few pieces of Russian origin purchased from Russian refugees who have taken shelter in Florence and are selling off their possessions to provide themselves with bread.

The most interesting things in the room, however, are two large, soft, brownish gray rugs which were made by soldiers blinded in the war. There is at Florence a well established institution for reëducating disabled Italian soldiers. A sister of Martin Ryerson of Chicago has been largely instrumental in organizing and carrying on this work in Florence.

Opening out of this drawing room is a most delectable library, with panelled walls and just that tranquil, serious air that the library of a genuine book lover like Mr. Oakley should have. The nearby dining room has a fine old ceiling of wooden beams and planks with the rich, warm hues which Italian chestnut achieves with long centuries of use. It is a finely proportioned room, high of ceiling and generous in size. It opens out on to a broad terrace which is shaded by a most umbrageous wistaria vine, now just moulting its violet colored blossoms. In the distance, pale as a purple dream, floats Brunelleschi's dome, though Giotto's tower is not visible at just that point.

Mr. Oakley, in his lovely Florence villa, is but one more disastrous proof of the complete superfluity of the feminine gender in the life of so capable a bachelor.

Seeking the Heights.

Active life still claims the owner of "Villa Badia" and he returns soon to Chicago, leaving villa, garden, and a fine, shiny, new automobile behind on the slopes of Fiesole. It will be a vision of delight to him many a time as the grime and smoke of Chicago smite his senses. He is giving it as a summer residence to Mrs. Mason Bross and Mrs. Henry Gilbert for the next few months.

While Florence itself is one of the hottest places in Italy in the warm season, the heights about it enjoy, especially mornings and evenings, the most delightful, cool freshness, together with a set of views to which no picture postal can begin to do justice. The many towered city shimmering in the heat, the glowing, violet hued mountains, the shining river winding through the landscape, the sharply pointed black cypresses which stand out so definitely on the backgrounds of blazing flowers—can't you see it all?

On the opposite hillside, in plain sight from Mr. Oakley's villa, is that of the Arthur Actons. Mrs. Acton, as I said last week, is a Chicago woman and the youngest sister of John J. Mitchell. They have a beautiful home there filled with some of the rarest furniture and ornaments to be found in a much ransacked world. Mr. Oakley's next door neighbor is James W. Ellsworth, whose place, Villa Palmieri, is the most historic and interesting of all the places about Florence. It was a favorite residence of the magnificent Medici, Lorenzo, and has housed many celebrities from the thirteenth century down, of whom Boccaccio was probably the most famous.

City of Great Contrasts.

Such a restless, migratory, energetic lot we Chicagoans are! A most fluid humanity than our ancestors certainly. They stayed more at home with their noses to the grindstone. Perhaps that is what made it more possible for some of us to roam today. At the moment Constantinople is the goal of many tourists. The tales from there of the contrasts of dire poverty (a poverty whose victims are among the once brilliantly powerful and rich), with riotous extravagance, the drama set in the exotic beauty of that capital of old Byzantium, is drawing there the imaginative, sensation seeking Americans. The English and French searchers after excitement have been there for months, and have made it the gayest place in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Sudler and Miss Sudler of Chicago, who were in Florence last week, are among those who have gone to Constantinople, as are Mr. and Mrs. Russell T. Matthias. Mrs. Arthur Ryerson and her brother, John Borie (better known as "Dick" Borie), left Paris for Turkey a week ago. Mrs. Ryerson is planning to help Thomas Whittemore in his work among the hapless Russians of all classes who have taken refuge there and are waiting for the millennium when Trotzky, Lenin, Tchitcherin, and their followers shall have tumbled off their perches.

Mrs. Ryerson will return by way of Greece and Italy, and plans to visit Count and Countess Bolognesi at Sarajevo on her way back. She will be in France for the dedication of the American memorial hospital at Rheims, to which she has contributed so much in both money and work.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tyson, who have also been largely instrumental in making this hospital possible, will be at the dedication. Long before we went into the war Mrs. Tyson, at the head of the Chicago branch of the American Fund for French Wounded, helped organize the parent society which ultimately brought into being this fine institution. The funds left over from the A. F. F. W. were devoted to founding this hospital for women and children which will for all time to come stand as a memorial of the sympathy of the American people for France in the time of the latter's greatest stress.

Off to Spain.

Not all nomadic Chicago is bent towards the Bosporus. Some of our wanderers have turned their faces away from the bitter excuse for spring which is the year's contribution to meteorology in France and Italy and England, and are seeking the Spanish idea of the season. Some time ago Mrs. Emily Crane Chadbourne and Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis went together to Spain to be gone until mid May. Last week Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham and Miss Mary Waller followed suit, to be gone until the horse chestnut trees on the Champs Elysées are in blossom.

Apropos of Mrs. Chadbourne, she has, through Robert Allerton, given the furnishings of her Paris apartment to the Chicago Art institute. For years she has been devoting herself to making what is now a choice and unusual collection of rare and beautiful things for this apartment. She is a real connoisseur, one of the class who has had time, money, and a cultivated taste to bring to her hobby. Mr. Allerton is arranging for the transportation of this valuable gift to our museum of art, and will superintend its installation. We are acquiring there a collection of furniture of great educational value to all householders and especially to the men and women who devote themselves to the business of equipping and adorning the interior of houses.

Spurs to Imagination.

Americans are far ahead of the rest of the world in interior furnishing. The only danger is that our homes are too correct and have a too up to date effect. There is apt to be no suggestion of a past life on the part of the occupants. In the homes of older Europe there is always a story told of former generations. But then, we are only a few generations old, and the immediately preceding generations are considered by their present progeny as having had no taste or knowledge.

Not until we get the sense of respect for our own ancestors, which is a great part of the life of other, more experienced nations, will we acquire that ripe aspect which is so great a part of the charm of life over here. It is the mellow quality in European civilization which draws the hordes of Americans to cross the ocean. I am discovering a little of why my countrymen travel in countries where there are no practical telephones, no sufficient steam heat or hot baths. We seek what we do not find at home. Our atmosphere is too clear, too hard, and lacks that flavor of the old and tragic which means poetry and drama to the imagination. We Americans have an imagination which is unsatisfied at home. A problem is in the process of being solved.

Miss Katherine Leighton Hilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hoyt Hilton of 5640 Woodlawn avenue, will become the bride of John H. Bradley Jr. of Dubuque, Ia., on June 24. The wedding will take place at the country home of her parents near Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. James Keeley have issued invitations to the marriage of their eldest daughter, Dorothy, to Graham Aldis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur T. Aldis of Lake Forest, on Thursday afternoon, June 15, at 4 o'clock in St. Chrysostom's church. The Rev. Norman Hutton will officiate. Edgemere Woman's Club Announces June Card Party

By Kate Webber.

THE Edgemere Woman's club is planning a June card party to be held on the 13th of next month at 1:30 o'clock at the Marigold gardens. Though the official club season is over until the work is taken up in the autumn, the members plan that their philanthropies continue through the summer months.

Organized in 1919 as a Red Cross unit, the club emerged into a club notable for its activities, and it has grown until the present membership is 200. It is chartered under the laws of Illinois, and is a member of the Ninth district and of the Illinois and General Federation of Women's Clubs.

There are six divisions of work, including the department of American citizenship, applied education, fine arts, legislation, and public welfare.

The philanthropy division and the division of friendly coöperation with ex-service men disclose a background of solid achievement. Organized help and the expenditure of several thousand dollars a year have been given to needy widows and destitute families. A committee also provides fresh fruits and appetizing food for the ex-soldiers at the Oak Forest tuberculosis sanitarium.

The annual evening party of the club was held on April 25, when additional funds were raised to carry on their worthy charities. The annual meeting and election of officers was held on May 16, when the following were named to serve the ensuing year. President, Mrs. Herman L. Hartenstein; vice presidents, Mrs. Hiram B. Curtis, Mrs. George E. Lettie, and Mrs. Philip H. Meyers; recording secretary, Mrs. Edmund Curtis; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Herbert Batson; treasurer, Mrs. Charles H. Challen; financial secretary, Mrs. Frederick C. Justice.

COMING OPERA AND CLOSING FESTIVAL

By Edward Moore

Ravinia Sends Word of Notable Summer Season

THAT "Boris Godunoff" will be the first night opera at Ravinia, on June 24, is now a matter of definite announcement by Mr. Eckstein, although there had been tentative indication that he would put up Moussorgsky's notable work to start the season with what will be, after all, a real novelty; for all that Chicago knows of the opera at first hand was that obtained from the two or three performances given by the visiting Russians earlier in the spring. When, in that period which is now spoken of as ante bellum—meaning specifically anywhere between 1912 and mid summer of 1914—the Metropolitan first showed symptoms of reacting toward the distinctive Russian school in lyric drama, it selected "Boris" for the initial experiment, and followed it with Borodine's "Prince Igor."

The former has ever since been retained in the ready répertoire of the Metropolitan; and in its numerous repetitions the Russo-Italian basso, Adamo Didur, has won a large measure of his high repute as a clinging actor. So, with Didur for the big part of the usurper, Ravinia is well equipped for its first dip into the fascinating literature of what may be called the true Russian opera. The roster of the new Ravinia company indicates, for those who know the quality of the singers, that the task of casting the other rôles in "Boris" will involve no great difficulty.

"L'Amico Fritz" Promised.

Other additions to the Ravinia répertoire will be "Otello," "Le Chemineau," and Mascagni's long neglected "L'Amico Fritz." We know "Otello" and "Le Chemineau," as we know "Boris," for notable items in the modern répertoire; but only the oldsters recall Mascagni's opera, which he wrote while the immense world vogue of "Cavalleria Rusticana" was fresh. As the title shows, he took for his libretto one of the several plays which the Alsatian collaborators who wrote as Erckmann-Chatrian made for the French theater. An English version of the play, prepared by the late Stanislaus Stange to reap advantage from general interest in Mascagni's second opus, was acted in Chicago about thirty years ago by the late John Mason and Marion Manola.

The records seem to show that the American premièré of "L'Amico Fritz" was given in Philadelphia by the late Gustave Hinrichs, well remembered in Chicago as concert master for Theodore Thomas when the latter was the artistic and musical chieftain of the ambitious and ill fated American Opera company. Also, that the principal rôles were first sung in this country by Selma Koert-Kronold, Giuseppe Del Puente, and A. L. Guille—all dead. They, it may be added, took part in the first American performance of "Cavalleria," also: that, too, was in Philadelphia, under Hinrichs.

It will be interesting to all of us to hear this early work by the still active Mascagni, whose "Piccolo Marat" is among the current successes of the Italian stage. We know little of his recent work save "Isabeau," staged in 1917 by Campanini. His "The Maskers," a comic opera, is beloved of the Italians. His "Lodoletta" was put on by the Metropolitan in 1917; but not even Caruso could save it. And his "Cavalleria" survives, in robust condition, with vast popularity everywhere, thanks to the vitality of the music at which the pundits sneered in 1891.

Festival's Final Events.

Two more concerts remain on the list of the north shore music festival at Evanston. Elgar's "Caractacus" will be sung tomorrow night under the direction of Peter Christian Lutkin. The soloists will be Emma Noe, Paul Althouse, Arthur Middleton, and Herbert Gauld. The A Cappella choir and the festival chorus will take the choral parts and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play.

The final event on Tuesday night will bring to attention some important singing by Margaret Matzenauer, mezzo-soprano, once of the Chicago opera, now of the Metropolitan. She will be heard in "Ocean, Thou Mighty Monster," from Weber's "Oberon," a group of songs by Wagner, and the final scene from that composer's "Tristan and Isolde."

Two novelties are scheduled. One is the prize winner in the festival association's contest for orchestral compositions, the other is a chorus, "The Bride's Tragedy," by Percy Grainger. Mr. Stock will direct the orchestra through the measures of the "Freischütz" overture and some excerpts from the Wagnerian operas.

Another Series Ends.

The Sunday noon concert series at the Chicago theater will come to an end today, to be resumed Sept. 3. They have established an interesting and commendable record.

An estimate proceeding from the theater is to the effect that with today's concert—the twenty-ninth—over 100,000 persons will have come to hear the music. Two hundred and fifty children have come from the public schools each Sunday on free admissions. A booklet printed by the theater gives information as to all the programs and all the soloists that have appeared.

Marjorie Dodge, soprano, will be the final soloist today. Nathaniel Finston, the conductor, will direct a program made up from the works of Wagner, Järnefelt, Debussy, Mendelssohn, and Tschaikowsky.

ANNE ROSELLE.

Miss Roselle comes to Ravinia for the first time, another loan by the Metropolitan opera to Mr. Eckstein. Among the reports of what are known as "personal hits" which came westward from that institution last winter was one about Miss Roselle's Mimi in "La Bohême," described by one of the veteran reviewers as "the best Puccini's opera has known in this city since Fritzi Scheff was of and at the Met." It seems that Gatti-Casazzi took Miss Roselle on the strength of her record as soubrette in the Royal opera of Budapest, where, as the saying is, she "sang everything"—meaning that she took part in the works of virtually all the composers of opera.

Some Promising Talent.

Several young Chicago singers have recently reached the stage of artistic accomplishment that brought their names into print, either in Europe or this country. Among them are the names of Eleanor Sawyer, Marie Luisa Fanelli, and Ella Kolar.

Miss Sawyer is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Smith, who were among the early settlers of Chicago. She studied in Paris, appeared in Beerbohm Tree's company in London, and then transferred her activities to the musical stages of Italy and France. The cable reports her as having scored as Santuzza in "Cavalleria Rusticana" at the former Royal Opera house of Berlin.

Miss Fanelli was born in Chicago of Italian parentage. A clipping from an Italian paper carries the information that she sang Aida in the opera of the same name at Padua last month, and, it would seem, with considerable success.

Miss Kolar is of Bohemian descent. Having pursued her musical studies in this city, she, too, made her debut in Italy, and is now back in this country, where she has been making concert appearances. They liked her in Boston.

There is also word that Marcella A. Schoenthaler, Chicago pianist, was recently granted the degree of bachelor of music.

Here and There in Music.

Alexander Glazounoff, of deserved fame among the melodists of Russia, plans to come to this country next season for a tour as conductor and concert pianist. He was born in Petrograd in 1865, and is the composer of eight symphonies, a number of tone poems, many compositions in smaller form, a violin concerto which has been played by Elman, Zimbalist, and others, and several ballets made known to the United States by Pavlowa and her company.

A new Russian composer, Leopold Herwen, seems destined to add his note to the insanity of the extreme left of musical modernism. "If it pleases me to suppress tonality," he says, "I do so." Whereupon he mentions a sonata from his pen in C sharp minor, which never uses C sharp, also an orchestral piece where the first violins are divided into four parts and tuned in quarter tones as well as half tones.

It is his aim, he maintains, to reawaken the auditory sense atrophied by centuries of harmonies, rhythms, sounds, and cadences, all constituting a "monstrous falsehood."

Oliver Wendell Holmes once wrote a poem which ended, "And silence, like a poultice, came to heal the blows of sound."

The Sunday Evening club will present a special Memorial day musical program at Orchestra hall tonight. The choir, directed by Edgar Nelson, will sing Parker's "Union and Liberty," Noble's "Souls of the Righteous," and Grieg's "Landsighting." Gustaf Holmquist, bass-baritone, will sing Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory."

The Mozart festivals at Salzburg, in which Lilli Lehman used to take a prominent directorial part, are to be resumed in August. Under the direction variously of Richard Strauss, Franz Schalk, and Max Reinhardt, several festival plays will be given by a company drawn from the Vienna Opera and elsewhere. Mozart is to be represented by "Don Giovanni," "Cosi Fan Tutte," "The Marriage of Figaro," and "The Escape from the Seraglio," and a new play by Hugo von Hofmannsthal will have its first performance.

MME. MARGARET MATZENAUER.

Mme. Margaret Matzenauer, mezzo-soprano, well known in these parts for her achievements in opera and concert, will appear in the final concert of the North Shore Music festival on Tuesday night.

The Four Part club, directed by Jane Odgen Hunter, sends word of a concert to be given at Academy hall, Fine Arts building, this afternoon. A diversity of choral numbers will be sung, with solos by Erna Jacobi.

The Wheaton band, recently organized, puts in a claim to your attention. It is thirty pieces strong and is under the direction of G. F. Greenwood, who is also connected with the bands of the 132d infantry and the Chicago Commandery No. 19. It made its debut at a community fair in Wheaton a few days ago.

Richard Wagner's piano, in his possession when he wrote the "Ring" music, is to be brought to America. It was presented to him fifty-eight years ago by Ludwig, king of Bavaria, and for nearly half a century has been standing in the drawing room of an old music teacher in Berlin.

ARBUTUS
BLOSSOM WREATH
"THEE ONLY DO I LOVE"

To the mystic life-long tie woven at the altar by book and oath, this Arbutus Blossom Wreath Wedding Ring adds the strengthening link of flower language. Five tender words translate its meaning, "Thee Only Do I Love." It was the wedding flower of the Puritans.

Ask to see this delicate design at your local jewelry store. Be sure this stamp—an omen of good fortune since Pharaoh's time—is stamped inside your ring. This stamp is, furthermore, your assurance of having the best wedding ring made.

Write desk 315, 1321 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., for 'The Story of the Arbutus.' If you cannot obtain the ring we will supply you through a jeweler near you.

AUTHORS AND ARTISTS JOIN IN ONE SUPREME ENTERTAINMENT FOR THE PUBLIC

All-Star Bill Which Includes Beautiful Women, Leading Literary Lights (Including None Other Than Joseph Hergesheimer With His Bright Shawl) and Oh, Yes!—Wallace Irwin Is To Be Among Those Radiantly Present

[By WILLIAM R. DURGIN]

HERE is a benefit performance of which the reader will do well to make note. I call it a "benefit" because the American public will benefit by this truly remarkable program; it includes such noted names as Joseph Hergesheimer, Booth Tarkington, Clarence Budington Kelland, Howard Chandler Christy, Frederick R. Gruger, Everett Shinn.

Just as talk was beginning to subside about Hergesheimer in connection with "Cytherea," along comes the shawl story which, as soon as it has had time to spread, will start anew the comments and criticisms on a very gifted, and very daring American writer.

But to revert to the big party:

The Cuban Who Knew Some Nice Girls

I wish I knew a little more about Charles Abbott's colorful past—or else had learned nothing. Only Mr. Hergesheimer can give you the whole story about Abbott, why he was without interest in Andres' allusion to the "nice girls"—or why he was in Havana at all.

I did get the whole story of the diamond, though, from Melville Davisson Post. He is on this double-bill of entertainment. He makes a pretty good living because of his firm belief in the epigram he stated thus: "The thing that keeps life keen is that you can never figure out what's ahead." I'll agree to that where Friend Post is concerned.

Some Back Fence Stuff

We'll meet Effie, sponsored by George Gibbs. It is Effie who breezes in with such observations as "Ain't we the helluva mess!" Only her delivery makes it sound like perfect rhetoric. No dull moments while Effie is about; ask her friend Cherry, who will be there, too.

Leave it to Jack Boyle to provide the thrill of the evening. This man's dramatic power is amazing. I wish I might give the bare outline of this new bit by Boyle, who surely registers true love and real hate. And E. Phillips Oppenheim, too, will be with us. He will bring Michael Sayre with him. But before you listen to Sayre, you will be told frankly that he is a criminal.

Everyone Is Invited

All this wonderful entertainment, the quality and quantity of which can only be hinted here, is in the June issue of The Red Book Magazine. Compressed between the covers of one magazine are big installments of four serial novels, nine sparkling complete short stories, three special features.

Ask the man or woman who doesn't have time to read all the magazines which one he or she really does read. Then get a copy and see if it isn't perfectly obvious why.

June issue on the news stands now. The price, 25 cents. The Red Book Magazine authors are headliners; all of them. Any story printed in The Red Book Magazine is good enough to be the feature story in any magazine.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

Last week's composite list of best sellers at five leading Chicago book stores was:

FICTION.

"The Secret Places of the Heart," by H. G. Wells.
"Gentle Julia," by Booth Tarkington.
"The Memoirs of a Midget," by Walter de la Mare.
"Kimono," by John Paris.
"Adrienne Toner," by Anne Douglas Sedgwick.
"Explorers of the Dawn," by Mazo de la Roche.

NONFICTION.

"The Outline of Science," by J. Arthur Thomson.
"The Mind in the Making," by James Harvey Robinson.
"My Memories of Eighty Years," by Chauncey M. Depew.

AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Six books most in demand at the Chicago public library last week were:
"The Beautiful and Damned," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"Maria Chapdelaine," by Louis Hémon.
"Kimono," by John Paris.
"The Story of Mankind," by H. W. Van Loon.
"The So-Called Human Race," by Bert Leston Taylor.
"Painted Windows," by the Gentleman with the Duster.

By Fanny Butcher.

"SLABS OF THE SUNBURNT WEST," Carl Sandburg's new volume of poetry, is, I confess, beyond me. It has seemed to me that every book he published had more of power and more of beauty in it—not, usually, in the same poems, but the proportion of strength and the proportion of beauty increased in everything he wrote. I felt, too, that the proportion of obscurity dwindled, that each collection contained more things which the ordinary nonpracticing poet person could understand and honor. He seemed increasingly elemental in his images. And every now and then some idea would appear so heroic in size as to be a memorial to its creator. The idea of steel being a mix of smoke and blood, of pig iron and men—that's a colossal idea. There were always enough of those ideas to give one thought for days. And always there were some lovely, gentle things, images of real beauty.

There doesn't seem, to me, to be the same quality about the verses in "Slabs of the Sunburnt West." Now and then there are memorable phrases, but most of the time the poems are not at all like the old Sandburg. Can it be that he is spoofing us? Can it be that he is a giant mocker? He says:

Civilizations get into the garbage wagons and are hauled away the same as potato peelings or any pot scrapings.

If any fool, babbler, gabby mouth, stand up and say:
Let us make a civilization where the sacred and beautiful things of toil and genius last—
If any such noisy gazook stands up and makes himself heard—put him out—tie a can on him—lock him up in Leavenworth—shackle him in the Atlanta hoosegow
—let him eat from the tin dishes at Sing Sing—
slew him in as a lifer at San Quentin.

He has one short "Primer Lesson" which makes one feel that he knows exactly what he is doing and wants to do it.

Look out how you use proud words.
When you let proud words go, it is not easy to call them back.
They wear long boots, hard boots; they walk off proud; they can't hear you calling—
Look out how you use proud words.

"The Windy City," that long poem about our town which raised a little storm when it appeared in the New Republic, is included in "Slabs of the Sunburnt West."

The Walt Whitman Fellowship dinner and celebration will be held on vard. The Whitman Fellowship is an organization which has no dues and no duties. Any one who admires Walt Whitman may be a "comrade."

Information may be had from Dr. Morris Lychenheim, Mentor building, whose wife is, I believe, a daughter of Horace Traubel, the Whitman biographer. Addresses will be given by Francis Neilson, Carl Sandburg, Ellen Fitzgerald, Clarence Darrow, Llewellyn Jones, and others.

The first volume of "The Outline of Science" has appeared in this country with the imprint of G. P. Putnam's Sons. It is edited by Dr. J. Arthur Thomson and is appearing in England as "Wells' Outline of History" appeared, in fortnightly parts. Putnams are importing the parts and binding them, including all of the illustrations. The American Wells was entirely reset, all of the colored illustrations were omitted, and the size of the pages was reduced. "The Outline of Science" is fascinating for its facts, well written, but naturally not the literary tour de force that Wells' "Outline" was. The succeeding three volumes which will complete "The Outline of Science" will be published at intervals of two months.

As some ancient philosopher put it, every cloud has its . . . etc. The first binding of the new Wells novel, "The Secret Places of the Heart," had a regrettable error in the printing of pages 44 and 45, and a special, delicate job of tipping in corrected pages had to be done before the book could be delivered for sale. There can never be any difficulty in knowing a first American edition now, because the correction is evident. And if you have a volume with the pages between 44 and 48 tipped in, you know you have a first edition.

And speaking of Wells reminds me that no end of reviewers have guessed the identity of Mr. H. G. himself is veiled in the pseudonym of Harrington Hext, author of "Number 87," a fantastic mystery tale something like "The Island of Doctor Moreau" and "The War in the Air." Mr. Hext's publishers admit that he is a very well known author who is masquerading, but they refuse as yet to tear off the mask.

The third and fourth volumes of "Mr. Punch's History of Modern England" are now available, making that unique history complete from 1841 to 1914. There is no truer, keener history than that which is mirrored in the cartoons and satirical literary sketches of the period in which they were made.

Beg your pardon. Twice. Once that was my own fault; once that wasn't. I said that Pope said "What fools these mortals be," and the Tabloid sharpshooters discovered to me that Puck said it in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." When I read "The Essay on Man," Pope said it, but probably in the more modern versions the wrong has been righted and Mr. Shakespeare has had his goods returned to him.

The other is the fault of Lady Gregory, who says in a sort of after-duction to "The Image" that it, with the other plays, was first produced in the Abbey Theater last year. A letter from Frederick Donaghey says:

"Lady Gregory's 'The Image' is not new by more than a decade. I owned and read a copy back in 1911, and liked it so well that when I first brought her and the Abbey players to Chicago in February, 1912, I arranged with her a program for a special occasion (I've forgotten just what) which included 'The Image.' It had previously been acted not only in Dublin, but in London also. . . . You would be after finding some words about the same by P. Hammond in a TRIBUNE dated between Feb. 5 and March 5 of 1912. Of all the plays in the old Abby repertoire 'The Image' ranked second only to Synge's 'Well of the Saints,' in my belief, as great art. The Irish people themselves preferred another play on the same general idea, 'General John Regan,' by Canon Hannay, but that was because it was less bitter at the expense of the dominant Irish trait, i. e., the capacity for self-kidding."

Bertha Ten Eyck James was awarded the John Billings Fisk poetry prize at the University of Chicago this year. The cycle of poems which won the honor is printed in the University Record for April. For sheer lyric beauty these dainty, lovely things are memorable. Prize poems are so likely to be merely the best of a poor lot. Miss James' verses would be the best of a very good lot. They show a deep, true poetic spirit, a sense of the singing quality of words, of the haunting beauty of a remembered gray day in spring, of the super-worldliness of poetry.

Some of her poems have a Keatsian quality—which brings an intriguing thought. Isn't, after all, lyric poetry the natural metier of the youthful poet? Aren't simple lyrics his or her real song? Aren't they the only convincing voice of youth? Free verse is the plaything of the mature mind, a mind stored with vivid images, with memories with allies of senses quickened by experience. Youth isn't naturally symbolistic or imagistic. It is forthright and lyric.

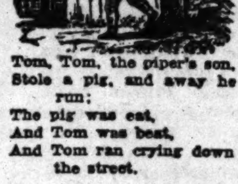
Jessie Wilcox Smith edition and the Blanche Fisher Wright edition, and editions with music scores in them. Excellent painters have bestowed themselves on this book. Why? Because it is so amazingly imaginative. Call it doggerel if you will, but the solid fact remains that nearly every stanza in it fairly leaps with some bold, quaint, dashing, comical or grotesque imaginative touch. The old lady—though she was only 50 when her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Fleet, began bearing children who cried for grandma's rhymes—was no routine rhymster. Is there anywhere a more audacious imaginative concept than—

Hey diddle diddle, the cat and the fiddle;
  The cow jumped over the moon!
The little dog laughed to see such sport,
  And the dish ran away with the spoon!

"Hiccory, diccory, dock" deeply appealed to me from my earliest years, and still does. I do not know why it did at first, but I think it does now because of its profound note of inevitability—nay, more, of implacability:

Hiccory, diccory, dock,
The mouse run up the clock;
The clock struck one, and down he run,
Hiccory, diccory, dock.

Time and doom, that hold us all, and end us all at last, are in that. There is no gainsaying it. The mouse run, as Mrs. Vergoose would have it. Was there aught else for him to do but run down when the appointed hour struck? 'Tis the drama of the Greeks in four lines, the Olympians intoning "Hiccory, diccory, dock"—inscrutable, profound, solemn—the muttering of fate in it. And how sure is the poetess' mastery of rhythm here. 'Tis amazing flexible, too. You can time it with the fairy galloping of a tiny Swiss watch, and it makes the same beat; or you can measure it by the slow ticking of the great, sad-faced clock at the end of the hall, and with that grave voice it likewise harmonizes. In those lines poetry found its pendulum, in a manner of speaking.



Tom, Tom, the piper's son,
Stole a pig, and away he run;
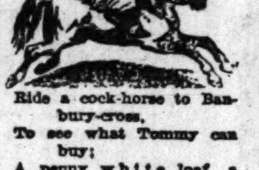
The pig was eat,
And Tom was beat,
And Tom ran crying down
  the street.



Ride a cock-horse to Banbury-cross,
To see what Tommy can buy;
A penny white loaf, a penny white cake,
And a two-penny apple pie.

But criticism is disarmed by all Mrs. Vergoose's masterpieces; for, if one attempted criticism in any captious way, there would come whispering to the critic from out of his past a little voice, infantile but honest, and it would say, "How dare you! How dare you be captious now—you who once wondered and thrilled and laughed and wept over these deft lines, so searching and so bold that no pretentious poetry of your later reading has ever been able to drive it from your mind? How dare you!"

I do not dare, and hasten to add that I think Mrs. Vergoose's volume an excellent book to use as an educational stimulator. It prompts to endless speculation and question.

The man in the south, he burnt his mouth
With eating cold plum porridge.

"But grandmamma, how could the man burn his mouth with eating cold plum porridge?" For more than two centuries grandmothers have been bidden to answer that. A valid answer is in Xenophon's "Anabasis"—if grandmother only knew it.

And the geography! If every "Where-is-that?" of a bright child were painstakingly answered as "Mother Goose's Melodies" is being read to him, that child would have a pretty good knowledge of the interesting world he has just come into. Do you know how many important places and people Mrs. Vergoose brings into her poems? Here are a few:

Babylon, London, Charing-cross, Banbury-cross, Gotham (there is a fascinating story to tell a child out of the reign of King John in connection with that reference), Norwich (Norridge), St. Ives, St. Dunstan, St. Swithin, Spain, Queen Anne and her Danish consort, Prince George; King William III. and his wife (a whole momentous chapter of English history in that rhyme), and General Monk (more English history), and so on. And what really are cockle shells? And what other famous poet besides Mrs. Vergoose puts the accent on the second syllable of contrary? Answering that when you have read your child the rhyme about the opinionated Mary, you will also have introduced him to a great line of Milton's, for Milton says of fame—

Fame, if not double-faced is double-mouthed,
And with contrary blast proclaims most deeds.

Of course, one has to remember that the title, "Mother Goose's Melodies," has become a catch-all for many childlike folk rhymes that Mrs. Vergoose never wrote, and that is why one edition so varies from another. Succeeding poets and publishers popped in new or older matter to make a bigger book. Of all the editions circulated in our time, the edition of 1833 is probably the nearest to the veritable original "Mother Goose." I say "circulated in our time," because so lately as 1905 it was published in facsimile by Messrs. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard of Boston, and from that facsimile the delicious pictures I have put into this article were taken.

Every one of the editions—the cheap, the costly, the unpretentious and the fine—are instinct with the history of the race that accounts itself old and takes itself seriously, but is ever young and ever wanting jingles.

Dear, foolish little book of nonsense! In the heart of every man at once a joke and a treasure! Artless rhymes endeared to all of us by every sweet memory of childhood and innocence and happiness; by the fond ties so soon torn asunder and never to be renewed, the ties that bound us once to our age of innocence. With impatient hands we push the book away when we think we are getting to be a big boy. 'Tis gone, 'tis gone, and nevermore will come again—that white age of each of us—our age of innocence.

The Best Joke I Ever Heard

What is the best joke you ever heard? Share it with The Tribune readers. One dollar will be paid for each joke published. Address the Jokes Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

The Strenuous Life.

It was rather late for suburbanite Jones to be getting home. Walking up the street from the station he heard some one following him. He increased his speed and the steps quickened also. He took a slower pace, the steps behind him slackened.

This was no time for showing agitation. Jones felt he must not reveal his terror by looking back. He turned quickly down a side street. The footsteps followed. He dodged into an alley, but was still pursued. In desperation he jumped a wall, ran up a slope and into a churchyard, where he crouched panting in the darkness on a grave.

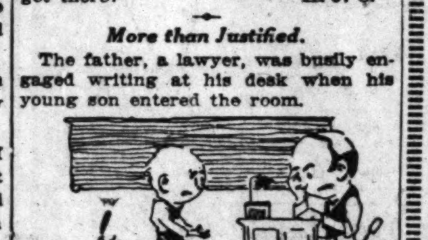
The man behind still followed. Quivering with fear of recent crimes, Jones awaited his pursuer.

"W-what do you want?" he asked.

"Say," exclaimed the stranger, mopping his brow, do you always go home this way? I'm going up to Mr. Brown's and the man at the station told me to follow you, as you lived next door. Excuse my asking you, but have we much more of this to go through before we get there?" H. J. C.

More than Justified.

The father, a lawyer, was busily engaged writing at his desk when his young son entered the room.



After a moment's silence the child said: "How old is Santa Claus, father?"

"I don't know," was the answer.

A few moments later the boy tried again. "Did the stok bring me here?"

"I don't know."

Silence prevailed for several minutes when the third question came, "Do cannibals eat people?"

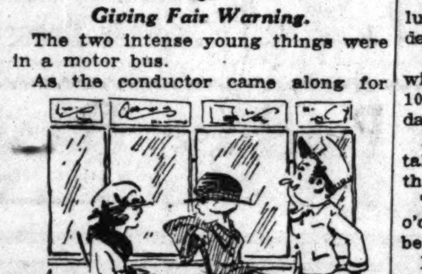
"I don't know!" fairly roared the exasperated parent.

"Say, father," said the young son, curiously, "who made you a lawyer, anyhow?" D. R. L.

Giving Fair Warning.

The two intense young things were in a motor bus.

As the conductor came along for their fares, one said to the other, "O, I just adore Carmen!"



The conductor blushed to the roots of his hair as he stammered, "Sorry, miss, you'd better try the driver. I'm married." W. J.

ART AND ARTISTS

Rubens' 'Adoration of the Magi' on View at Institute

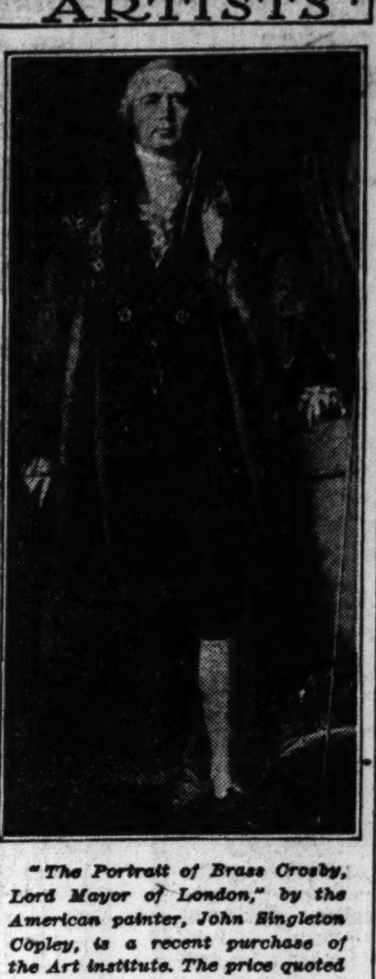
By Eleanor Jewett.

ONE of the most beautiful paintings that the Art institute has harbored for many a long day is found in the "Adoration of the Magi," by Peter Paul Rubens. The canvas is hung to the right of the stairs on the second floor as one enters the museum. The warmth of color in the robes of the visiting wise men is enough to stamp the painting as remarkable, without the added force of the brooding tenderness that lies upon each face, from that of the gentle Mary bending over her little child to the dark visage of the blackamoor standing in wonder behind the holy group.

Rubens painted at least eight pictures of the "Adoration." The one owned by the Louvre is practically identical with the canvas in the institute. As with many of the great artists of that period, the conception of a painting was his, and certain parts of the painting were his, but the lesser figures were often left by Rubens to the mercy of his pupils. In some cases that mercy was gentle, the pupil occasionally even surpassing the efforts of his master. In the present "Adoration" Rubens and his pupils effected a composition in which where master stops and pupil begins the line of demarcation is difficult to draw. It is as authentic a Rubens as any one of his larger canvases anywhere to be found.

For two hundred years this picture, taken probably from a Flemish church, was owned by the Dukes of Marlborough. In 1866 it passed into the possession of Lord Ardilaun, later it was sold to a dealer in the Hague, and last January it was brought to Detroit. It has been loaned to the Art institute for six months, and a fervent wish lurks in the hearts of those interested in the museum that before the time is up some one may be sufficiently generously inclined to purchase it for the permanent collection. The only other Rubens owned by the institute is the portrait of Spinola.

The "Adoration of the Magi" is valued at between $50,000 and $60,000.



"The Portrait of Brass Crosby, Lord Mayor of London," by the American painter, John Singleton Copley, is a recent purchase of the Art institute. The price quoted was $30,000. The portrait stands at the top of the long stairs, one of the most striking canvases in the museum.

Across from the Rubens' canvas is hung the portrait of Brass Crosby, Lord Mayor of London, painted the year before the revolution in 1775, by John Singleton Copley, one of the most famous of the early American portrait painters. The institute recently acquired this portrait by purchase, the price quoted being around $30,000.

It is a remarkable piece of work. The richness of the robes, sturdiness of figure, virility of pose, and strength of feature make it a portrait not to be overlooked. The sincerity of the colonial times gives it a worth in the face of later and more decadent work. Here is no futurism nor cubism impressed into service to convey an impression of the aura of a personality—but the person himself, Brass Crosby, Lord Mayor of London, a man who stood by his own decisions, even when they meant imprisonment by conflicting with the plans of higher authorities.

The portrait at one time was part of the collection of an Englishman, Archibald Ramsden. It is a splendid addition to our institute collection of famous paintings.

The annual exhibition of work by pupils of the art school of the Art institute opened yesterday in the east wing of the museum. The exhibition will close June 11 and the school commencement will be June 16.

More than seventy paintings were sold at the annual international water color exhibit, which closed last week at the institute.

Mrs. Hermann Hall, who has been connected with the museum instruction department of the Art institute for many years and who has been in California for a year is returning to Chicago in a few days to open the summer classes at the institute June 1.

Beginning June 5 classes in "Evolution of Costume" will be held Monday mornings at 10:30 o'clock.

Classes in "Interior Decorating" will start Tuesday morning, June 6, at 10:30 o'clock and will be held on Tuesdays until the close of the term.

Beginning June 1 classes in "Oriental Art" will be held on Thursdays at the same hour.

The Saturday classes will meet at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the subject to be announced later.

Raymond P. Ensign, formerly head of the department of decorative design in the Cleveland Art school, has been appointed the new dean of the institute school. He will assume his position in the fall.

Pierre Nuyttens, the Belgian artist, who has done a great many portraits in Chicago, is planning to give an exhibit of his portraits of the delegates to the peace conference held recently in Washington. The exhibit will include likenesses of ex-President Wilson and of President Harding. The latter has just been finished and will be shown here for the first time.

Robert Hartshorn's collection of drawings, dry points, and color etchings by Mary Cassatt, the favorite pupil, so it is said, of Edgar Regas, will be hung in the print room of the Art institute on June 1. A bronze nude dancer by Degas, loaned by George F. Porter, will add interest to the exhibit. Degas is little known as a sculptor, though as a relaxation from his constant painting this famous French artist did often seek expression of his ideas in the modeling of figurines.

Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick has arranged to exhibit the pieces of rare old lace, which aroused so much comment upon their entry to this country, during the summer months at the Art institute.

The Boston artist, Harley Perkins, has been appointed fine arts editor of the Boston Transcript, succeeding W. H. Downes, who has retired after being critic for the Transcript for thirty-five years.

Souls for Sale
BY RUPERT HUGHES

Remember Steddon thought she would find life in Hollywood easy if she would sell her soul for success in the movies. Rupert Hughes tells how she found her heart's desire, lost it and found it again—tells it in the same honest manner that has made his novels of New York life famous for their candor.

HAMLIN GARLAND'S WORKS

IT is with great pleasure that Harper & Brothers announce the publication of a twelve-volume uniform edition of the works of Hamlin Garland. Not often does the popularity of an author so completely justify a standardized collection of his works during his lifetime.

THE BORDER EDITION

Hamlin Garland's novels have come to be recognized for their historic value as well as loved for the sake of the stories they tell. He was the first American writer to paint a true portrait of farm life in pioneer days—not the idealized picture of romanticists. The titles in the Border Edition are:

Boy Life on the Prairie
Main-Travelled Roads
Other Main-Travelled Roads
Rose of Dutcher's Coolly
The Eagle Heart
Captain of the Gray Horse Troop
Hesper
Mart Haney's Mate

Terms That Appeal to All!

This week will show unusual values in pianos. The grand piano is now more in demand than ever before. Its distinction and beauty of line, together with the atmosphere of charm it gives to the room which it graces, awaken response in those who like to gather about them the better things in life. You need no longer deny yourself the joy and pride of possessing a grand piano. Our original offer enables you to obtain the piano of your choice. Read our plain terms. Tear out and mail the coupon today.

Our Terms

Come in and choose your grand piano. Pay down only a small sum on many popular styles, the balance may be arranged in thirty monthly payments. Musical instruments of all kinds are taken in part exchange. If you cannot come in person, send in coupon shown above. Clip and mail today.

Years of Delight

An instrument bought here will bring years of delight to its owner. The pleasure which you would derive from it this month alone would repay you for the initial cost. When you come home tired and worn, an evening of music would yield a liberal dividend on your investment.

Steinway Grands

Always the subject of the music lover's admiration, the display here of this supreme piano is most appealing. All styles are shown. The cases are beautifully finished in mahogany or walnut. The delicate symmetry of line and grace of appearance are the highest expression of piano design. All lovers of the Steinway will be delighted with these instruments. Inimitable timbre and resonance of tone proclaim the Steinway superiority. It is truly "The Instrument of the Immortals."

Apartment Grands

Certain improvements distinguish the Apartment Grand Piano. Foremost among these are the Junior Unfolding Two-Level Pedals. They enable the little children to play with expression. The great pianists of the day heartily endorse this invention, the need of which was first indicated by Chopin. It is pronounced the greatest step forward in piano construction in the last 50 years.

Brambach Grands

Here is an instrument of real character. While within the means of moderate purses, the Brambach Baby Grand is found in the more pretentious homes. This is because it reflects the spirit and tastes of those who delight daily in its charm. The tone is sweet and sparklingly clear. Durably built in classic designs, it is sold under our full guarantee.

It is a splendid value, priced at only $635.

MATHEMATICS

IMAGINARY NUMBERS OBVERTS

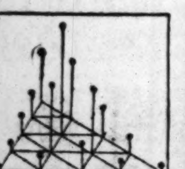
In a recent work on Einstein I ran across this definition of mathmetics: "Mathmatics may be defined as the subject in which we never know what we are talking about, nor whether what we are saying is true." Somehow, do you know, from my earliest childhood I suspected that this is the way authorities view the subject.

It was a happy day when I walked out of grammar school. There might still be higher learning ahead of me, but it wouldn't be arithmetic. I am surer than ever, as I look back on what followed, that algebra is considered truer mathematics than figures. One and two and three can mean something, but A's and B's and X's and Y's never need to be so disgraced.

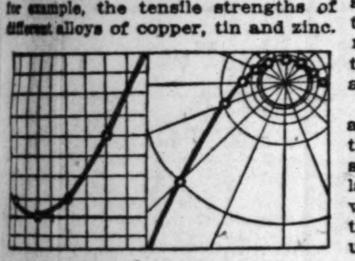
"Selby Maxwell," the professor would say, "go to the blackboard and expand the binomial theorem." So I would go up, write a little, and get stuck, so that the terms simply wouldn't come. My mind always achieved the most wonderful blankness imaginable on such occasions. Why should the binomial theorem be expanded, anyhow? It looked a lot simpler in its unexpanded state, and I am sure it meant as much. I never gave up, though. I knew I couldn't get a worse zero for sitting down than for standing there, and a friendly gong was sure to ring eventually and end the torture. I half believe my professor thought I could expand it if I would. My sister knew better. Once when I was stalled as usual, I heard her whisper: "Poor brother, he was always dumb."

One time in an analytics class some curious triangular ruled paper fell out of the professor's book. I had never seen any like it before. "Where is this paper superior to a cross-ruled system, and why?" I asked.

The answer I got seemed to me to be trivial, evasive and lacking in explanation. It was not the professor's fault. True, his political ambitions were greater than these mathematical, but he really tried that time. The fault lay in the system he was following, which decreed that an accurate knowledge of facts in this science is not necessary.



I eventually found out where the three-ruled paper could be applied. A fourth dimensional function of three variables could be expressed on it, as, for example, the tensile strengths of different alloys of copper, tin and zinc.



Cartesians—Polars.

One of the bugbears of my life was imaginary numbers. The name itself suggests something vague and unreal, that actually hasn't any existence. The man who discovered them must have been stumped for a name, to pick one so inappropriate. An imaginary is not make-believe quantity at all, but the obvert of a real number.

Cross-ruled draftsman's paper is an invention of Descartes. Most of our familiar graphical representations are written in cartesians. A great deal of algebra is an attempt, and often a bungling one at that, to devise a shorthand to write geometrical facts into this particular system. Few people bother to inquire whether the fundamentals of cartesians are pertinent or not. As a matter of observation polars occur in nature a hundred times to cartesians' once. Rays from a light, branches of a tree, the evolution of a family, the path of a projectile can all be expressed by polars much easier than by cartesians. Cartesians are only a special case of polars.

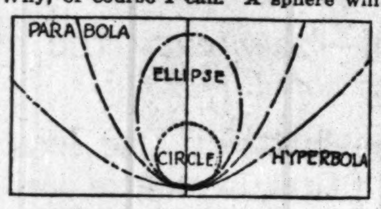
Infinity expressed on a sphere.

A polar system, you remember, starts with a point on a line. From this point a radius vector runs to the unknown point, and locates it by its length and its angle of turning from the line. If the polars are to represent positions in a solid, the origin need only be at the intersection of two lines. Cartesians have their origin set an infinite distance away, so that their mutually intersecting axes divide space up into a series of rectangular blocks.

I wonder if I can express infinity in a finite manner, I asked myself. Why, of course I can. A sphere will do it. This solid is a surface whose every point is equidistant from one fixed point called the center. The center is its origin. Nothing is said about a radius; that can go on forever, and beyond, for all I know. In fact, the celestial sphere, which we call the starry heavens, does go on forever. All problems pertaining to it, and all distances upon it, can be measured from the center, which for an astronomer is his own telescope.



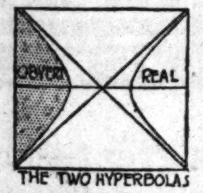
The four conic curves.

I bought a cork water ball, blackened it, and made a protractor for it. This was my infinity. At one spot I put down Descartes' origin, and ran his plane coördinates all the way around. Diametrically opposite, on the other pole, the so-called imaginary numbers appeared, while midway between, on the equator of the ball, was a line which represented infinity.

Descartes compressed his sphere into a plane, I reasoned, and because of this he was never able to tell on which side of his paper his problem actually lay. If his numbers were real the lines were truly on top, but if imaginary, they should be obverted and on the under side.

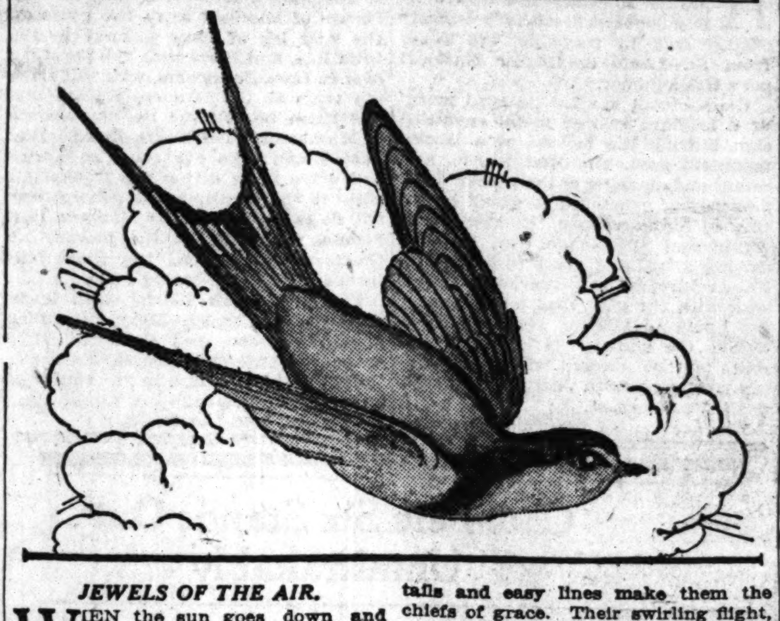
I put my system to a test. The four conic curves, the circle, the ellipse, the parabola and the hyperbola differ from each other only in where their foci lie. Each has two centers. For the circle they lie together, one upon the other. An ellipse has its foci separated by a distance less than from reality to infinity. A parabola has one focus at reality and another squarely on infinity, while the hyperbola has one of its foci somewhere between infinity and obversity. Where these four curves are placed together at a tangent on their long axis, the circle is the narrowest curve, the ellipse next, then the parabola and finally the hyperbola, widest of all. I should be able to draw them all in their correct relations with a string and two pins, I thought. Sure enough.

Hyperbolas have always given mathematicians a great deal of trouble. Figures persistently reveal an imaginary attendant near every real curve. Hyperbolas are among the commonest shapes in nature, yet this shadow never appeared. I saw the reason. The imaginary curve is the obvert of the real curve. I took my spherical protractor and traced it out. It fell just where theory would have it lie. The fault had been in our system of mathematics, which made a plane of what is by nature an infinite extent.



THE TWO HYPERBOLAS

Birds



JEWELS OF THE AIR.

When the sun goes down and gnats come out to make their courtship in swarms above the water, darting swallows come to sweep and turn. Their purple backs and gray and brownish orange breasts are exquisite in taste. Their forked tails and easy lines make them the chiefs of grace. Their swirling flight, unerring, too swift for eye to see them catch flies on the wing, down low, now up and round and down again, makes them the kings of motion in the air. They twitter as they fly and do not cease until it is too dark for us to see.

MAN

THE RISE OF TEUTONIC SPEECH

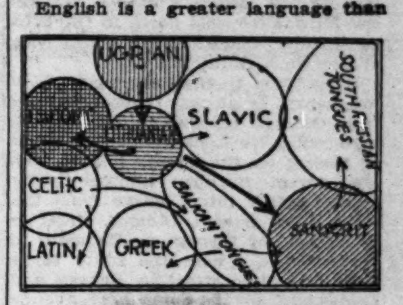
When scholars discovered the Sanscrit writings of India they found an Aryan tongue, related closely to Greek and and Iranian. The find was haled with great delight as the oldest of our western languages. Imagine their surprise when Sanscrit's nearest relative was revealed. Sanscrit today is only a literary language, but the relative is spoken. The nearest tongue to that of the white conquerors of old India lies not in Transcaspia nor yet in Turkestan, but on the shores of the Baltic sea. It is Lithuanian. The study of Lithuanian throws many valuable hints on the moves of Nordics before history began.

Nordics are blonds.

If you have ever tried to learn a few of the languages of western Europe you must have been impressed with the great similarity of grammars and general forms. Probably all the languages you have met are more or less synthetic. By this term the use of syllables is meant. Take our word e-vacu-ate. It is of Latin origin. E—means out from—vacu means to empty, and ate means the act of; hence the word means the act of emptying, implying the deed under force. Synthetic languages of this sort are Aryan. Of all the peoples in the world, only the blond Aryans have carried their speech to this height.

East of the Aryan group, extending from Russia to the China sea, lies a vast family of agglutinate tongues, spoken by Finns, Turks, and Mongols. An agglutinative language strings words together to make other words, much after the manner of German. Finnish, or Ugrian, tongues lie just on the border between agglutinative and synthetic language. They are too complex to be one and too simple to be the other. They are very archaic as well, and indicate a long period of isolation. The nearest relative to Finnish is Lithuanian, in the synthetic group.

When the ice melted out of Scandinavia, the land was peopled by Finns. Some of their descendants are still there. Sometime before history opens on these regions, and while Germany was still an uninhabited waste, not yet recovered from the devastation of the ice, families of tall, fair people who spoke Lithuanian made their way into Scandinavia. They went like our western pioneers. Many of the Finns they found were much like themselves. The two peoples mixed, and the language that resulted was Old Teutonic.



Origin of Teutonic tongues.

English is a greater language than any three other European languages combined, mainly because it has gotten rid of most of its cases, declensions, genders, and compounds. We can trace the English language back to a time when it was fairly spidery with appendages. In a similar way Old Teutonic was a simpler language than either Finnish or Lithuanian, and so has markedly encroached on both. All Nordics are not necessarily Teutonic, nor ever were, but Teutonic tongues are par excellence the languages of Nordics.

Four thousand years ago the ancestors of the Nordics of today were savages dwelling in the basin of the Baltic. Two thousand years later, in Caesar's time, certain tribes of them living at the mouth of the Rhine were still in neolithic culture, but the Germans, farther inland, were then so strong and fierce that all the power of Rome could not dent them. The rise of the Nordics has been one of the most rapid that anthropology reveals. There is now no spot of any consequence in the world that they have not visited, nor any country where they do not try to dominate. Nordics are by far the most aggressive of the Aryans. Aryan tongues swept away most vestiges of the speech of other peoples in Europe before writing was invented. Now Teutonic is crowding heavily upon other Aryan tongues. The time is not many centuries away when English will be the common language of the world.

A DREAM OF NO MORE WINTER

A point of great control is Bering strait. The spot dominates Europe and America, and half of Asia, and all the oceans of the northern hemisphere. The climate of a quarter of the globe depends on what happens here.

The Arctic ocean is shaped like a bottle. Its mouth empties between Greenland and Norway into the Atlantic ocean; Siberia forms one side of it and North America the other. At the bottom of the bottle there is a hole, Bering strait. The bottle is full of ice. Northern America and northern Siberia have arctic climates because of it. Every summer some of its ice floats out into the Atlantic ocean. Cold water from it spreads all over the ocean floor and makes the earth's hydroscope cool instead of warm, as it otherwise would be.

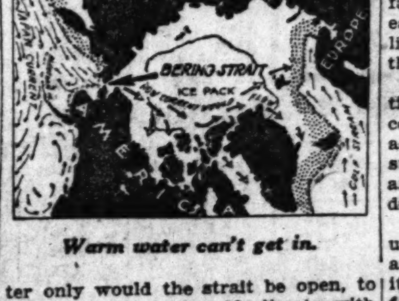
Just outside the hole in the bottom of the bottle there is hot water. This hot water is the Japan current. There is enough of it to melt all the ice in the Arctic ocean and have heat to spare. If it were properly applied we could do away with winter in America. Large tracts in our western states are now too arid to be worth much. If we had a moist climate there, many miles of brush and scrub could be devoted to industry. A great deal of Canada is also poor. If the Arctic ocean were a warm body instead of cold, all this would be changed. There is now plenty of hot water circling round and round in the Pacific ocean, making balmy climates for a few scattered South Sea islands while half of America is cold and dry. The reason lies at Bering strait.

It we could make our wishes actions we would run a floating curtain south for six hundred miles from the tip of the Aleutian chain to catch the full wash of the Japan current and deflect it north. We would gouge out a channel through Bering strait, and let the flood of balmy waters in to melt the ice. The earth's rotation would deflect most of it upon Canada and Alaska. Palms would spring up at the mouth of the Mackenzie river. Our western states are dry because their winds must drop their moisture in crossing the mountains. A flanking wave of humid air from the north would make them as fertile as the Ohio valley. Of course the flow would have to be controlled. But while we are wishing, we can put in the gates to see to that.

This is not altogether an idle dream. The forces of geology have opened the strait no less than six times in the last million and a half years. The writhings of the land at Bering sea produced the ice age. When the land stood high, as it does now, the Arctic ice retreated into the far north, and a climate of extremes prevailed. When the strait was low, ice advanced.

"But you are now speaking of more winters than we have now, while a moment ago you said winter could be abolished by these same actions," you object.

During the ice age geology was not acting with a purpose to be classed with our intelligence. As long as we are dreaming let us add that in winter only would the strait be open, to produce a damp, humid climate with soft wet snows. If the current flowed all summer the climate would remain cool and damp, and the winter's deposits might not melt. But we would turn the current back into its proper channel in the summer. The sun's heat would then be free to produce a warm, steamy haze clear to the Arctic ocean.



Warm water can't get in.

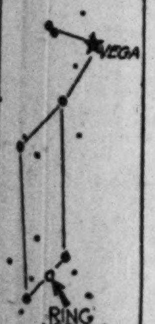
Can you read stories in the rocks? Do stones speak to you, and recount their adventures in no uncertain terms? Here is a picture of a bluff upon Lake Michigan. The region of the Great Lakes was repeatedly overridden by ice, sometimes a mile thick. On the surface we find the loam of modern plants. Below that is the débris of the last gracier. There was a period between glaciers as long as from the end of the last glocier to the present. Notice the packed bed of peat in the bluff. At one time this was the surface of the land. Ice swept down and covered it. The remains of a still older glacier lie beneath the peat. Should we dig, we might encounter evidence of even earlier ice.

The pebbles at the water's edge are not native in the region. Red granites, white granites, gray sandstones, limestones, feldspars, fool's gold, and quartzites all lie piled helter skelter together on the beach. Representative stones from every ledge from Illinois to Hudson bay are here. As the glacier went over it gouged them out, carried them along, and dropped them where it melted.

ASTRONOMY

GROWTH OF SOLAR SYSTEM

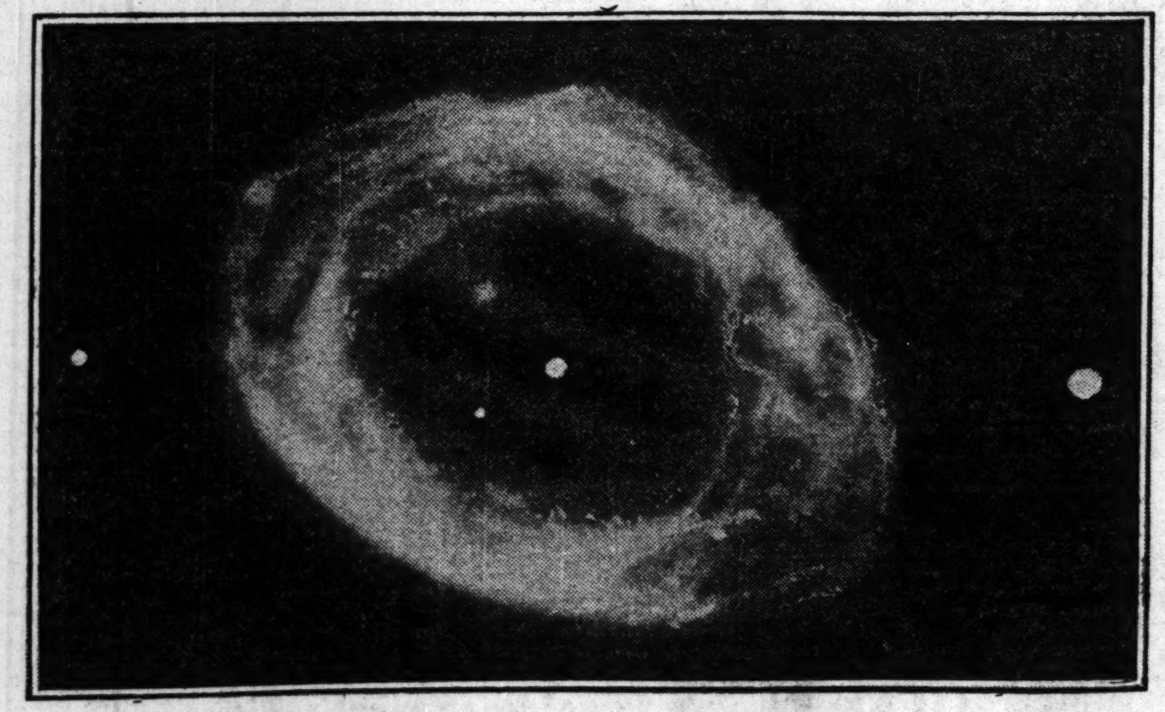
Worlds are destroyed and are recreated. We are sure of it. Meteors, fallen to earth, bear unmistakable evidence of having once been pieces of larger worlds.



Lyra.

Suns have been observed to die. We call the cataclysm a "new star." Clouds of gas always hang about the spot where a star has been destroyed.

Astronomers know of many of these gassy clouds. They are globular, often dimmer toward the center. They glow with a clear green light. Observers call them planetary nebulae, to distinguish them from spirals, which are distant universes, and the great chaotic irregular nebulae, such as are found in Orion and Ophiuchus. Planetary nebulae have a well defined order of evolution. Solar systems are born from them. Each step in the embryonic growth of planets can be watched up in the sky.



Ring Nebula of Lyra, a half formed solar system.

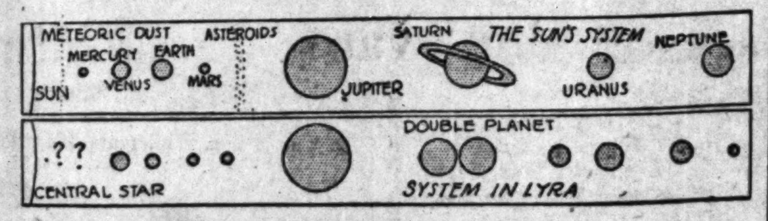
Young planetary nebulae are filmy, half transparent globes of gas, a hundred billion miles, more or less, in diameter. After many centuries, how long we have no means of telling, but certainly so vast an interval that the rise of man from a four footed creature to the ruler of the world would seem only a few instants, a central star appears. Matter is drawn from all the immediate surrounding region to make it. This central star is to be the future sun of the system. Wisps of gas nearby roll up in pairs to make the inner planets, always in pairs. The worlds closest to the central sun form first. Space about them is emptied, while the outer regions are still full of star dust. Sometimes satellites of half-formed planets can be seen enmeshed in nebulae-like corkscrews of glowing mist about hazy promises of worlds.

Let us compare this picture with what we know to be true in the solar system. Here all our planets are in pairs. Mercury, the innermost, is mated with a cloud of meteoric dust nearer the sun. Venus and the earth are twins. Mars goes with the asteroids, Jupiter and Saturn are twin giants, Uranus and Neptune are much alike, and move forever in tracks of gloom.

Beyond the planets, so far away that even Neptune's orbit seems like a tiny ring, lies the zone of comets. Out here the primeval nebula of the solar system is still uncondensed. Stray wisps of it fall in at times, wheel past the sun, and then fall back. We call them comets. They are made of gas and dust and stones. The earth is made of the matter of comets. Our globe grew by capturing particles, grain by grain. Have you ever seen a meteor streak across the sky? You beheld a free flying celestial object seized by the earth. As long as this globe continues, that particle will not go free again.

Our inner planets are also the oldest. Mercury is quite dead. Both Venus and the earth are cool enough for water to appear, Mars is fighting the last stages of death from thirst, but Jupiter is a young world. Saturn is a sphere lighter even than water. Uranus and Neptune appear to have dense boiling atmospheres in spite of their enormous distances from the sun.

The most famous planetary nebula in the sky is found in Lyra. It is of the ring type, which indicates that its evolution is well under way. It can be seen in a small telescope. When fully formed it will be a solar system considerably larger than our own. Its sun will have two giant planets, like our Jupiter and Saturn, but the lesser, or what would be Saturn for us, is going to form a double planet instead of one with a ring. Four outer planets will form, corresponding roughly to Uranus and Neptune in the solar system. Traces of what is to be two inner planets, corresponding to the earth and Venus, are also seen. Long after the sun has ceased to shine, the nebula of Lyra will grow to be a living solar system, when many, if not all, of the evolutions we know will be repeated.



The system in Lyra will be larger than ours.

RADIO

High voltage discharge—and why electrons zigzag.

LIGHTNING MAKES STATIC

It requires about 100,000 volts of electrical pressure to force a charge to jump a gap of air an inch across. Some lightning bolts are a mile in length. Figure their voltages for yourself!

Water acquires an electric charge by the act of evaporating. As long as atmospheric moisture remains in the shape of invisible vapor the charges on the molecules are spread out evenly and are small at any one spot.

A few hours before a rain these charged molecules begin to coalesce, minute droplets appear, growing larger and larger by condensation. Now electrical charges always stay on the surface. The charge on the outside of each tiny drop was small, but as the little drops united to make big drops their electricity was crowded.

The surface of a big drop is relatively much less than the sum of its component droplets. Each droplet added electricity to a surface that was steadily growing relatively smaller, and in consequence the voltage on the drop increased.

A cloud of charged droplets is very unstable electrically, and will discharge at the first opportunity. A spark from it may jump to another cloud of different potential, or to the ground. The spark is called lightning.

A bolt of lightning leaps with the speed of light. Its track through the air is instantly heated white hot. The flaming air expands; then, the momentary current passed, it collapses into an almost perfect vacuum. Profound waves are set up in the air all about. We call them thunder.

The streak also plays havoc with the atoms in its path. Showers of radiant energy shoot out from the bolt in every direction. Some are light, some are ultra-violet rays, and a great part of them consist of Hertzen waves. You can hear thunder storms and atmospheric snapping and grawking in your radio receiver. Their sources may be near, or they may be a thousand miles or more away. These noises are called "static" in radio parlance.

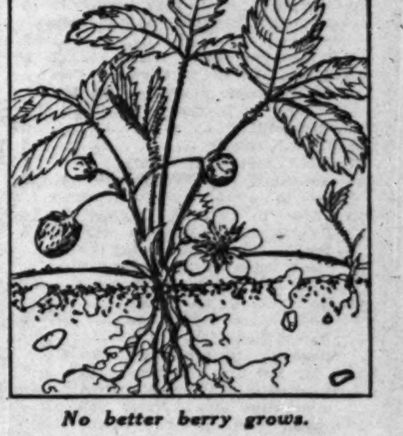
Botany



No better berry grows.

THE WILD STRAWBERRY.

If there is a better small fruit on the American continent, or in the whole world for that matter, than the wild strawberry I have yet to hear of it. Pick wild strawberries when they are well turned, not white and sour, nor yet too dark and old. Some people think of strawberries as tart, acid things, and, indeed, the unservable giants sold in stores usually are. A tame strawberry is hardly worth eating. Most of them are big hulks of pulp and water, with enough flavor to give them a name. A dish of garden strawberries requires plenty of powdered sugar to be good. Wild strawberries need no sugar. Tame berries have to be washed until their surfaces are broken to get out the grit and sand; wild berries of the better sort contain not one particle of grit. They grow in heavily grassed spots, where the most dashing rain never stirs the substance of the soil.

One must have a little of the soul of the wild strawberry before he can find it. The plant is a hardy vegetation, produced by seed, root, and runner. It can hold its own against most other plants, but when its life is devoted to fighting for existence it produces few berries, and these are poor and sour. A sunny hillside where the grass is long but not too dense, where the ground is always moist, but never either baked nor marshy, and with years behind it free from plowing or the trampings of stock, are the requirements of a good wild strawberry patch.

See the berries gleaming out in scarlet drops amid the green. Take only the ripe ones now; the green ones will be good in a few days. No true strawberry fan ever quit a patch while there was one ripe berry left.

Paving Program Closes Gaps in State Highways

Gov. Small Smiles on Lake and Kankakee in Awards.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

LAKE county and some of the mud-ridden districts in southern Illinois have been singled out to receive the lion's share of the 1922 highway improvement program recently approved by Gov. Len Small. A total of 362 miles of paving work in forty counties and some 300 miles of heavy grading have at last been officially ordered by the administration following a series of delays, political and commercial, which have postponed contract letting ever since January and will make it impossible to open actual work on the badly needed trunk road connections until late June.

It is believed that the state will ask for bids on the huge construction budget within the next two weeks, so that work can be pushed throughout the summer months and many gaps in the state trunk line system may be closed before winter ties up traffic on unpaved sections.

Twenty miles of paving is awarded to Lake county, where the governor's trial is in progress. It will take care of five miles of the unpaved section of route No. 20 leading west from Waukegan through Grayslake, Volo, and McHenry, linking Waukegan with the completed pavement which now extends west to Volo from the Milwaukee avenue intersection. The governor also approved specifications for extending the pavement on the Waukegan-Milwaukee road north to the Wisconsin line, where it will connect with Wisconsin highway No. 57.

In addition to the Lake street paving, which is already under contract from Chicago northwest to Elgin, the state will give Cook county 6.8 miles of paving on the county end of Halsted street to open another badly needed artery into Chicago from the south. At present Halsted street is being used by through traffic south to 147th street, where the route turns west to Center street in Harvey and angles back on the South Park avenue concrete to join the Dixie highway just north of Homewood. The new program will pave Halsted street south of 147th direct into Chicago Heights. The improvement will eliminate several miles from the through route from Chicago south to Danville and St. Louis and relieves Western avenue of congestion.

Twenty miles of paving have been ordered on Route 44 in Kankakee and Will counties, completing the road from Kankakee, the governor's home, north through Wilton Center to Joliet.

Among the most important of the state awards is that which gives State Highway No. 4, the "Illini boulevard," running south from Joliet through Dwight, Pontiac and Bloomington to Springfield where it connects with the paved road to St. Louis. The approved plans call for twelve miles of paving out of Dwight and fifty miles to link Bloomington with Springfield. Completion of this great artery will give Chicago three continuous paved routes through the state to St. Louis.

Twenty-four miles of the Corn Belt route, the excellent cross-state artery leading from Watseka west through Gilman and Fairbury to Peoria, the main road between Marion and Benton in "Egypt," and eighty miles of grading in the southern part of the state are additional projects of primary importance to state motorists.

All of the work approved has been listed as federal aid construction under the recent highway law and the government will help finance the program.

Following is the complete list of this year's program, showing the routes designated, the mileage and the counties:

SPEEDWAY TRAILS

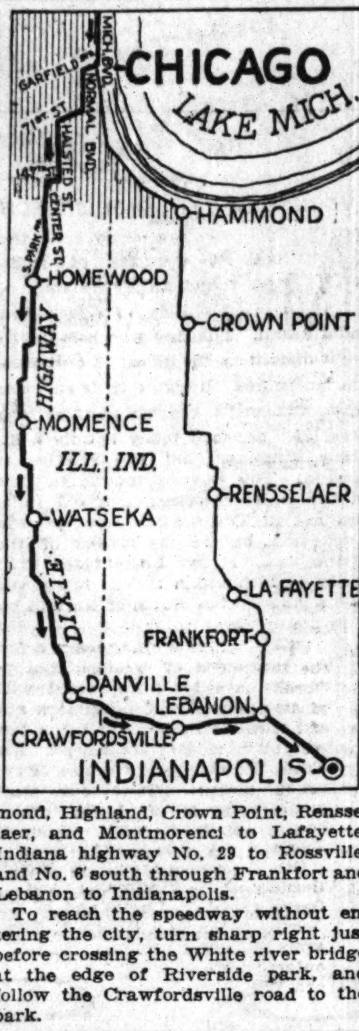
THE HOOSIER ROUTE.

CHICAGO motordom will invade highways to the south today and tomorrow in the annual motor pilgrimage to Indianapolis for the international 500 mile race Memorial day.

Two routes offer a spring challenge to the sportsman driver planning the 200 mile Hoosier trip this year, both of them insuring fair to good going for the distance.

The first, and best, from a highway pavement standpoint, follows Halsted street and the Dixie highway to Danville, turning east on gravel through Crawfordsville to Lebanon and south on the stone Jackson highway to the speedway. The other uses the South Chicago route and the Jackson highway through Indiana—gravel roads practically all of the way.

To follow the first, go south in Michigan avenue to Garfield boulevard [55th-st.]. Turn right eleven blocks to Normal avenue. Turn left in Normal, jogging left with it at 65th and right at Marquette road, but keeping in Normal to 71st street. Turn right in 71st street to Halsted street. Turn left in Halsted, joining the car line, and follow Halsted straight south, under the railroad and on macadam pavement [rough in places] to 174th street. Turn right to Center street. Turn left in Center to Harvey business section, and take the South Park avenue concrete pavement southwest to its intersection with the Dixie highway above Homewood. Then follow the Dixie pavement through Chicago Heights, Steger, Crete, Momence, and Watseka to Danville. At the square in Danville turn east on the Dixie highway to Crawfordsville. There take state highway No. 33 to Lebanon, and turn south on the Jackson highway to Indianapolis.



The best route through Indiana uses the Jackson highway through Hammond, Highland, Crown Point, Rensselaer, and Montmorenci to Lafayette, Indiana highway No. 29 to Rossville, and No. 6 south through Frankfort and Lebanon to Indianapolis.

To reach the speedway without entering the city, turn sharp right just before crossing the White river bridge at the edge of Riverside park, and follow the Crawfordsville road to the park.

Pressure Tank Trouble.

When the supply tank of a motor car using exhaust gas pressure feed to the carburetor is refilled with gasoline, most drivers use the hand pump provided to obtain enough pressure in the tank to get the motor started. Generally there is enough gasoline in the carburetor to permit of some minutes' operation by which the pressure in the tank will be raised sufficiently by the exhaust so that resort to the hand pump is needless. On some cars the hand pump is so rarely used that the washers in it dry up and the device is rendered useless. In such cases the desired results may be obtained by temporarily plugging the outlet of the exhaust pipe and then cranking the motor. This will create excessive pressure in the exhaust pipe, which will be conducted through the regular pressure piping to the fuel supply tank. Thus a few turns of the crank will be as effective as the pump would be if it were working.

Open Fox Lake.

The Fox lake touring season will be opened officially today when the first T. & S. sightseeing bus of the season negotiates the daily round trip to the lakeland country from the loop. The route chosen uses Sheridan road to Waukegan and the Grand Avenue road through Lake Villa to Fox Lake, returning via Long lake, Round lake, and Gray's lake and the Waukegan-Milwaukee road through Niles.

Mountain Goats Enlisted to Aid Trail Dedication

A TEAM of domesticated billy goats hitched to a miniature prairie schooner and driven by Boy Scouts will officially dedicate Glacier trail by traveling the route from St. Louis to Glacier National park this summer.

Glacier trail has for its road marker a brilliant colored metal enameled sign bearing the picture of a Rocky mountain goat, and Bert Fuqua, secretary and manager of the Glacier Trail association, concluded it would be fitting to formally open the new transcontinental automobile trail by first driving a team of goats over it. Mr. Fuqua already has marked Glacier trail with the goat road marked from St. Louis to Glacier National park. Before the summer is over the full route will be marked with this striking road sign from Jacksonville, Fla., to the Pacific coast.

The goats used for this novel trail dedication were kids when captured above the clouds on Going-to-the-Sun mountain in Glaceir National park. They were trained to harness last year. Mr. Fuqua has converted a Briggs & Stratton Flyer juvenile buckboard automobile into a small prairie schooner for the goats to haul. This unique outfit will be started on its long trip from the Automobile Club of Missouri in St. Louis June 15. Secretary Fuqua is negotiating to have a relay of Boy Scouts of Missouri drive the goats on the first leg of their journey to the Iowa line, and there turn the novel rig over to Iowa Boy Scouts, who will drive the team to the Minnesota state line and there be relieved by Boy Scouts of Minnesota. The North Dakota Boy Scouts will take the goats to Fargo and drive them across the Flickertail state to the Montana line, where they will be taken in hand by Montana Boy Scouts, who will end the journey at Glacier Park station, the main entrance to Glacier National park.

From St. Louis Glacier trail leads through St. Charles, Mex.; Centralia, Moberly, Macon, and Kirksvile, Mo.; thence on through Oskaloosa, Marshalltown, and Mason City, Ia., and into St. Paul and Minneapolis via Albert Lea, Fairabault, and Northfield.

Auto Club Opens Fight on Higher Gasoline Prices

Government Probe Asked as Result of Increase in May.

THE jumping of the price of gasoline 2½ cents between Nov. 9 and May 8 in the face of greatly increased reserve stocks has caused officials of the Illinois Automobile club to demand a federal investigation. Every other automobile club and trade association in the United States will be enlisted in the movement.

"We will first ask the federal trade commission to act in the matter and if that fails we will demand a congressional investigation," said R. C. Cook, president of the club, yesterday. "Gasoline is increasing in price while everything else is coming down. On April 1 the gasoline reserve stocks in the United States amounted to 854,000,000 gallons, the highest in history and 47,000,000 gallons over the reserve on March 1. The reserve the first quarter of this year was 20 per cent over 1921 and 30 per cent over 1920, while the consumption for 1922 was only 7 per cent over 1921.

"Automobile manufacturers have cut their price from 20 to nearly 50 per cent. The government has now ordered a cut in railroad freight rates. Nearly everything connected with transportation is coming down while gasoline goes up.

"On Nov. 9, 1921, the price at filling stations was fixed at 21½ cents. On April 10, 1922, this price was boosted to 23 cents in the face of increased reserve stocks. While the reserve stock continued to pile up companies again raised the price to 24 cents on May 8 last. We cannot see where the law of supply and demand justifies these increases."

All automobile clubs and trade associations are being urged to aid in forcing congressional action. When the new National Automobile association holds its first meeting here on June 19 it will, according to Mr. Cook, call on all its state organizations to get behind the fight on the present gasoline prices.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

A STIRRING sales and service campaign ordered by George W. Davis, president of the Davis Motor Car company, was launched last week from the newly opened Davis salesrooms, 2317 Michigan avenue. H. H. Kamp, former district manager, has charge of the new sales and service headquarters.

Popularity of the new single six series Packard is said to be responsible for a remarkable increase in factory production, which last month brought orders for more than 2,000 of the cars, as compared to 304 orders in April, 1921. President Alvin Macauley believes that the peak of the 1922 demand has not yet been reached.

A. L. Salisbury, creator of the Studebaker national advertising and one of the best known counsellors in the game, has taken on new responsibilities as vice president of Critchfield & Co. "Sally" resigned as western manager for Seaman to take over the new position.

Jack Lake, retail sales manager for Edwards & Crist, Auburn distributors, established regular service last week in the company's new headquarters, 2239 Michigan avenue.

Full details of the recent Velie performance which broke the Mount Wilson climbing records for the last four years, received by R. C. Cook, Chicago distributor, show that the new record of 27 minutes and 51.66 seconds was made by a Velie model 58 stock touring car over one of the steepest and most hazardous roads in the country.

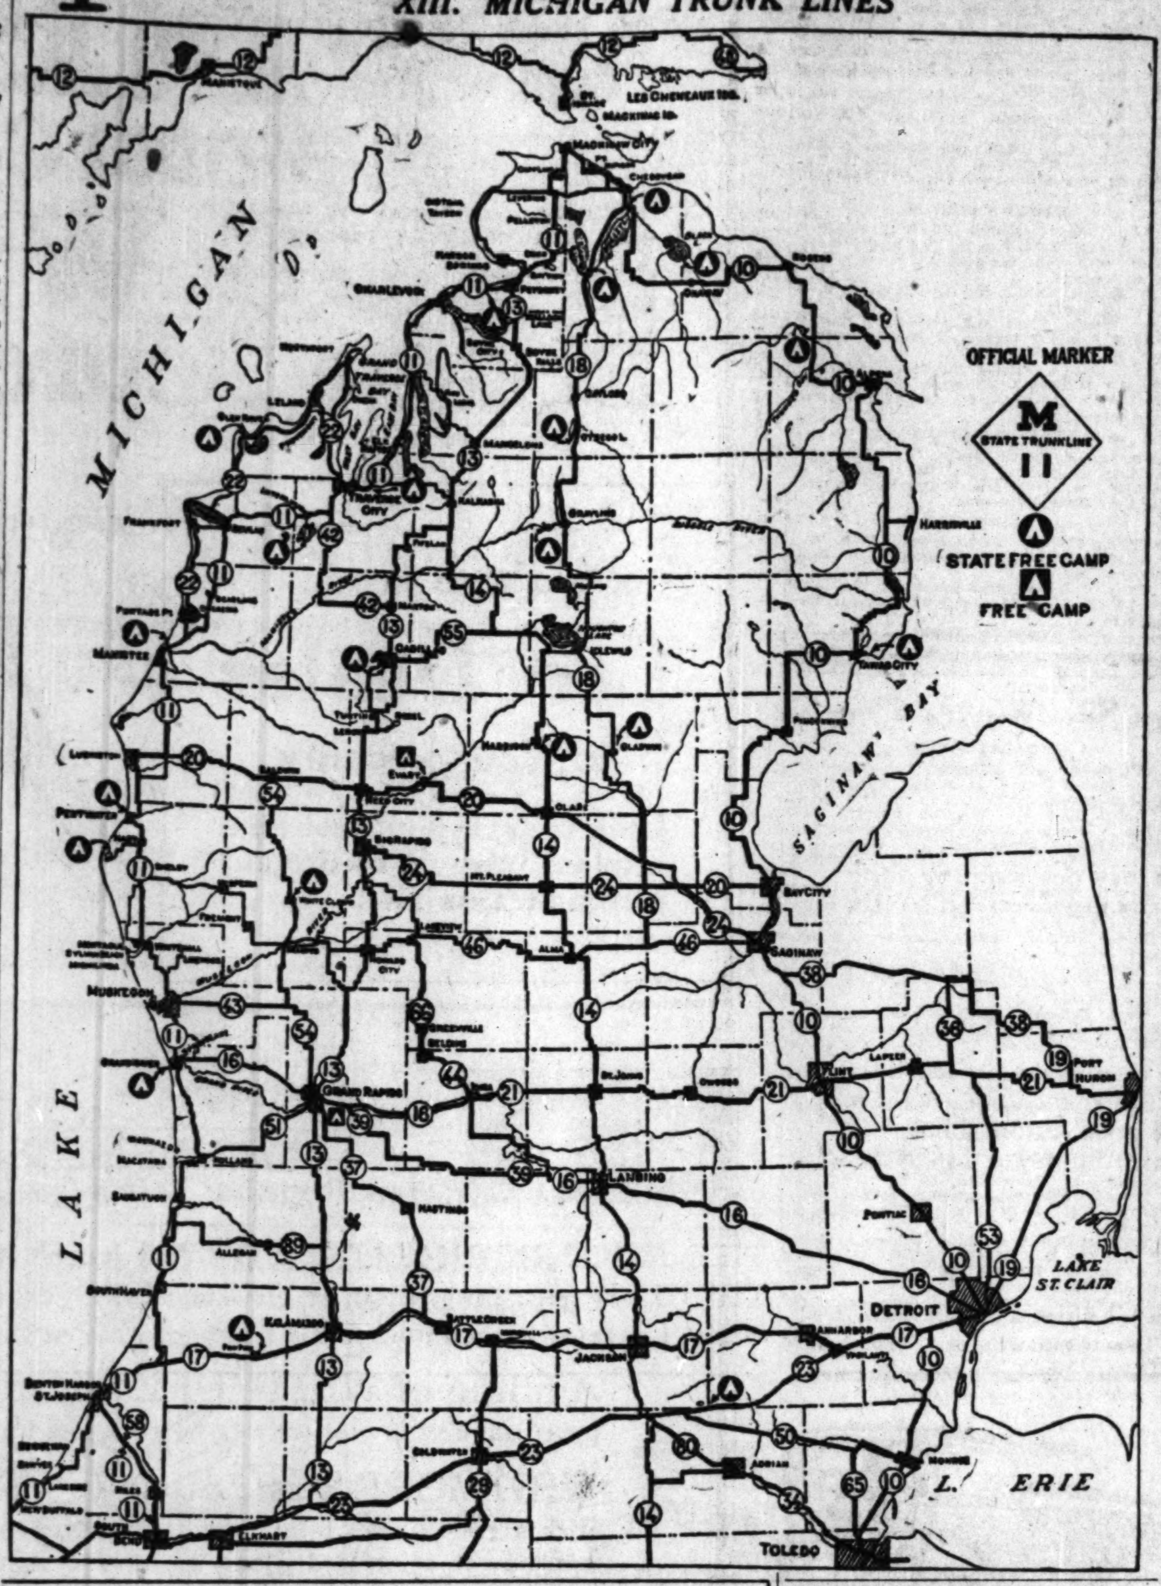
XIII. MICHIGAN TRUNK LINES



SAVE THE MAPS

MICHIGAN is ready for the vacation deluge. Trunk highways of the state, thanks to a construction campaign pushed to the limit last year despite high prices, are now complete and in excellent shape to practically every point of interest in the great central playground, and the state is ready to "cash in" on its highly practical good roads investment.

The two most important trunk lines, from the standpoint of the Chicago and Illinois motorist, are particularly attractive this year. State trunk No. 11, the West Michigan pike, is now hard surfaced for ninety-five continuous miles from Grand Beach, at the edge of Michigan City, to a point north of Manistee, with the exception of short gravel stretches entering South Haven and leaving Grand Haven. Completion of the twelve miles of concrete north of South Haven eliminates the most serious hazard in the trip to the straits this spring.

According to the latest report from the Michigan Tourist and Resort association, the gravel road north of Manistee has been put into excellent condition and the concrete pavement is open from Charlevoix to Bay View.

Trunk line 17 from Watervliet to Detroit, is also in good condition for through trips, while improvement work is complete on the Mackinaw trail, No. 13, from the state line north through Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids to Cadillac.

Cross state roads are receiving direct attention from the state highway commission under Frank R. Rogers at present.

H. J. Gray, manager of the tourist association, estimates that 15,000 to 20,000 visitors will use the west roads during the season.

Cities Motorized.

A survey made by the New York state bureau of municipal information shows that in 1921 over 6,00 motor vehicles were owned and operated by sixty out of the 100 largest cities in the United States. Fire apparatus and privately owned cars, of which the city pays operating expenses, are excluded from the above total.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your questions to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned. For today's question Mrs. E. Hilligoss, 630 Stratford place, Chicago, was awarded $5.

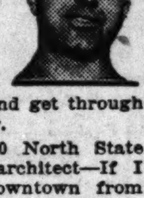
The Question.

How much time do you save by using a car in Chicago?

Where Asked.

At Grand avenue and Cass street.

The Answers.



Lyman W. Jones, 1758 Nelson street, auto painter—I don't know just how much time I save, but I do save a lot of the precious stuff by using the auto. One can beat the street car going downtown, and in the loop itself one can dodge around this and that and get through ahead of any street car.

Ralph C. Harris, 190 North State street, architect—If I drive downtown from the north side on street car lines I can save considerable time, as one can always get ahead of the street cars. If it is necessary to use Michigan avenue you are out of luck. And for service within the loop, you had better sell the car.

J. C. Davis, 48 East Walton place, salesman — I couldn't get along without a car. It would be impossible for me to make more than half the calls I now make every day. That means that I save 100 per cent on time. Besides, I find it cheaper to use an auto than to ride around on a street car with the present C. S. L.'s 8 cent fare.

Paul Weinberg, 521 Rush street, haberdasher—Chicago is a hard city to drive in; there are a lot of reckless drivers here and all that, but when you want to get somewhere in the least possible time you have to use the auto. There is no question about that. Whether it is the rush hour, on the crowded thoroughfares, or within the loop, the auto saves a lot of time. It is our most rapid means of transportation within the city.

Herbert Leslus, 29 East Ohio street, salesman—I think that half my time is saved at least. I know that in my business I can make again as many calls as I could if I were compelled to use the street cars. I can even make better time in the loop or any other place and at any time. In fact, I dislike street cars so much that I rarely use them.

Veteran Balloon Pilots to Start in Race May 31

Milwaukee Will Also Stage Airplane Show.

BY MORROW KRUM.

MANY veteran balloon pilots will climb into the wicker baskets when the word comes to start in the annual elimination balloon race to be held on Wednesday at Milwaukee.

The three winners will qualify for the international race which will be held Aug. 6, starting from Geneva, Switzerland.

H. E. Honeywell of St. Louis and R. H. Upson of Detroit, who have been consistent contenders, will both be back again this year. Honeywell won the American race in 1912, Upson in 1913 and 1919 (the races being suspended during the war years), Honeywell came back in 1920, and Upson won in 1921.

Upson, piloting the Goodyear I., won the international race and the James Gordon Bennett cup in 1913 by a feat of daring plus an uncanny knowledge of atmospheric conditions. When the wind carried the racers over northern France toward the ocean, all descended except Upson, who calculated that he would strike landward winds out in the ocean that would carry him back over England. And so it worked out.

Other entries are J. S. McKibben, Bernard Von Hoffman, and John Berry, all of St. Louis, and W. T. Van Orman of Akron. There will be three army balloons and two navy balloons entered also. The army pilots entered are Maj. Oscar Westover, Capt. Harold E. Weeks, and Lieut. James T. Neely. Lieut. William E. Connolly will go to Milwaukee as alternate pilot.

Van Orman, aero engineer for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, is another veteran. He was Upson's aide in the 1919 American race, which they won, the international being called off that year. In 1920 he and Upson, as the Goodyear team, took third in the national event, and qualified for the international, where they took fifth.

The record balloon trip made in this country was set up by Allan R. Hawley in the 1910 race, where, starting from St. Louis, he landed in northern Quebec, a distance of 1,172 miles. He was ten days getting back to civilization.

A purse of $1,000 has been hung up for the winner of the 1922 event.

An aeronautical meet of heavier than air ships will be held in connection with balloon races. Many pilots from Chicago and the surrounding towns have announced their intentions of attending the meet.

The meet opens on Tuesday and will be continued, while the balloons are sent away on Wednesday.

TODAY IS C. A. C. DAY AT ASHBURN FIELD

TODAY is to be Chicago Motor club day at Ashburn field. The aviators of the field have invited the members of the Automobile association to assemble there for a series of flying exhibitions made by Aero Club of Illinois aviators.

There will be loops, tail spins, barrel rolls, turns, wing overs, airplane races, altitude tests, a parachute jump, and a number of other thrilling events. James Curran, chief instructor of the Ralph C. Diggins school, will have charge of the Diggins ships. Elmer Partridge and John Metzger will have their planes flying. Ralph C. Diggins is to be the official host of motor club guests.

The motor road to the flying field follows: Go south on Michigan avenue to Garfield boulevard, west on Garfield boulevard to Western avenue, south to 60th street, west on 60th street to 48th avenue, and south two miles to the airdome.

Air Mail Ships to Fly Over Middle West

10 Plane Formation to Boost Postal Service.

A SQUADRON of ten De Haviland air mail airplanes powered with Liberty motors will set out today from the air mail field for a series of flights to advertise the aerial postal service. The formation will be led by Walter J. Smith, who is regarded as one of the crack pilots of the service.

Today the ships will fly to Rock Island, Ill., to attend the A. E. F. convention that is being held there. Tuesday they go to Indianapolis to fly over the thousands of spectators at the Memorial day automobile race. The ships will return to Chicago after the race and take off the next morning in two five-ship formations for Milwaukee and the international balloon race that is to be held on Wednesday.

C. F. Egge, general superintendent of the air mail service, arrived in Chicago last Wednesday to direct the flying.

"Our ships are in the best condition," said Mr. Egge, "and our service is so safe, reliable, and efficient that we are rivaling the best railroads of the country with our performance records. This formation work is to be done to show he people of the middle west just exactly what the air mail service means.

"Remember that not one man has been killed during the last million and a half miles of flight, and that thousands of pounds of letters have been delivered three or four hours ahead of the usual mail schedule. This will some day be the most important government service."

Why was this possible?

In ten years The Miller Rubber Company has grown from thirty-second to a leading place in the industry. We are still growing.

Our steady growth is because we began building the

with a quality policy and have stuck to it!

We determined to build a tire that was so dependable in performance, and so uniform in construction, that motorists could buy it with absolute confidence in its ability to give more than the usual service.

Miller engineers studied ways to make Miller Tires the best in the world. Miller became the leader in new methods to increase tire mileage. We have more than doubled the average mileage of Miller Tires in four years.

Motorists who buy tires on a performance basis know that the name "Miller Geared-to-the-Road" on a tire stands for the best service that a tire can give

The Miller idea extends throughout the entire sales organization. Miller dealers are men who have studied and know tires. They will gladly recommend the kind of Miller Tire that will give the greatest satisfaction at the lowest cost on your car.

Miller Inner Tubes are made with the same uniformity and care for your satisfaction that characterize Miller Tires. When we put the name "Miller" on a product we put our reputation and the experience of twenty-nine years back of it.

A LITERARY PLOT

By Guy Lee

I've written a legion of verses,
And this has been bad, and that good;
Some were easy, and some required curses
Before they came out as they should.
One day it's a simple condition
To tear off a bundle of rime,
Yet you find it a tough proposition
When trying to do it next time.

But Hope is a gallant sustainer;
We build on the future a lot,
And I trust it will make me the gainer
By a cute little innocent plot.
"By request," is a gag (who can blame us?)
Oft used by us liter'ry men;
So, when I'm a trifle more famous
I can run my stuff over again.

Clip!

Clip the wings of your flying dollars

DID you ever hear that the eagles printed on your dollar bills are there to make the money fly away faster? But you can learn—today—how to clip the wings of some of your flying dollars.

Do you say "give me a quart of oil"? That certainly makes dollars fly.

9 out of every 10 "quarts of oil" bought at random are mere gasoline by-products. They are the after-thoughts of gasoline refiners, and made from the residue of crude petroleum from which all possible gasoline has been extracted.

If you want to clip the wings of these flying dollars, ask instead for the correct grade of Gargoyle Mobiloil. Gargoyle Mobiloil is a specialty—a specialized lubricating oil—carefully refined from crude oil specially chosen for its lubricating value. Lubrication is the first thought in every step of the manufacture of Gargoyle Mobiloil.

Here is another way to clip the wings of flying dollars.

Stop mistaking cheap price per gallon for cheap operating cost per mile. The two don't go together! Gargoyle Mobiloil frequently lasts 25% to 50% longer than oils which cost only a few cents less per gallon. Remember that. It will clip off the wings of your flying dollars.

As you drive today, look near the dealer's door for the white sign that carries the red Gargoyle and the words "Gargoyle Mobiloil." Stop there. Ask for a 5-gallon can of Gargoyle Mobiloil. It will give you the greater economy which you have a right to expect this year from your lubricating oil.

FOR the transmission and differential of your car use Gargoyle Mobiloil "C" or "CC" or Mobilubricant—as specified in the Chart.

FARM AND GARDEN

Co-op Live Stock Market Is Success in Indianapolis

By Frank Ridgway.

STATE lines are disregarded by live stock producers who are starting commission houses at terminal markets under the direction of the National Live Stock Producers' association. Any live stock producer, feeder, or breeder or his marketing agency, the live stock shipping association, is eligible to membership in the farmer owned commission firms, regardless of what organization he may belong to.

Beginning with the understanding that all who produce hogs, cattle, and sheep for the market have problems in common, no matter where they live or to what group they belong, live stock men have sufficient evidence already that marketing can be done successfully through their own terminal sales agencies.

Meets Sweeping Success.

Fifty carloads of live stock including the animals hauled in trucks, were received by the associtaion at the Indianapolis yards during the first week. Farmers were so eager about the project that they sent forty carloads to the association during the week before it opened, May 15.

Veterans at the Indianapolis yards and the National Stockyards at East St. Louis, where the coöperators are already handling live stock, are astonished at the sweeping success. Several old line commission firms offered to sell out to the Indianapolis association before it had been in business a week.

Seven carloads were handled on the opening day, topping the market on a carload of heifers, and also on hogs in the carload and truck divisions, attesting the ability of the sales force and the high quality of live stock consigned. D. L. Swanson, formerly with the bureau of markets at Chicago, is manager at Indianapolis. One-tenth of the total receipts of live stock on Indiana's central market was handled under his management on the second day.

Farmers are well pleased with results, and say they are going to support it by shipping their live stock to the company and by pointing out the advantages of the system to their neighbors.

140 Carloads a Week.

The Producers Live Stock Commission association, opened at East St. Louis by the National Live Stock Producers' association the first of this year, continues to climb, with its record jumping from 44 cars the first week to the point where it is handling as much as 140 or more carloads a week. Farmers in various states around East St. Louis send in live stock by rail, boat, and truck, and some drive in from all directions.

Commission charges are being cut almost in half. The coöperators charge the same commission as the old line companies, but at East St. Louis the farmers' firm has enough surplus accumulated from regular commission charges to pro rate 30 to 35 per cent back to the farmers in addition to one-twelfth reserved each month for a promotion fund.

The big feature of the terminal sales agencies is not so much in the saving of commissions as in providing an even flow of live stock to market, preventing gluts.

More in Prospect.

Coöperative firms, like those at Indianapolis and East St. Louis, will be opened by July 1 at Chicago and Peoria. C. R. Doty, formerly with an old line company in Chicago and at one time with the bureau of markets, will manage the association at the Union stockyards. C. E. Smith of Cunningham & Smith, an old line commission house at East St. Louis, will manage the Peoria association.

John G. Brown, president of the national association, spent most of last week with live stock men at Oklahoma City, where another producers' association will be opened soon. Negotiations are also on for agencies at Buffalo, Detroit, and Sioux Falls, S. D.

The national association was organized by the American Farm Bureau federation, and is strongly supported by county, state, and national bureau officials and members.

Companies owned and controlled by farmers at other central markets will probably affiliate with the national association within the next few months.

POULTRY TIPS

Layers need egg building material in summer as well as in winter. Dry mash is an egg producer. Feeders kept full of dry mash will help to heap egg baskets in the summer. Here's a good dry mash that every poultry keeper can mix: One hundred pounds each of ground corn and bran; ground oats, 200 pounds, and 75 pounds of tankage.

Coöperative poultry associations that are now being started in various parts of Illinois are making it possible for farm flock owners to get exactly what their eggs are worth. The eggs are graded and the producer is paid on the basis of the grade he delivers to the local associations.

These seven rules suggested by the Missouri college of agriculture will help flock owners to increase the profits of their layers in summer: Produce infertile eggs by removing the rooster from the flock in the summer time. Provide clean nests, and keep eggs clean. Do not wash eggs. Gather eggs twice daily during the summer to prevent them from being heated by the hen. Keep them in cool place away from the flies. Market them at least twice each week. Insist that they be bought on a quality, grade basis.

Shipping crates make convenient coops for breaking up broody hens. Turn the crate upside down or hang it high on the wall of the poultry house. Force the hen to sit on the slats. Remove her from the nest as soon as she shows signs of being broody—a few days' shifting around on slats is enough for the average

One of the most common mistakes made by poultrymen in handling broody hens is to punish them by refusing to give feed or water. Feeding and watering liberally while they are in the broody coops will keep them in condition and they will be broken of their broodiness just as soon.

GRADING AND PREPARING WOOL FOR MARKET.—Wool sorters are shown in the Chicago central warehouse grading wool for Illinois farmers. Wool poolers are now shipping their 1922 clip in to this warehouse, where it will be held and sold direct to mills as it is needed. Through a pooling system wool growers get paid on the basis of grade and eliminate profits of local buyer, big dealer, and possibly speculator that handle wool between farm and woolen mills.

Committee of Nine Ready to Present Plan to Dairymen

PLANS for handling the big problems of dairy marketing in the Chicago district, worked out by the dairymen's committee of nine, have been approved by the state farm bureaus in Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin and the Chicago Milk Producers' Coöperative Marketing company. The committee will go out among the dairymen to explain the new milk marketing system and sign them up under a new contract.

AARON SAPIRO.

Aaron Sapiro, attorney for many farmer owned selling concerns in various parts of the country, calls this the best milk marketing contract he has ever studied. He has had years of experience in organizing marketing companies on the Pacific coast and in the cotton and tobacco producing sections of the south, and will come to Chicago early in June to help complete plans. He will speak at meetings in Elgin and Belvidere, Ill., and Elkhorn, Wis., on June 7, 8, and 9 respectively.

E. B. Heaton, director of the dairy marketing department of the American Farm Bureau federation, appointed the committee of nine, and the federal bureau will take an active part in reorganizing dairymen in sections of the three states—Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin—that produce milk for Chicago.

GARDEN NOTES

Late potatoes and winter cabbage seed should be planted within the next week or ten days.

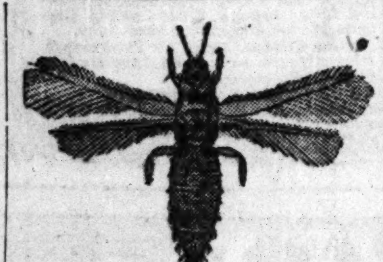
Watch the currant and gooseberry bushes for the larvæ of the saw fly, commonly called the currant worm. The bushes can be safely sprayed with an ounce and a half of lead arsenate in a gallon of water when the foliage is dry. This spray is poisonous and should not be used after the fruit begins to ripen. Use white hellebore, as it's nonpoisonous and safe.

Pioneer gardeners never felt their gardens were complete unless they had a few horseradish plants. It is easily started from cuttings if you take them about the size of a lead pencil from old roots, cover lightly, and cultivate.

Vegetables that are produced in fertilized soils are of a better quality and mature earlier than those grown on untreated plots.

The practice of delaying the planting of popcorn until all other seeding is done is a mistake. As it requires a long season to mature properly, popcorn should be planted as early as possible.

Chinese or Pe Tsia and savoy cabbage are both new to the average gardener, but they have been grown enough in Chicago to prove they are worth while. The Chinese grows upright like celery and is becoming a favorite in crowded gardens. The savoy has an excellent flavor and is an unusually good summer variety, although it does not keep well.



ONION GROWERS' ENEMY—

The onion thrips, or louse, shown above, is microscopic in size but big enough to wipe out whole fields of vegetables. Entomologists are after him.

Use Nicotine Sulphate in June for Onion Pests

Every gardener is interested in the destructive work of the onion thrips, that tiny creature truckers call the onion louse. Tests made at the Iowa station during the last three years have centered the attention of onion and truck growers on the possible means of controlling the pest.

Onions may be its favorite vegetable but the louse, being a general feeder, takes an occasional meal from cauliflower, cucumbers, and other vine crops, parsley, tomatoes, beets, and turnips, and is therefore the enemy of every garden.

For several years nicotine sulphate has been recommended as being the best remedy for thrips. Tests made in Iowa by entomologists show that the nicotine sulphate spray will not keep the beetles in check where the infestation is heavy. It was found, however, that where the grower starts in time, and there are only a few insects on the plants effective work can be done. Spraying must be done while the plants are small, using nicotine sulphate and soap. If the spraying is to be effective it must be done the latter part of June or the first of July, entomolygists say.

If neglected the thrips cause an injury to the onions that is known as white blast or silver top. The onions may have thick necks and entire fields are ruined by this pest.

Dairymen's Jottings

If people in the United States would start drinking milk as liberally as they do in Sweden dairymen in the Chicago territory would have little trouble in getting rid of their surplus. It is said that in Sweden an average of seventy gallons of milk is used by each person, while in this country the consumption is down to forty-four gallons a year.

Many wraps on the side of the face from the switch of a cow's tail and the battering of milk pails from kicking cows can be prevented by spraying with cheap home made mixtures. This spray, recommended by Iowa station dairymen, will shoo more flies away than a million switches of the cow's tail: Four and a half quarts each of coal tar dip and fish oil, three-quarters each of coal oil and whale oil, and one and a half quarts of oil of tar; then dissolve three pounds of laundry soap, add it to the mixture, and pour in enough water to make thirty gallons. This will be enough to spray forty cows for ten days.

"There is about as much danger of getting too much milk in the diet as there is in breathing too much air," say food specialists at the Colorado Agricultural college.

Dr. E. V. McCollums says that milk and the leaves of plants are to be regarded as protective foods, and should never be omitted from the diet.

Wool Growers Hopeful About Rising Market

THE sheep shearer's clippers hum a new tune to the wool growers this spring since the optimistic reports on marketing. On every sheep farm in the middle west shearing machines have been buzzing recently and fleeces are being tied and sacked by the thousands. Farmers need money and, except in communities where pools have been established, buyers are collecting the 1922 clip in local storehouses for big dealers to grade and deal out as the demand calls.

The tone of the wool market is improving, and advocates of the pooling idea believe farmers can well afford to store their wool in a central warehouse. Hundreds of sheepmen are throwing their fleeces into a pool this spring. Though the clipping season has only begun, approximately 3,000 sacks and 1,000 pounds of twine have been sent to wool poolers in this state by the Illinois Agricultural association.

Crop Small This Year.

While many farmers will be forced to sell their wool early this season in order to finance operations this summer, the majority will probably pool and wait for better prices. The market is influenced, this season, by several factors. The Illinois wool clip is expected to be much below normal, and is roughly estimated around 1,500,000 pounds.

The 1922 clip for the entire country is expected to be low, estimated around 250,000,000 pounds. The normal yearly consumption in the United States is around 600,000,000. The first of the year there were 350,000,000 pounds of wool in storage. This amount plus the year's estimated crop equals the normal consumption. According to L. L. Corrie of the state farm bureau's marketing department, the supply left over at the end of the year will probably represent the amount of wool imported. The present emergency tariff, he thinks, is high enough that American wool growers will be able to compete with imported wool and can afford to pool this spring's clip. The foreign wool market is still strong and active, which is regarded as a hopeful sign.

Quality Governs Prices.

Most Illinois wool falls in the medium grades, quoted from 28 to 39 cents a pound. The fine staple has been around 45 and 46 cents, while one-half blood has been quoted at 43 to 45 cents. The highest price paid by local buyers, according to the farm bureau, was on a lot of one-quarter and three-eighths blood wool selling at 32 and 33 cents a pound.

"Farmers may be sure that the local buyer is making offers with the expectation of profit," said Mr. Corrie. "We may expect him to keep his margin of profit as narrow as possible this year in order to strike a blow at wool pooling and coöperative marketing in general, which, the wool trade and other commercial interests say, have caused unfair prejudice against the middleman."

Advantage of Pooling.

Farmers believe that by pooling they will be able to sell on a rising market this year, that demand and supply will justify good prices. Last year, sheep in Illinois fell from 600,000 to 400,000, roughly estimated, because nearly 20 per cent of the farmers sacrificed their breeding stock early in 1921, and there was only about half of the usual purchases of feeding stock made until late in the year. It is believed, however, that there are more sheep of shearing age in Illinois this year.

Through the pool the farmers believe they get exactly what their wool is worth. It is gathered by the county agent at local stations or shipped direct by the grower to a central warehouse in Chicago where it is graded and sold direct to the mills. The farmer is paid according to the grade he sends. This eliminates the local buyer, the big dealer, and possibly a speculator, whose charges and profits all come out of the farmer's pocket.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

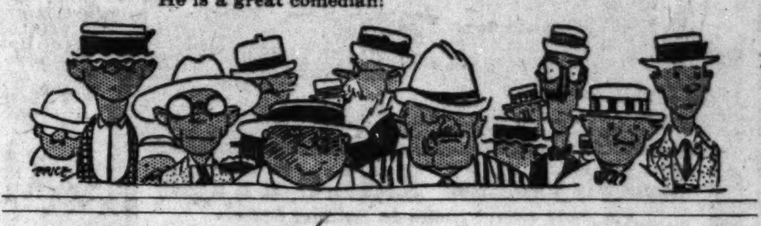
THE FUDDY-DUDDY STRAW CAUBEENS.

Now comes the season of the year
When roguishly the man may lean
A straw caubeen of lightsome cheer
Upon his aestivating bean—
A straw chapeau of airy grace
To keep the sunshine off his face.

And O the weights and shapes and hues!
And O the sizes! O the weaves!
For which the mammal can enthuse . . .
The very thought this bosom grieves,
Much less the sight, which makes me blench!
Bon nuit! (Which is good night in French.)

And yet I've heard it said by these
While tying of their loud cravats:
"A sweller band for this one, please—
Don't women wear the funny hats!"
And out they go, a fearful crowd,
And women do not laugh out loud!

Who weaves the silly hats of straw,
The funny bands and all the rest?
Who builds the lids that look so blah?
Whose is this brave, ironic jest?
Who makes the comic hats for men?
He is a great comedian!



Corn Planting Late.

Crop reports during the last few days show that farmers in Illinois have about half of their corn planted. They are late, but the corn is germinating well and the stand is good.

Heavy crops of strawberries and small fruits are on the way. Cherry picking has already started in the extreme end of the state.

The average corn acreage has been planted in Iowa this spring, crop specialists say.

ALASKA'S WHITE POPULATION DWINDLES

By T. B. Drayton

SEWARD, Alaska.—[Special Correspondence.] — "What kind of people have you got up there?" is one of the invariable questions addressed to Alaskans when they go visiting in the States. And, of course, the invariable answer is, "The best people in the world," precisely as anybody from anywhere in the States would respond if asked concerning the people of his own particular section.

To dispense with hyperbole and speak of Alaskans as they actually are, it may be said they are chiefly transplanted Americans and Scandinavians, and in no way different from their fathers except as the peculiar Alaskan environment has modified their habits and character in minor details.

Mostly they are of the adventurous type, or they would not be in a country like Alaska.

The few who became wealthy long ago returned to their original homes, or sought new homes in more agreeable latitudes; so it may be said we have no rich people in Alaska. Our most pretentious homes would correspond fairly, with regard to size and appointments, with the frame cottages of the average bookkeeper or skilled mechanic in the sizable towns of the middle west. The majority of our inhabitants, both in the settlements and out, live in log or frame shacks void of rugs, paint, sanitary equipment, or other conveniences regarded as indispensable in all but pioneer communities.

Cold No Inducer of "Pep."

The common belief that cold climates quicken the blood and add to man's activity most assuredly does not hold true in the excessively cold countries of Alaska and Siberia. Here the climate induces a kind of lassitude similar to that observed in excessively hot districts under the equator. The newcomer is active enough the first and second winters, but by the third he begins to take things more easily and by the fourth or fifth season he has acquired the mañana habit of the Spanish speaking Americas.

At the risk of scandalizing the American housewife the guess will be ventured that the breakfast dishes have not yet been washed nor the beds made in one-fourth of the homes in Alaska—and it is now midafternoon. But, then, the vast majority of Alaskan housekeepers are of the masculine persuasion.

Children born in Alaska are far more rugged as a rule than those born in the States; and for some reason possibly having to do with that fact Alaska born school children soon outdistance other children in the competition of the classroom. This remains true after they are transferred to schools in the States as well as when they are at home.

Illness All but Unknown.

Epidemics are uncommon except among the native tribes, and other illnesses are all but unknown. When a seasoned Alaskan gets sick it means, ten to one, he has reached the end of his row and the funeral arrangements might as well begin. Naturally we have comparatively few doctors in Alaska, and most of these carry real estate, fire insurance, or some other side line.

The present white population of Alaska probably comes under rather than over 20,000. The census of 1920 gives a few thousands more, but that included a considerable number of government railroad workers, since gone out, and a good many large fishing crews since withdrawn by the companies employing them. Besides there [illegible] long been a gradual decrease of population by voluntary abandonment of Alaska. At present we have far less white than one-half the "permanent" population we had fifteen years ago.

Of social life there is none in Alaska entitled to that name. An occasional public dance—"Gents, $1; ladies free"—and an occasional picnic in the summer exhausts [illegible] list of social activities. Even private dinners are uncommon in most communities. Most of the larger settlements have movie theaters and every town of a few hundred inhabitants has its church or churches. These are largely supported by missionary societies in the states; but, unfortunately, it requires the inducement of a most unusual occasion to fill a quarter of the seats in even the most popular of them. In the community where this is written there are 700 persons, but the leading and only active church has only two members—the pastor and his wife.

Silk Hats Unknown.

"The dress of the people is what might be expected in any pioneer country, where the pick, ax, and shovel are the tools in most common use, and naturally the looks and features of the people also indicate generally the nature of their occupation.

We have many college bred men, some from families of excellent blood, but in a few years they look like everybody else, and their difference from the common herd is not suspected by strangers until they speak, or some special incident or occasion brings out the different mettle. In the larger towns the tradesmen and professional classes mostly affect white collars, but the use of a silk hat or evening clothes is unknown among any class of Alaskans. A good many of the women attempt to follow up the prevailing styles as illustrated in the fashion books, and no doubt one competent to judge of such matters would call their efforts both ingenious and creditable.

It is unlikely that any other people on earth are better read than the Alaskans as a whole. And they read everything. The percentage of serious books and high class periodicals sold in any Alaskan community is amazingly large. The rare book agent or magazine solicitor who appears invariably makes a cleanup such as would be undreamed of under any other conditions.

"Squaw Man" Now Rare.

In former times a good many Alaskans became "squaw men," but since the advent of white women such unions have become exceedingly rare. The divorce evil in Alaska has kept pace with its growth outside, but here it never carried the odium once associated with divorce in the states. Indeed, the past history of individuals has little influence in fixing social status in Alaska.

A few years ago Alaskans were perhaps the most liberal people on earth and certainly as generous as any. Business depression has seriously affected them, poverty has spread over the territory, and the dollar has naturally grown to have an enhanced value. We have not yet reached the point where we are actually "cheap," but we have reached the point where a prosperous gambler or bootlegger is often a bigger figure socially than a poor school teacher or minister of the gospel.

Just a little while ago any Alaskan would dig into his pocket for $10 or $20 to relieve a case of distress, and be as indifferent to its advertisement in the community as one of those hard boiled continental noblemen would be indifferent to the approval or disapproval of the common herd of a benefaction by himself. Today when an Alaskan gives up he wants his act to be seen of men, and if it is not he doesn't give up. It is a study in the results of poverty.

Alaska is distressingly poor, and her poverty all comes directly from the system of bureaucratic administration which has prostrated industry and business throughout the territory.

Indians Total 30,000.

In addition to the white population in Alaska there are about 30,000 natives, divided into four distinct racial groups. The most intelligent are the Thlinkets, or Totem Pole Indians, found in the narrow coastal strip known as the Alaskan panhandle. Many of them have adopted the forms of civilized life and are accorded all the civil rights of citizenship. The inhabitants of the Aleutian islands, or Aleuts, are a mongrel mixture of Asiatic extraction. Formerly the two branches were quite warlike, but the Russian traders decimated their ranks, transferred them to new localities, and broke their spirit. Their old customs, religion, and even their languages are extinct. They live by fishing, like most other coastal peoples, and if not an asset to Alaska they are at least no serious liability.

The Eskimos, of whom there are a dozen separate tribes with different dialects, are scattered along the northwestern and northern coast line. They are harmless and little disposed to progress, but the development of the reindeer industry may elevate them in time to the rank of useful citizenship. The interior native is an Athabascan, or North American Indian. His habitat reaches the coast only in the neighborhood of Cook inlet. In all essentials he is a duplicate of his racial brothers in the states, but somewhat superior to a Digger Indian and somewhat inferior to a Sioux or Comanche. Such, briefly, is the population of Alaska as it is today. Tomorrow it is certain to be less and likely to be different.

Today's the Day!

Come to dinner in our attractive Della Robia restaurant.

The chef promises that the menu will be especially attractive—Order the regular $1.25 dinner and the a la carte dishes.

After dinner, if you dine at midday or before it; if you dine in the evening, inspect the apartments. Not only is the Roger's Park an ideal summer and fall living place, with the lake only a block away, but it is an exceptionally attractive home for all the year.

The furnishings are unusual. The little conveniences have been thought of. Wardrobes and closets are adequate. Service is dependable.

Those who live here came only after inspecting other apartment hotels. They know how we have fulfilled their expectations, and more than fulfilled our promises.

May I expect you this afternoon?

HOMESEEKERS, INVESTORS, BUILDERS.

I have subdivided the finest and most desirably located tract in the heart of the most exclusive residential section of beautiful and will immediately offer to those who are looking for a choice restricted home site or investment, big 30 foot lots with water, sewer and cement walks in and paid for at the unusually low price of $600, and will sell on very easy terms to responsible parties. There is no other property in Berwyn for sale at anywhere near these prices, and nearby property is now being offered at over twice my prices. Each lot has a reasonable building line and building restriction where you are absolutely protected in the future against any undesirable element.

To those who are not familiar with Berwyn let me say that it is a completed and restricted community of artistic homes and fine improvements, about the same distance west from the loop that Rogers Park is north, and is in the direct path of the city's greatest growth. It is reached by 60 trains daily on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, only 20 minutes from the loop, and a monthly commutation fare of 8¾c.

In convenience, beauty, healthfulness and everything that makes a home location attractive this property presents a combination of city and country advantages that cannot be surpassed.

To those who are interested in building I have a building and financing plan that is unsurpassed, and can afford to build at an extremely small profit.

You could not want a better, more attractive, more convenient location for a real home, and by buying direct from the owner you could hardly find a more desirable investment.

The time to buy at the best advantage is now. Write today for map and full particulars. Address Y O 77, Tribune.

MONEY BACK Guarantee

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED

WE WILL REFUND YOUR MONEY IF YOU ARE NOT SATISFIED WITH YOUR REBUILT COLE AERO EIGHT.

This is the strongest indorsement ever given any motor car (either new or used), and we doubt if ever advertised before.

TWO THINGS MAKE THIS POSSIBLE.

(1) The Price is Right.

Nowhere can you buy an equal in value represented.

(2) The Cars Are Right.

These cars are rebuilt by experts—not helpers—and all reciprocating parts are installed new and are the same as used in our present new cars. We are sold out of finished cars with the exception of two or three, but have five that will be finished this week.

Come in and test these with us and assure yourself that they perform like new and that they are as good as new.

Order the color you want it painted and the make tires you want and if not satisfied allow us to return your money.

All work of rebuilding and painting is done in our own shops in our own 4 story building under the supervision of factory experts, with the most modern and complete equipment. Every car when completed is given a very rigid road test of 125 miles with more care than most new cars, despite the fact that defects in motor units are impossible, as the car has been used at least a year with every possible opportunity to develop.

Prices range from

for open models.

You can buy these same cars for from

$750—$1,000—$1,250

before they are rebuilt and in good running shape, and in addition we have in stock many other makes at bargain prices, such as Oldsmobile, Reo, Buick, Paige, Jordan, Hudson, Overland, Lexington, Marmon and Cadillac.

Bird-Sykes

2215 Michigan-av.
Paige Distributors.

WHEN "BIRD-SYKES" SAY "REBUILT"

they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motor, transmission, and rear axle, measuring or testing parts to determine wear, replacing worn parts with new, rebuilding, adjusting, tuning up, repairing body, refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt car satisfies the eyes as a new car, and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every "Rebuilt" Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented and in A1 mechanical condition. If anything turns up unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes Co. will make good without cost to purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage.

We do not ask our customers to pay exorbitant rates charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy of us on deferred payments. You can buy a "Bird-Sykes Rebuilt" car on easy terms, paying only ordinary bank interest rates on deferred payments.

The coach and mechanical condition are all that can be desired and the value is truly remarkable at $750.

CADILLAC LIMOUSINE, TYPE 53. This car is equipped with a special custom-built body. Has always been exceptionally well cared for by a competent chauffeur, and comes into our hands in considerably above the average condition. This is a large, roomy 7 passenger Limousine and is an exceptional value at $1,000.

STUTZ SPORT 4 PASS., MODEL "S." This has the 16-valve type motor. We have made all necessary mechanical repairs to this car and it is ready to put into immediate service. It is well painted in a light shade of Green and equipped with practically new Cord tires. This snappy 4 passenger car can be purchased at the extremely low price of $1,000.

CADILLAC TOWN CAR CABRIOLET. This is a special custom-built body mounted on the famous "Type 55" chassis. It makes a very smart shopping car of 4 passenger capacity, and is something that cannot be duplicated under $5,000-$6,000. We have thoroughly overhauled the chassis, repainted the entire car in rich wine, and are offering it at the very special price of $1,750.

STEVENS-DURYEA TOURING. This is a modern, up to date car in every respect. Very similar in lines to the present series. It has been kept up in very good mechanical condition and is exceptionally well equipped throughout, and offers an unexcelled value at our price of $500.

A BEAUTIFUL CAR!

The Cole 8 Sport Touring, with its powerful, extremely quiet running motor and smart lines, is growing rapidly in popularity and is much favored by those who want a car for other than just boulevard travel.

In its coloring, the one we are offering is suggestive of the spring season and presents the appearance of new. The wheels, chassis, and beveled edged aluminum body are finished in verdure green, with top boot and luxurious Spanish leather upholstery to match. The radiator, hub caps, special designed headlights are in aluminum silver. "Le tout ensemble" is quite pleasing.

The equipment consists of front and rear Biflex bumpers, De Luxe motometer, Truault-Hartford shock absorbers, and an excellent set of cord tires, with one spare.

Mechanically this car is perfect and carries with it a H. & R. standard new car warranty and 90 days of unsurpassed "Rite-Away" service.

Here is a real value in a high grade car at a very reasonable figure.

TOURING LIMOUSINE.

This beautiful 7 passenger sedan limousine has been run less than 10,500 miles and can scarcely be told from a new car. Costing originally $8,400, this car is one of the late 1921 models, and having been in the hands of a competent chauffeur it is in excellent mechanical condition. The paint is like new and there are two extra tires that have not been used. As the owner will be out of the city for some months this car can be bought at a very reasonable figure for cash. No traders and no dealers will be considered. For further particulars phone Hyde Park 8815.

DANIELS VICTORIA,
$3,250

For the man or woman who really likes the ultra in a motor—this car will give expression to his or her desire.

The body and fenders are finished in Burgundy red, the chassis in Mercedes red.

The Victoria top is solid leather, custom made, and is fully equipped with an all over rain or sun protector. The windshield in the tonneau is of the disappearing type. Extra tires—2—are carried on the front running board.

The lighting equipment is extremely unique, lights, of course, at the tonneau door. Nickel barrel headlights of latest design, and in addition a pair of exquisite carriage type sidelights located twixt tonneau and driver's seat—cigar lighter, of course.

This car has been driven 5,100 miles and can be seen today or tonight.

OGREN
1922 SPORT SEDAN
4 Doors—4 Passenger.
BRAND NEW.

For years Ogren of Milwaukee has been recognized as one of the finest builders of custom made high grade automobiles of exclusive style.

There are a number of Ogren cars in Chicago, as well as other metropolitan centers. Its increasing popularity here is evidence by the number of new Ogren models that are seen on our boulevards this season and driven by "smart" people.

The one we are offering has just been received from the factory and is the last word in a luxurious 4 passenger 4 door sedan, is smart appearing and in excellent taste.

It is difficult to paint a word picture that will do justice to this superb custom built car, and we urge you to come down [today if possible] and see it for your own satisfaction, especially if you are interesting in owning an inclosed car that is of finest quality and "different."

The blending of rich color with superb lines and luxurious appointments shows the studied effort of an artist. The exterior is finished in two-tone brown. The individual fenders and upper half of the body are in dark chocolate brown and the lower half and Disteel wheels in lighter brown. The radiator, bumpers, massive custom built lamps, trunk rack, hub centers, De Luxe motometer, large aluminum military steps, and Disteel wheel bands are in aluminum silver. The interior upholstery is hand tailored imported silken deep brown broadcloth, with fine stripes of light red. The silk curtains and round Turkish style pillows are also in brown. The interior fittings are in sterling silver of the Louis XIII. design. The cabinet work is in brown mahogany. Just in front of the rear seat, within easy reach, are two collapsible compartments, one containing milady's vanity case and the other a gentlemen's smoking set with electric cigar lighter. All windows, which are of heavy French plate glass, are raised or lowered with automatic levers. Equipment consists of 2 frosted reading and 1 dome light set in silver, Tiffany flower vase, Perfection heater, 8 day clock, Alemite system, new style Hartford shock absorbers, cowl ventilator, sun and storm shield, 6 Disteel wheels with 6 Firestone nonskid cord tires, 2 hand sewed brown patent leather tire covers, Klaxon horn, guard rails on built in outside rear luggage compartment, etc. The equipment is very complete and the appointments the finest.

The quiet running 6 cylinder motor is equipped with imported Bosch high tension magneto, starting, lighting and generator system, and Rayfield carburetor.

This Car de Luxe occupies the center of our show window and is offered for immediate delivery. Price on application. We are also showing a new Ogren Sport Touring which is in a class by itself in an open car. Other models 30 days' delivery.

PIERCE-ARROW
6-38 SPORT,
$2,850

SUPERB VALUE!

This is the most remarkable value we have ever had to offer in a Pierce-Arrow automobile.

Mechanically it is absolutely perfect and from an appearance standpoint cannot be distinguished from new. It is the last word in a smart appearing sport car of the highest grade. Not only will you be able to feel that pardonable pride of ownership that comes with a Pierce-Arrow but you will have an automobile that will give you years of perfect service and never wear out.

The former owner of this car less than two months ago spent over $1,000 on it for a set of 5 new cord tires, new hand tailored Burbank cloth top, top boot and seat covers, repainting, and for mechanical work by the Pierce-Arrow Company.

While distinctive there is nothing cheap or flashy about the appearance of this beautiful car. The fenders and cast aluminum body are finished in olive green and the wheels are maroon. The seat covers are neutral shade of gray, and the lamps, radiator, and other metal parts are gold plated.

This car is a wonderful value and is so perfect in every detail that we will furnish with it a standard new car guarantee and 90 days of H. & R. unsurpassed "rite away" service.

If you are one who appreciates the best in automobiles this is the car you have been waiting for. We urge you to come down today to see it. At the figure we are offering this fine car you may be disappointed if you delay.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

A GOOD TIME TO START IN A BUSINESS OF YOUR OWN

A great merchant recently said:

"I started selling in the worst business years ever known in this country, and I made money even then.

"I selected a business that has handled necessities rather than luxuries—

"Necessities that could be sold cheaply; because that sort of merchandise sells in fair weather or foul. Hard times don't hurt it much."

While other businesses were losing ground in 1921, Variety Stores made money—many of them showing gains over the previous year.

They can sell more for a nickel or a dime than can the general store, because of their economy of operation and quick turnover.

In such a business, however, the matter of location is important.

We know of many excellent locations in different parts of the country where Variety Stores can be started on a reasonably small capital and operated successfully from the very start.

Being the originators of the Variety business, we have helped thousands of men and women to a successful start in selling variety goods at retail.

And in helping others we have gained a vast fund of information which we are glad to pass on to those who wish to enter this great and fertile field.

If you have $1,500 to $5,000 and the ambition to establish a successful business of your own we shall be glad to outline our complete plan whereby we help you attain this ambition.

A visit to our nearest house or an inquiry by letter, telling about yourself, will be treated in strict confidence and will place you under no obligation whatever.

SMASH RECORDS WITH ROOSEVELT THEATER LEASE

$260,000 Yearly, 50-50 Profits to Aschers.

BY AL CHASE.

NATHAN ASCHER.

Amazement is registered by everyone who hears for the first time the figures in the lease of the Ascher Brothers Roosevelt theater, on State street, to Balaban & Katz, operators of the big Chicago in the next block north. For in some respects it's about the most record breaking and human interest containing lease of its kind in the country.

Theatrical men, both film and otherwise, agree that no playhouse they ever heard of rented for $260,000 a year—and that's understood to be the sum Balaban & Katz agree to pay the Ascher Brothers, in amounts of $5,000 every seven days in advance, beginning on June 12. The lease runs for five years with an option of renewal for another five.

It'll Shock Even Hollywood.

And then (and here's were the Chicago Rialto and Hollywood, too, will give another gasp of astonishment) in addition to this $260,000 yearly, Balaban & Katz have agreed to split fifty-fifty with the Ashers on all their profits.

And speaking of profits, film experts all agree [and agreement by movie folk by the way isn't usual] that the money making powers of the Roosevelt have been tremendously increased by this strategic move of the Aschers.

Here's how a theatrical man, known from coast to coast, explained the deal, and careful investigation bears out his statement: "Of course the public doesn't understand it and the natural assumption is that one firm is getting rid of something it doesn't want. That isn't it at all. It's a case of benefit to both parties. The Roosevelt and the Chicago, operated by rival concerns, have been bidding against each other for first run films. The result has been that each has been paying two, three and even four times more than it would if the other wasn't after the same picture. That often meant several thousand dollars additional weekly expense to one or the other.

Back to Normalcy on Rentals.

"Now that'll be done away with and Balaban & Katz will pay a normal rental for films for each house. Ascher Brothers have made a remarkably good business deal by leasing their Roosevelt, for the $260,000 more than pays all interest and other charges and of course the 50 per cent of profits will be velvet, and those profits, as explained, will be much larger than they ever could make them when competing with the Chicago.

"On the other hand, Balaban & Katz's big Chicago will get the same benefit in being able to show first runs at a lower rental than when it had the Roosevelt bidding against it."

Aschers Are Pioneers.

All in all, it's about the most interesting and spectacular theatrical deal Chicago ever had and the result will be watched with interest. The Aschers are among the pioneer motion picture exhibitors of the country. Chicago has always been their headquarters. They now have twenty-two houses in this city, Peoria, Rockford, Milwaukee and Manitowoc, Wis.

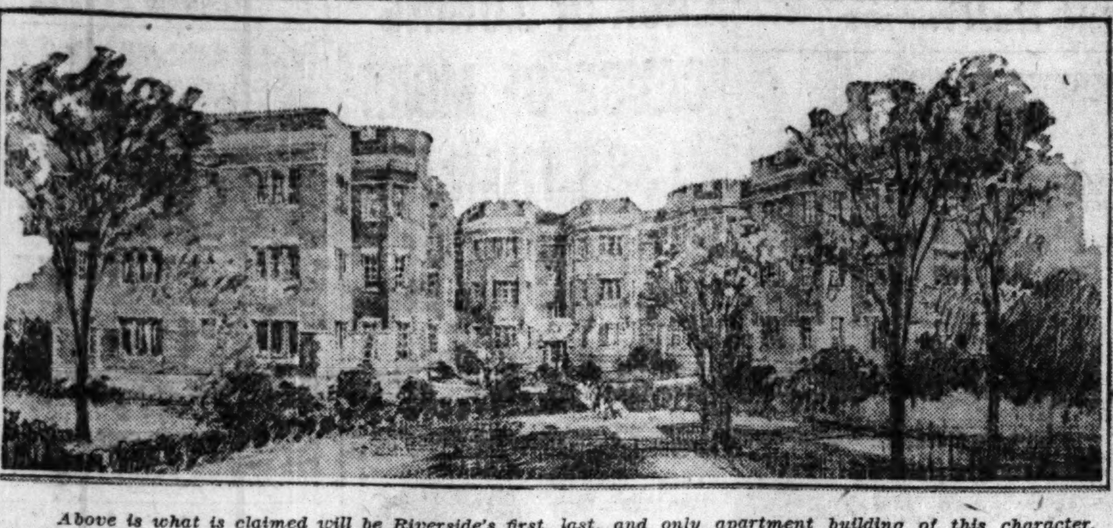
Balaban & Katz have never attempted to have a long list of houses; instead they've centered their energies on building up a small chain of theaters distinctive in beauty and comfort and outstanding in size and magnificence. They have the Central Park on the west side, the Riviera (always pronounced by the Wilson avenue bright light literati as "Riveera") on the north side, and the Tivoli in Woodlawn. The Chicago is their fourth and largest. A. J. Balaban will personally operate their fifth—the Roosevelt.

Fillums to Stay.

Ascher Brothers own the fee under the Roosevelt and their investment in land and building is understood to be around $2,250,000. C. Howard Crane and Kenneth H. Franzheim designed the theater.

Bulletin: Just as we're sending this to the composing room Mr. William Hollander, chief broadcaster of information about B. & K., phones us that the various rumors that the Chicago is to house grand opera, Shubert vaudeville, Dillingham's Hippodrome shows, etc., etc., are all false. The fillums stay, says Bill.

Riverside's First, Last, and Only Flats



Above is what is claimed will be Riverside's first, last, and only apartment building of this character. It was designed by Architect E. E. Roberts for Charles Lindquist, and it was not until work was well under way that Riverside decided to bar flat buildings by zoning the town against them. It is on the east side of Long Common road, two blocks northeast of the Burlington station, and will cost $130,000. More is told in another column.

News of the Architects

RICHARD E. SCHMIDT.

Architects' offices are becoming more and more as they should be—attractive, studiolike quarters, designed with care and with beauty considered along with efficiency. Architects in some ways are probably the most inconsistent folk in the world—albeit just about the pleasantest to have dealings with. They complain that their clients submerge beauty for economy and efficiency in their buildings—and then some of our leading architects have offices as bleak and devoid of decoration as the average realty office.

Most of the architects who have flocked to the Upper Michigan avenue district have remodeled the old residences or built new ones of remarkable beauty. But things are changing in the loop, too. Richard E. Schmidt of Schmidt, Garden & Martin yesterday showed us a novelty in his new suite of offices in the Monroe building. One room is fitted up as an art gallery, velvet drapes, hidden lights, and soft thick carpet. On the walls are some attractive water colored perspectives. When a client is to be shown a drawing of a proposed building it will be hung in the gallery, where he can view it under the proper lighting effects.

H. P. Mosier, who was one of the first Chicago architects to obtain a license to practice his profession in Illinois, getting his in 1897, has returned to Chicago and opened offices at 59 East Adams street where he is back in the architectural field.

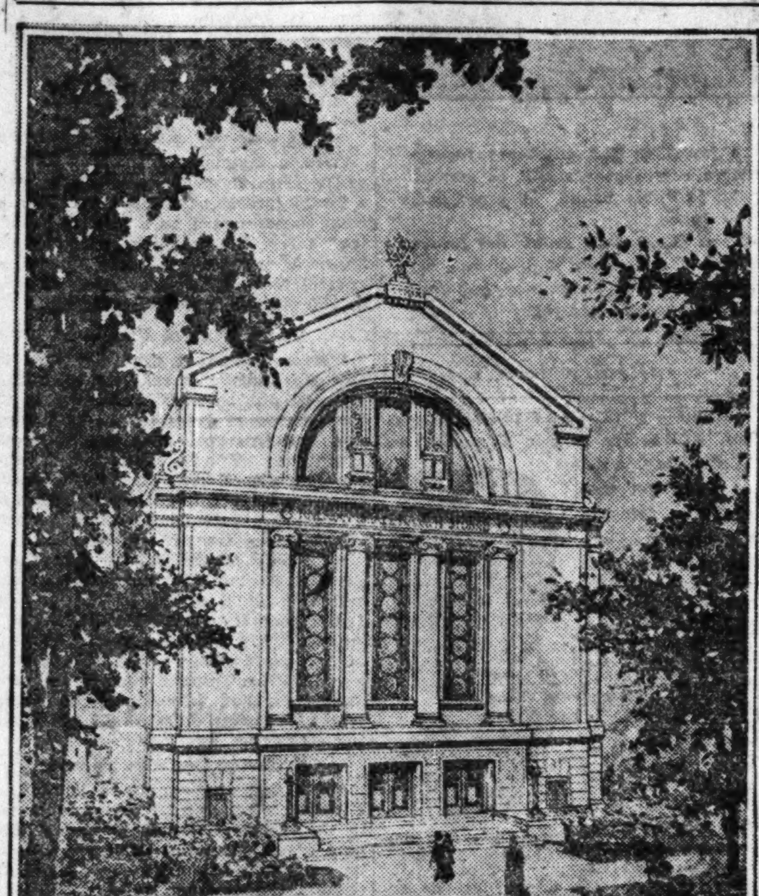
Architect Louis R. Christie has moved his offices to 59 East Adams street, suite 402, in the same quarters with Mr. Mosier. Their telephone is Wabash 2495.

The figure 4 plays a conspicuous part in the numbering of Architect Fred V. Prather's activities. For instance, he is moving into much larger quarters on the fourth floor of the Wrigley building, which is at 400 Upper Michigan avenue, his suite number is 400, and his new telephone is Central 4414.

Albert Anis has moved from the City Hall Square building to the American Bond and Mortgage building, 127 North Dearborn. His new phone is Central 3259.

John E. Youngberg has moved from 30 North Dearborn to 431 South Dearborn street. His new telephone is Harrison 2202.

New West Side Synagogue



Work has just started on a new $250,000 synagogue for the orthodox congregation Knessan Israel Nasach Sforad at 1308-12 Independence boulevard from plans by Architects Levy & Klein. It will seat 2,000 and will be completed in time for the Jewish holidays in September. It will be 70x150 and will contain prayer rooms, a dining room and kitchen, and schoolrooms. A. F. Friedman is chairman of the building committee.

PLAN $250,000 BUILDING FOR HOWARD STREET

Architect David Saul Klafter has designed a building he says will cost $250,000 for Morris J. Landeman to be erected on Howard street, just east of Rogers avenue, fronting ninety feet on both Howard and Rogers with a depth of 150 feet. It will be three stories, semi-fireproof, and on the Howard street front will have five stores, ten offices and twelve apartments; the Rogers avenue front will contain twenty-four flats. It will be in the Spanish type of architecture.

Double Capacity of I. C. Hospital with Big Annex

The big Illinois Central hospital on Stony Island avenue, just north of the Midway, is going to have its patient capacity doubled with the erection of a $375,000 three story addition, work on which has just started. Architects Richard Schmidt, Garden & Martin have drawn plans for a building to front ninety feet on Stony Island, just north of the present structure, and to be 166 feet long. A large two story garage building with quarters for help is to be built.

Woodlawn Shoe Buyers to Be Entertained with Radio

Däemicke Brothers are having plans drawn by Architect Thomas Bishop for a $50,000 two story building, 40x17, to be used entirely by the owners at 1307 East 63d. The main salesroom will be 40x92, with an eighteen foot oval ceiling of ornamental plaster and beams. Radio concerts will be given evenings. On the second floor will be the firm's general offices and stockroom. They also have stores at 1141 and at 1325 East 63d. The new shop will open Sept. 1.

PAUL GERHARDT TO BUILD TWO CICERO HOTELS

Architect Paul Gerhardt will at once erect two hotel buildings on his property on West 22d street, between 54th and 55th avenues, in Cicero, acting both as architect and owner. Both buildings, costing approximately $120,000, will be three stories and each cover the entire lot area, 60x120. There'll be two large stores and a lobby on the ground floor with sixty-five rooms on the upper floors, each with bath. They will be accessible to the employés of the Western Electric and other big industries of the neighborhood. Work will start about June 10 to be ready for occupancy by October.

SUBDIVIDERS BUY TWO FARMS.

Branigar Bros., subdividers, have bought the Fred Day 315 acre farm, adjoining Ontairoville, for a reported $100,000, also the Charles Baker farm of 185 acres adjacent to Meacham, for a reported $50,000. Hipple & Clarke were brokers in both deals.

HONESTY PAYS, LAWYER TELLS REALTY CLASS

Final Y. M. C. A. Talk by E. Sonnenschein.

Below are some excerpts from the last of the series of lectures given under the auspices of the Chicago Real Estate board before the realty class of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce, on Tuesday evening, and which have been published weekly in THE TRIBUNE. Edward Sonnenschein, of Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson, spoke on "Closing Real Estate Transactions."

EDWARD SONNENSCHEIN.

Honesty and fairness are the two most essential factors in the success of both realtor and attorney, according to Edward Sonnenschein of the legal firm of Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson, in his lecture on Tuesday before the realty class of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce. His subject was "Closing Real Estate Transactions."

"Whether as broker or attorney you can only be successful in the long run by being scrupulously honest with your clients," he said, "and absolutely fair to the other parties to the contract. A broker known as indulging in scalping or a lawyer who accepts commissions from brokers in the long run can't succeed.

Works Both Ways.

"Both the broker and the lawyer in closing deals have almost as great a duty to see that their clients don't take advantage unfairly in settlements as they do to see that their clients receive everything they are entitled to.

"In the long run a broker or lawyer who is known to be not only competent but fair to the other side, as well as conscientious in securing whatever is possible as properly coming to his client, will achieve the greatest success."

Mr. Sonnenschein's lecture contained so much that was technical that it's hard to reproduce it. He made a statement of the various forms of closing contracts, for instance; gave a comparison of forms of contract usually used in Chicago; told about proving title to the purchaser; outlined the preparation preliminary to closing a deal; gave the details of the actual closing of a deal, and told how a report is made by attorneys to the client.

Comment by Mark Levy.

Following Mr. Sonnenschein's appeal to the embryo realtors to be honest and fair in all their dealings, which, by the way, was the peroration of both his lecture and the series, Mark Levy, one of Chicago's best known and best liked real estate men, made the following comment to the writer:

"Mr. Sonnenschein is an authority on real estate law and real estate practice, and the firm of Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson is recognized among the real estate buying public, brokers, and lawyers as the dean of the legal profession in real estate operations, and its reputation for honesty and fairness is of the very highest."

Which bears out Mr. Sonnenschein's statement that it pays to be honest.

WEST SIDE FACTORY SOLD.

Christian Hummel and the Central Upholstering company have sold to Charles C. Hansen, head of the Refrigerating Specialties company, the one story factory building at Sacramento and Lexington, for a reported $20,000, through Frederick E. Hummel & Co.

RIVERSIDE LOCKS THE STABLE AFTER THE HORSE IS GONE

To the strictly residential Chicago suburb which is delaying safeguarding itself from the invasion of the ubiquitous apartment building by getting thoroughly zoned, attention is called to Riverside, which is now having its first, last, and only flat building erected.

Riverside, laid out with winding roads and wide parking spaces by one of America's foremost town planners, is a suburb of individual homes. Originally it was a rival to Lake Forest. Later more modest homes were built. It was supposed to be too far out for flats. That, of course, is the ostrich-like attitude of towns ever farther out who stick their heads in the sand and think apartments will never reach them.

At last Riverside began to be alarmed as flats crept nearer and nearer from Chicago. Zoning was talked of, and while the conversation was under way Charles Lindquist had plans drawn for an elaborate eighteen apartment building by Architect E. E. Roberts and work promptly began. It is on Long Common road, two blocks northeast of the station, on the east side of the street, with an unusually large lot, about 250 feet frontage and 350 feet deep. It is of pressed brick on all sides, with no exterior stairways, and will have eighteen garages. The flats are five rooms each. It is set back ninety feet from the sidewalk and will have a court with a fountain. It will be called the Link Manor apartments.

After work on the flats was under way Riverside stopped talking and locked the stable by zoning itself thoroughly. So Link Manor will be the first, last, and only apartment building in Riverside. It's a lesson other unzoned suburbs might ponder over.

Plan Shops at Southwest Corner Sheridan-Foster

Architect Fred V. Prather has drawn plans for remodeling the first floor of the twenty-one apartment building at the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Foster avenue, 100x150, into four large shops. The corner store will have an entrance on Sheridan and several large show windows on Foster. The cost will approximate $50,000. E. M. Coffman of the Coffman Realty company is owner. He bought the site from Edward H. Hughes for $105,000, according to the records.

$23,000 RENT FOR WAFFLE SHOP.

The Virginia Gold Brown Waffle shops will open their third store at 240 South State street, where they have rented a 15x100 space from the Hilton company, through George W. Kauser, for an eight year term at a reported $23,000 annually.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

HOME BUILDING FOR 1922 MAY BREAK RECORDS

Realtors' Survey of City Shows Activity.

PIERCE W. JONES

If the building of one family dwellings and two flat buildings keeps up for the balance of the year at the same speed maintained during the last four months nearly seven thousand buildings of this description will be the record established, according to figures compiled by Pierce W. Jones, executive secretary of the renting division of the Chicago Real Estate board.

Mr. Jones has been managing a city wide survey by the realty board in connection with its "own your home" campaign. The survey covered all single family houses and two apartment buildings in Chicago in which work was begun between Jan. 1, 1922, and May 1, 1922. The figures show a total of 1,473 single family dwellings and 769 two apartment buildings. Of the 1,473 probably 95 per cent are bungalows.

Building Not Scattered

An analysis of Mr. Jones, figures by districts shows the trend of the home builder of modest means is toward certain defined sections and is not scattered over the entire outlying districts. For instance, between Lawrence and Belmont avenues, and from Crawford west to the limits the board's investigators found nearly 250 single family dwellings and sixty-two two flat buildings under construction. Between Belmont and North avenue, west of Crawford, 254 bungalows are being built and 187 two flatters. In the Austin district, from Cicero avenue west, 131 bungalows, and 77 two flatters are building.

There are several south side districts popular with the small home owner. In the Marquette park and Auburn Highlands sections building is active, as it is near Ashland and 79th. The south shore district, from 75th south and east of Stony Island, seventy-five bungalows and seventy-four two flatters are building.

Eighty-one new bungalows and twelve two flats buildings are under way in the section between Stony Island and Cottage Grove, south of 75th.

"An extremely healthy condition is noted from the above figures," said Mr. Jones. "It is evident that several thousand families believing in thrift and saving are getting away from the rent paying habit into homes of their own.

Vacant Flats Increase.

In his report made last week by Mr. Jones on figures compiled by the renting division regarding vacant flats, it was found that on May 18 replies had been received from seventy agents showing 1,055 steam heated apartments ready for occupancy. This, of course, does not represent all of the vacant flats in Chicago for many agents failed to report and many properties are handled by owners. A similar survey made in May, 1921, showed 886 vacant flats reported by 82 agents.

Spectacular Haberdasher Takes a $10,000 Chance

Albert Hoefeld, one of Chicago's most spectacular haberdashers, is having an army of men working twenty-four hours daily at the northeast corner of Clark and Washington on what will be his eighth loop shop. And thereby hangs an interesting bit of realty news.

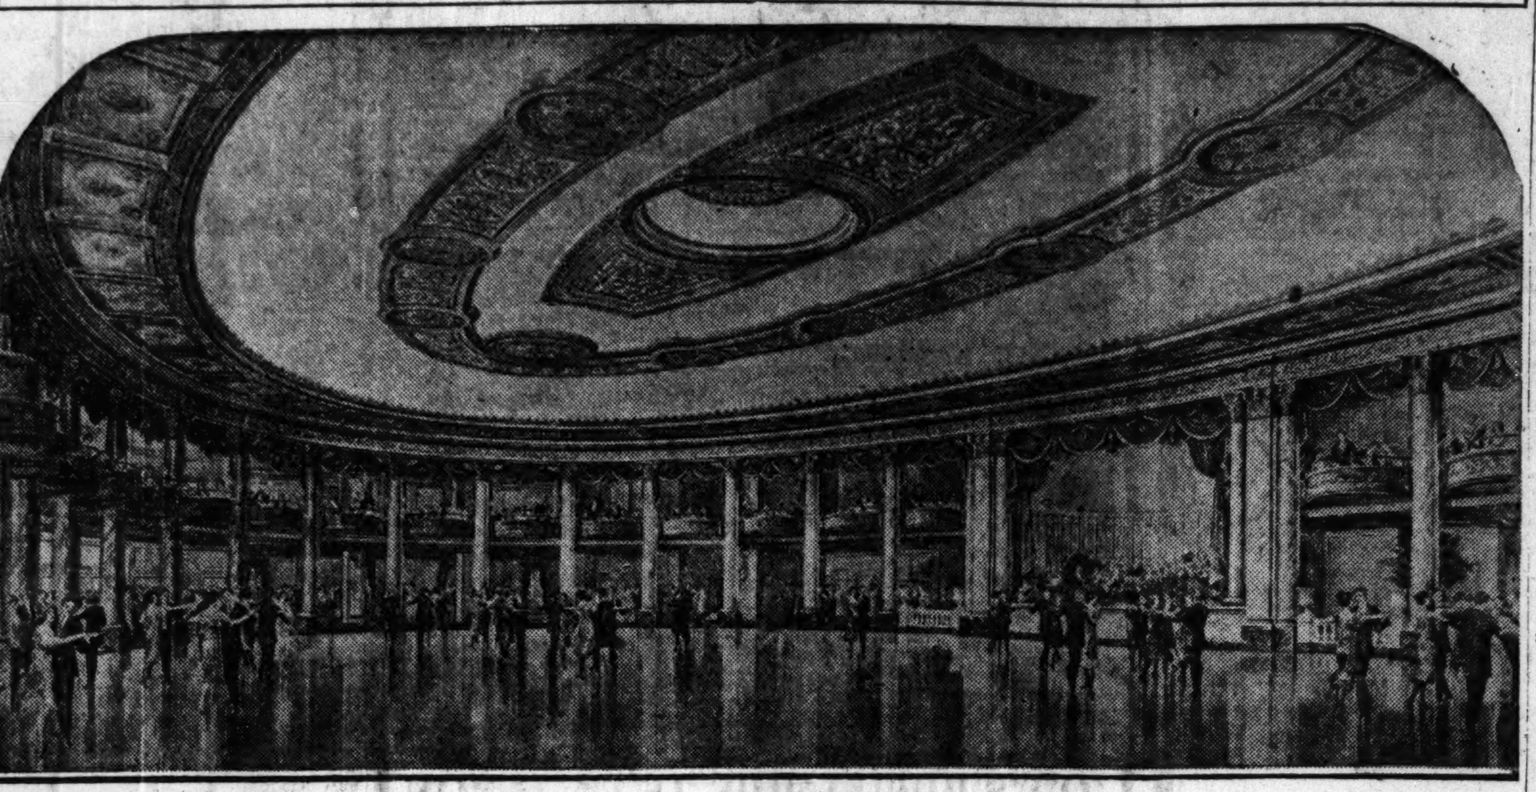
Mr. Hoefeld says he doesn't believe in gambling as a diversion—with one exception. He likes to plunge on sites. And his latest play at the game of chance is spending $10,000 in remodeling the basement, first, and mezzanine floors of the Reaper block corner while there's a sixty day cancellation clause in his lease hanging over him.

His rental is understood to be a little under $32,000 and the lease is said to be the first ever made by the McCormick estates on a percentage basis, which means he'll pay them a share in his profits over a certain sum. Holabird & Roche are designing the alterations. The store is 50x26 and was occupied for many years by E. M. Blaine & Co.

INDEPENDENT PACKING BUYS BLOCK.

The Independent Packing company has paid a reported $105,000 cash for the fee to the block bounded by Halsted, Emerald, 41st, and Stock Yards railway, occupied by it for many years under lease. John S. Cram and others of New York were sellers. William D. Kerfoot & Co. were brokers.

Woodlawn to Have One of the World's Most Beautiful Ballrooms



Here is a view of what is claimed will be one of the most beautiful ballrooms in the world, designed by Architects C. W. and George L. Rapp, and the main feature of the three story building now being erected at the southeast corner of Cottage Grove avenue and 62d street by the Woodlawn Theater company. An exterior view was shown several months ago in this department. The great dancing room will be 125 feet long, surrounded by immense Corinthian columns, with a dome sixty feet from the floor. It will accommodate 3,000 dancers at one time, and additional space for 2,000 more spectators will be found in the adjoining foyers. There'll be a mezzanine promenade, where refreshments will be served, with loges between, giving a view of the ballroom below. A promenade foyer will entirely surround the dancing space.

The original name of the dance hall was the Grande Palais des Danse, but this was considered a little difficult for the average flapper and her goof (thanks to Harold Teen) to either remember or pronounce, and so a prize contest is planned later on. It will be opened next fall.

ONE BACHELOR FOR EVERY FLOOR IN NEW 7 STORY APARTMENT

Hyde Park's newest flat building, the South Shore apartments, to be erected just south of the Hotel Sisson on South Shore drive, is to be built so that, according to the architect, William P. Doerr, every suite will have a view of the lake. This will be accomplished by having it built somewhat in the shape of a bullet, with the narrow part toward the lake.

It will be seven stories and contain forty-two apartments, seven of them being one room bachelor quarters. All except the bachelor rooms will have either kitchenettes or honest to goodness kitchens. The one room apartments will be the only ones rented furnished. Maid service will be supplied.

Mr. Doerr has designed a structure to cost in the neighborhood of $500,000, work on which will start June 1, with the completion date set at Feb. 1.

It will be of concrete construction with exterior walls of red brick and stone trim on all sides. This is following out the example set by several other big Hyde Park hotels and apartments. The Sisson, at the southwest corner of 53d and South Shore drive, not only has used face brick on the sides exposed but is set back fifty feet from the sidewalk on the shore side. The new apartments also will be set back fifty feet. The lot is 222 feet deep with a frontage of sixty feet. The building will be 50x172.

Edwin P. Doerr is president of the South Shore Building corporation, the owner of the new apartments.

LACK OF ZONING CAUSE OF MORE LOSS THAN FIRE

R. W. Wolfe Tells Realty Men of Work Done.

Two pertinent thoughts are usually expressed by people who know what zoning means when that topic is brought up; one comment is regret that we haven't had zoning years ago and the other is satisfaction over what zoning has accomplished in the short time it's been in effect in the several cities progressive enough to get themselves zoned.

Richard W. Wolfe, a member of the Chicago zoning commission and a former president of the Cook County Real Estate board, in a talk on "Zoning" before the realty organization on Tuesday, pointed out some of the regretful features of non-zoning as well as the pleasant results of zoning.

Twice That of Fire Loss.

"It is estimated that the loss in the depreciation of real estate in this country due to want of zoning is almost twice as great as the loss from fire, and this runs into the hundreds of millions. The St. Louis zoning commission states that $2,000,000 would have been saved in the construction of a sewerage system had zoning been in effect before the sewers were laid.

"Thomas Adams, a city zoning expert of England, informs us that the widening of a street in the city of Leeds cost $20,000,000 a mile, while a similar street in a new suburb of that city was laid out at a cost of only $100 a mile. The Chicago plan commission estimates that $250,000,000 has been lost in Chicago because of not looking ahead.

Evanston Leads in Illinois.

"The first city zoning in Illinois is, I believe, Evanston. It was announced in the newspapers the other day that as a result of zoning there is about to be erected in Evanston a $2,500,000 combination theater, hotel, apartment, office, and shop building. Our neighboring town of Oak Park has been progressive enough to have a zoning ordinance and we are advised by its officials that zoning has added 40 per cent or $9,000,000 to its real estate valuation.

"It is so with public improvements; they add to real estate values vastly more than their cost. It has been so with our Michigan boulevard bridge and other recent Chicago improvements.

"Legal questions will arise in any community where zoning is put into effect, but the courts are getting more and more friendly to the idea of city zoning and planning. Edward M. Bassett, chairman of the New York zoning commission, has stated that the courts of New York have almost invariably decided in favor of the rulings of the commission there.

Chicago Faster Than Gotham.

"It took four or five years to complete the work in New York. We hope to do it in less than half that time in Chicago. The work already done here is ahead of the time estimated.

"There is now a general awakening to the great need of zoning. More than forty cities have been zoned, including Washington, St. Louis, Newark, and Milwaukee. More than seventy cities are in the process of zoning, including Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati.

"All of those cities that have been zoned speak highly of the advantage of zoning. It is said of New York that it would no more give up its zoning law than it would do away with its police or fire departments."

MRS. FRED W. KIRK. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

What we consider to be the popular priced map of Chicago, out any exce "Kirk's Map Chicago Suburbs," just been for 1922 in new shape. still in book but only 4½ which means can carry slipped in a pocket or pocket without being bulky. about half size of the edition.

Fred W. K and Mrs. K have been colaborers on this map years. Mr. Kirk is an engineer, merly with the sanitary district. Kirk handles the business and also sets up type and assists in makeup.

The feature that appeals most to is that Mr. and Mrs. Kirk really their map up to the minute. In th new edition every forest preserve is designated; the Ogden avenue exten sion is shown, so is the Grand boule vard extension; new parks are given with their names (and most of the other recent maps don't show any of these) and what is best of all the entire map is accurate, an essential for realtors and real estate editors, as well as the general public. The price is fifty cents and we take pleasure in saying it's well worth it.
